A correspondent writes: The waiters of the Thousand Island Park house are mostly Oswego normal school girls; at Round Island, Rochester university boys predominate in the dining hall; the guests of the Crossman are served by Syracuse, Hamilton, Madison and Union collegians, while the waiters of the Thousand Island house are colored youths, two of them being from Lincoln university.

The wedding of D. H. Decker, Esq., formerly of this village and at present a promising young lawyer of Washington, D.C., to Miss Alla B. Watson of McLean, Tompkins county, N. Y. is announced to take place at the home of the bride's parents on Wednesday next. Miss Watson is a sister of Mrs. D. E. Mason and Mrs. Wm. Osborn of this village. Both the young people have many warm friends here who will extend congratulations in advance.

Louis Bush, a cartman of this village was arrested last Monday on a warrant sworn out by Charles E. Clute of this place. Clute claims that several weeks ago he engaged Bush to deliver a box containing two casks of liquor to Pooler & Wilson's dock for transportation to Syracuse by steamer. He furthermore claims that the box never was delivered, hence the arrest. A trial by jury before Justice Arvin Rice last Monday afternoon resulted in a verdict of no cause for action. A question that is causing considerable speculation now is the whereabouts of the liquor.

The handsomest store front in Fulton, if not in Oswego county, is that of H. B. Collins on Oneida street which is nearly finished. The entire front is in cherry, elegantly carved with elaborate designs, the hand work of Herm Collins, who is an adept in this work. A new corrugated iron ceiling will soon be placed in the store, making it nearly or quite fire proof. The front of the block, recently disfigured by fire, has been rebuilt, and in fact the entire block has been renovated and when entirely finished will be a credit to the builders and an ornament to the village.

H. & A. Rosenbloom will have special bargains in the clothing as well as the dry goods department Friday and Saturday.

In order to make room for our fall [illegible]

[illegible] closed. Then came a [illegible] sion of business. Next, the Rice Manufacturing Co., which has for years proved an important factor in our business interests, removed to Springfield, Ohio. As a village, we certainly seemed to be going backward. Business men felt the depression severely. It was then that a few of our enterprising citizens determined to take some stand against the tide and as a result there was formed the "Howe Ventilating Stove Co.," which we are assured will in a few weeks furnish work for fifty men and if successful we shall hope in a few years to see over two hundred laborers go in and out of its buildings daily. Having carried this scheme through successfully it gave heart to our active men and they pushed with renewed vigor the proposition to gain a good system of water works for Fulton. Last week Thursday the question was put to vote and by a vote of 163 to 106 the taxpayers agreed to pay $1,600 for the use of 32 hydrants for fire purposes for one year. The Water Works Co. will at once commence work to put in the plant and ere long we may reasonably hope to see pure spring water furnished to our village in abundance. The majority in the vote was 57 but it is safe to say that the majority vote represented at least 85 per cent. of the taxable property of Fulton. A good system of water works means a great deal for us if we wish to advance and keep pace with the times. When strangers come here to locate a good business they can no more go away and to concede the fact that they discovered a mole hill. Men who came here before and found splendid water facilities but no water in our village, splendid power for furnishing electric lights, but no such light, oil lamps and gas lights with gas selling at $2.50 per 1000 feet, could not but feel that this was a chilly atmosphere for them, and when they have gone to those who were recommended as our leading men and have proposed to bring here a good business if locally encouraged, and received only head shaking, it has simply added disgust to discouragement. Now that we have made a start in the right direction let us have no more of this. We have the stove works. We have the water works and Messrs Pearman and Campbell have built a new machine shop and foundry. Do not now sleep for another half century but be more active, get more business. If necessary offer great inducements for business men to locate here. There is a splendid opportunity for some one to start a carriage manufactory or to manufacture straw cutters and agricultural implements. What shall it be next? Keep the ball rolling.

The Ætna Life Insurance Co.

The Ætna Life Insurance Company of Hartford issues all forms of life and endowment policies. But the most attractive, comprehensive and desirable plan of insurance is the terminal endowment, introduced by the Ætna. Its attractive features are that it gives all the benefits of whole life insurance and in addition a promise that policies will become payable as endowments—at age eighty. For example: A $10,000 policy at the age of 30 will cost $235.50 per year and in 10 years the premiums will amount to $2,455, and at that time the insured will be entitled to a dividend of $761.50, as in addition will be entitled to a paid up policy of $2,520.00 upon which no more payments are necessary; or if the insured desires he may receive $1591.50 in cash and surrender his policy; or he may after receiving the dividend of $761.50 have his policy continued in force for the full amount of $10,000 for ten years and 172.

A policy for 15 years will give better results. The premium for 15 years will be $3532.50. The dividend at that time to which the insured will be entitled is $1509.90 and in addition a paid up policy of $3,830 upon which no payment will be required; or if the insured prefers after receiving the $1509.90 he can have the policy continued in force for 14 years and 33 days without further payment; or if he prefers he can receive in cash $3,533.50 and surrender his policy. $3,532.50 the amount of premium paid, less $3,029.90, the amount of the cash surrender value, equals $502.60, the net cost of the $10,000 insurance for fifteen years.

The policies are incontestable by their terms and non-forfeitable after three years. This is certainly a grand feature of insurance. The above figures have been given us by Mr. Stahl, the general travelling agent, and are guaranteed by company.

[illegible] For four score years she has discharged life's duties in such a cheerful and happy spirit as to leave an impress only for good. As one who had intimately known her for half a century truthfully said, "No words of malice were ever known to pass her lips, no frown of anger ever seen to cloud her brow." Loveable and lovely, with a countenance beaming with intelligence and radiant from a heart overflowing with love to all, she had fully ripened for that change which she so longed for, and was ready for the abode which is promised to the pure in heart.

Mrs. Shepard was born in the town of Paris, Oneida county; at the age of nineteen years was married to Norman Shepard soon after removing with a number of others to Oswego county, coming into what was then a wilderness, felling the trees and clearing up a large farm in Palermo, where they remained for nearly a quarter of a century, their home being noted as a resting place for the poor and needy, for the fleeing bondsmen, while the church and seminaries of learning, and numerous students received generous aid at their hands. At the age of sixteen she became a member of the Presbyterian church and with her husband was among the first upon their coming here, to unite with the then little band of church people on Bristol Hill, which connection she has never severed, having been a consistent and devoted member for 66 years, although deprived in her later years from attending.

Sunday and Monday the remains lay in a handsome black casket dressed in garments her own hands had long ago selected; the floral offerings were many and beautiful. At 4 o'clock Monday Rev. H. B. Goodyear conducted the funeral services. "Jesus Lover of my Soul" and "Rock of Ages," two favorite hymns were rendered by a select choir, after which James Chesbro, James D. Lasher, Abram Howe and Andrew Hanna bore the casket out of the room, followed to its last resting place on a beautiful hill side in Mount Adnah.

THE New York Nation printed in its issue of June 25 a retrospect of the twenty years of it's existence which were completed with that number. The Nation was founded in July, 1865, in recognition of the new order of things which was sure to follow the end of the war and the abolition of slavery. It at once espoused the cause of pure, unpartisan administration of the National Government; and the present condition of civil-service reform is owing to it more than to any other instrumentality. It has been conducted, in its two leading departments, Politics and Literature, by the same editors from the first number, and holds to-day, as for the past twenty years, the first rank in each. It is the medium of the most thoughtful and cultivated discussion in the country—is, in fact, the only truly national journalistic forum. Its foreign correspondence is unrivalled. Its book reviews (by the leading scholars of the country) possess the highest authority. Each number contains a careful news summary, and the bound volumes are prized as the best obtainable chronicle of current history. With [illegible] pasture as I describe of mixed [illegible] cow will need no extra food [illegible] the pasture is good, but will give a full flow of milk; but if the pasture does not contain a variety of grasses, or is so heavily stocked as to be short, extra feed will be found profitable. I think cattle will do better to have two pastures, and allow one to grow up while the other is being depastured, as the cows will relish the change, and I believe that the land will yield more grass than if grazed constantly.—[W. To Tell the Health of Animals.

The London Graphic says that a close guess as to the health of animals may be often made by feeling their pulse. In the horse, a good and strong but quiet pulse beats forty times a minute; in an ox fifty to fifty-five; in sheep and pigs not less than seventy or more than eighty for ordinary health. It may be felt wherever a large artery crosses a bone. In the horse it is generally felt on the cord which crosses over the bone of the lower jaw in front of its curbed position, or on the bony ridge above the eye; and in cattle, over the middle of the first rib. In sheep, it is perhaps, easier to place the hand on the left side, where the beating of the heart may be felt. A rapid, hard and full pulse in stock points to inflammation and high fever, a rapid, small and weak pulse also to fever, but fever accompanied by a poor and weak state of the subject. A very slow pulse in stock will often be found to indicate brain disease, while a jumping and irregular pulse shows something wrong with the heart.

How to Make Cheese.

Mrs. A. J. Smith's method. Set the milk at 80°. Use sufficient rennet to coagulate the milk in 30 minutes. When firm enough to break squarely over the finger, cut twice and let stand ten minutes. Cut fine as peas and let stand ten minutes more. Draw off half the whey and heat to 98°, and keep at that point until the curd becomes firm and will squeak in your teeth. Draw off whey, leaving enough to float the curd. Cool to 90° and stir while cooling. Draw off all whey and let stand and drain until acid begins to develop. Add 2½ lbs. of salt to each 100 lbs. of curd; when the curd will draw out one inch from hot rod of iron, lower to 75° and put to press. Apply power gradually, that the whey may readily escape. When pressed two hours, dress up press 24 hours. Take from hoop and place on shelf. Grease thoroughly, turning and polishing with lard every day, until cured. Let the curing room be clean, light and well ventilated. Keep room at a temperature of 70°.

Fine Flavored Butter.

In order to produce the finest flavored butter, pure and delicate in aroma, it is essential, I consider, to prevent all approach of sourness, and to churn sweet cream. Acidity in milk is incipient decomposition, and it is the more delicate flavoring oils which suffer first of all among the fats of which butter is composed. Butter made from perfectly fresh cream is of course, pure in flavor, but there is not a full flavor in it; and if a full flavored butter is desired, which is generally the case, it is neccessary to let the cream "ripen" by keeping it some days, but keeping it sweet all the time. Some persons desire the cream to be slightly sour when it is churned, and the souring will make a tough and keeping butter, somewhat less attractive in flavor, and which is more easily churned, as a rule. But, at the same time, a more admirable butter is made from ripened cream that is still free from perceptible acidity.—[Indiana Farmer

When to Cut Grass.

Emerson and Flint say that when it is to be fed to cows in milk, and the farmer wishes to get the greatest quantity [illegible] grass should be cut just before [illegible] into blossom. It is then [illegible] and will therefore produce a [illegible] of milk than if allowed to [illegible] the object is to secure [illegible] of milk, without so [illegible] to quantity, it may be cut [illegible]. For feeding the store [illegible] may be cut when in [illegible] horses at work and [illegible] just after [illegible] or when [illegible] milk.—[Quin-[illegible]

HEALTH HINTS

In swelled neck, wash the part with brine and drink it twice a day also, until cured.

A good liniment can be made of aqua ammonia, linseed oil, camphor, equal parts; turpentine, one-fourth as much.

In bites and stings apply instantly, with a dry rag, spirits of hartshorn freely. The venom of stings being acid, the alkali nullifies it.

Good cider vinegar is recommended for diarrhœa, two ounces for an adult and one teaspoonful, moderately diluted for a child of one year.

For Neuralgia.—Take salicylic acid 10 grains three times a day; if very severe take the same amount four or five times a day. Take in a little warm water.

Wakefulness amounting to insomnia, almost, can be frequently relieved by sponging the spine in tepid water, with or without a few drops of ammonia added.

The leaves of geranium are an excellent application for cuts, where the skin is rubbed off, and other wounds of that kind. One or two leaves must be bruised and applied to the part, and the wound will be cicatrized in a short time.

Elevation of the head of the bed, by placing under each leg a block of the thickness of two bricks, is stated to be an effective remedy for cramps. Patients who have suffered at night, crying aloud with pain, have found this plan to afford immediate, certain and permanent relief.

In many cases of disordered stomach, a teaspoonful of salt is a certain cure. In the violent internal aching, termed colic, use a teaspoonful of salt to a pint of cold water, drink it and go to bed; it is one of the speediest known. The same will revive a person who seems almost dead from receiving a very heavy fall, etc.

The Detroit Free Press tells how father and son compromised their differences on the circus question: "No my son," he replied, as he put on his hat, "you can't go to the circus." "But why, father?" "Well, in the first place I can't fool away my money on such things." "Yes, but I have enough of my own." "And in the next place it is a rough crowd, the sentiment is unhealthy, and no respectable person can countenance such things." "But fath——" "That's enough sir! You can't go. I want you to enjoy yourself, but you must seek some more respectable amusement." An hour later a curious thing happened in the circus tent. A boy climed to the top flight of seats and sat down beside a man who had just finished a glass of lemonade and was lighting a cigar. He had his plug hat on the back of his head, and seemed to be enjoying himself hugely. It was father and son. The father had gone straight to the grounds from dinner, and the boy had run away. They looked at each other for half a minute, and then the boy got in the first blow by whispering. "Say, dad, if you won't lick me I won't tell ma you was here!" The father nodded his head to the agreement, and the great spectacular parade in the ring began.

It is refreshing to occasionally review the work of the country editor. If the patrons of a paper knew how some of their toiling editors were obliged to "rub" for a living, they would not delay paying their bills when due. As a rule, no family can afford to do without the paper which dispenses home news once a week. To support such an enterprise should not only be a duty but a pleasure. [Cambridge Tribune.

SO TERRIBLY JEALOUS.

Josephine Archer was angry. She pursed her little mouth, tightening the rosy lips till the last drop of blood seemed to have forsaken them; she stamped her little foot, and her big brown eyes snapped fire as she exclaimed in tones savagely hissing:

"Oh, the monster!" that was where the foot came down. "And right in the face and eyes of society. Kate Bixby and Belle Bounderty both saw him gallivanting down the main street with her. Oh, oh!"

At this point her voice seemed to fail her; but presently she continued:

"Oh, Mr. Henry Gilman, if you don't get a piece of my mind when next you insult me by your presence, then I shall miss my guess. Oh, you black-hearted, abominable, hypocritical, faithless, wicked, wicked man."

It was a terrible blow for poor Josephine. She was a pretty girl and a good girl, only 18 years of age; bright, winsome and mostly laughter-loving. But she didn't care to laugh just now.

She was the light and joy of her home—an only child—the pet and play fellow of both father and mother.

Two years previous to this present time Henry Gilman, Esq., a young lawyer just admitted to the bar, had selected our thriving, growing town as the field of his legal labors.

He had been only one-and-twenty when he first came among us, but he was a man of powerful intellect, keen, quick to see and understand; a ready and fluent speaker; eloquent and warm in debate; scrupulously truthful and honest, and withal, handsome.

Such a man could not fail, and he did not.

Within a twelvemonth after he had established himself with us, he had gained a lucrative practice, and by the end of the second year, at the age of twenty-three, he was unable to attend to all who called upon him for professional services.

And Henry Gilman had fallen in love with Josephine Archer, and she had fallen in love with him; some of her most intimate friends said she had fallen desperately in love; and we think they were right.

When the young lawyer spoke with her parents on the subject of his love, they were rejoiced. They knew not another man in all the world whom they would have chosen in preference to him for their daughter's husband. They knew how light-hearted and impulsive and affectionate she was, and they knew that he possessed the qualities of mind and heart necessary to her happiness.

[illegible] had said Mr. Archer frankly [illegible]

[illegible]

"[illegible] at the [illegible] and she had informed him of [illegible]"

"[illegible] the world is it, darling?" he urged, attempting to put an arm around her, but she pushed him indignantly away.

"What is it! Oh, you cruel, wicked man! And you ask me what it is!"

He stood back and looked upon her in utter bewilderment. For the life of him he could not understand it, and he told her so.

"You can't understand it!" she spitefully exclaimed.

"Indeed I cannot."

"Then," she said, drawing a long, deep breath, and bestowing upon him a look which she thought would annihilate him, "you had better go—and—ask—your pretty—widow—your sweet Kitty Coryden!"

A bomb bursting at his feet could not have startled him more deeply; but it was only for the moment.

He was a man whose concious integrity—whose ever-present sense of truth and honor—rendered him impervious to fear from such attack.

Presently the look of consternation gave way to a pitying smile, and he gently said:

"Poor child, who has been whispering that nonsense into your ear?"

"Oh, it's nonsense, is it? Perhaps there isn't any Kitty Coryden!"

"But there is; and she has called upon me at my office."

"Yes, and you are going to find a house for her, here in our village."

"I have promised her that I will do so."

"Oh, how coolly you take it!"

"But, my dear Josephine, will you listen to me for just one minute? Let me——"

"No, sir! I will not. I want nothing more to do with you. Go to your Kitty! Oh, don't tell me! She's been in your office, how many times? And—and——"

"Well, what more? Let us have the whole charge."

"Oh, didn't you—didn't you only yesterday, when she got out of the coach, didn't you—oh, you false-hearted man!"

"Didn't I what, Josey?"

"Don't call me Josey! Don't ever dare do it again! Oh, you took Kitty in your arms——"

"No, no, I deny that in toto, broke in Henry, smiling in spite of his effort to the contrary.

"Well, you kissed her! So there!"

"My dear Josephine, to that I plead guilty."

"You—you do?" gasped the stricken girl, utterly confounded by the man's impervious audacity. She struggled up from the blow, and pointed to the door.

"There!—there, sir, is the door! Go!—go! and never—never let me look upon your face again. Not a word. I have heard enough. Go!"

He gazed upon her for a brief space—a few seconds—and then with something very much like a smile upon his frank and honest face, he turned and left the room—and left the house, saying to himself as he went:

"Poor child! I will not blame her. If she did not love me truly and well she would not feel so deeply."

He knew very well who had made the mischief. A certain maiden, who had sought in vain to win his smiles—who had thrown herself almost into his arms repeatedly, and whom he had been forced to repulse—had seen his fair client alight at the door of his office, and had very likely seen him kiss her; for he had done that thing, and done it most lovingly.

Meanwhile an unhappy maiden sat all alone in the great drawing room of Judge Archer's imposing residence. She had never in all her life been so unhappy before.

As she called back the face of her lover, and again in fancy, heard the rich music of his voice, she could not believe that he was a traitor.

Could he be false to her? Oh, she would not believe it.

"And yet—yet—that kiss—Kate and Belle both saw it. Kate did, at any rate. And he acknowledged it, too! Oh, that is too much. If he had a sister, or cousin, or anything of that kind—but he has none—he is as [illegible] as himself."

[illegible]

[illegible] ... the Judge [illegible] ... opening with the front hall was unceremoniously opened, and—

Enter—Henry Gilman, Esq., leading by the hand a lady—for a lady she certainly was—a mild-eyed, sweet-faced woman, petite and plump, a wealth of golden-brown tresses escaping from beneath a jaunty little hat of lace and ostrich feathers—in short, a woman whom anybody might have loved at sight, for she was not only very beautiful, but she looked good and true and brave.

She was certainly older than was Harry Gilman; but then, many a match had been made between parties more widely separated by age than were those two.

However, Henry led the lady forward and presented her first to the host and hostess.

"Judge Archer and Mrs. Archer, I have the pleasure of introducing to you my mother! And a mother good and true she had been to me."

The Judge had recovered himself immediately upon the entrance of the new comers, and he was not at all surprised by the introduction.

Henry had spoken with him on the subject of finding a house such as his mother would like to live in, for he had persuaded her to come and make her home near him, if not with him.

Mrs. Archer was surprised, for she had not heard that Henry was expecting his mother's arrival, and she was furthermore surprised upon beholding in that mother a woman so young and so beautiful; but she manifested none of the surprise in her greeting, which was warm and ardent.

It remained for poor Josephine to be dumbfounded. Henry had often spoken of his mother; had told how good she had always been to him; how she had paid out from her own store for his comfort and convenience while [illegible] college, far more than she was legally bound to do.

She had, in fact, anticipated his wants, and supplied them cheerfully, and even joyously.

"Josephine," he said, as he turned to where she stood, struggling with all her might to recover her scattered senses, "this is my own dear mother; and this, mamma, is my own dear Josephine, and I hope you will love her for my sake as well as your own."

While Josephine, with thoughts of her lover's perfidy driven from her mind, held the mild-eyed woman by the hand, thinking how easy it would be to love her, Henry proceeded, speaking to the family:

"I think I have never told you my mother's name. You will pardon me, mamma. My father died, as you know, when I was 15 years of age. Three years later my mother married again—married with Judge Coryden of Swanport."

At this point Josephine started with a quick gasp.

"At the end of a year, however," the young man went on, "the Judge died. My mother, of course, retains his name, but she seldom speaks of him; and when old friends, who know not of this second marriage, call her by the old name, she never corrects them. In fact, most of her letters by post come directed to Mrs. Kate Gilman."

Then he turned once more to Josephine, who stood like one struggling beneath the weight of a terrible incubus, and said to her with a merry twinkle in his keen gray eyes:

"So now, my darling, you know my sweet Kitty Coryden, and I think you will not take it further amiss——"

Before he could speak further her little white hand was clasped tightly over his mouth, and she found strength to whisper in his ear:

"Oh, Harry, don't—don't! If you can love me still, say no more till we are alone."

And when, later, they were alone, Josephine humbled herself completely.

She saw her glaring fault. It was not that she had been hurt at heart by what she had heard of her lover, but it was this: That she had not confidence enough in him to ask for an explanation.

In short, she would have sacrificed the happiness of a lifetime to the passion and the prejudice of a moment.

Josephine is now a happy wife, with beautiful children laughing and playing around her, and from that time—that [illegible] evening on which she made [illegible] acquaintance of sweet Kitty Coryden [illegible]

[illegible] Washington, [illegible] Colonel [illegible] Virginia, [illegible] descendant of Col. Washington, George Steptoe Washington, to whom the letter is addressed, was one of the executors of the will of the "Father of his Country." He has a grandson—George Steptoe Washington—residing in Philadelphia. The letter contains some excellent advice, and is one of the few private letters of President Washington extant:

MOUNT VERNON, 23d March, 1789.

DEAR GEORGE: As it is probable I shall soon be under the necessity of quitting this place and entering once more into the bustle of public life, in conformity to the voice of my country and the earnest entreaties of my friends, however contrary it is to my own desires or inclinations, I think it incumbent on me as your uncle and friend to give you some advising hints, which, if properly attended to, will I conceive, be found very useful to you in regulating your conduct and giving you respectability not only at present but through every period of life.

You have now arrived at that age when you must quit the trifling amusements of a boy, and assume the more dignified manner of a man. At this crisis your conduct will attract the notice of those who are about you, and as the first impressions are generally the most lasting, your doings now may mark the leading traits of your character through life. It is therefore absolutely necessary, if you mean to make any figure upon the stage of life, that you should take the first steps right. What these steps are, and what general line is to be pursued to lay the foundation of an honorable and happy progress, is the part of age and experience to point out. This I shall do as far as in my power, with the utmost cheerfulness, and I trust that your own good sense will show you the necessity of following it.

The first and great object with you at present is to acquire by industry and application such knowledge as your situation enables you to obtain and as will be useful to you in life. In doing this other important objects will be gained beside the acquirement of knowledge—namely, a habit of industry and disrelish of that profusion of money and dissipation of time which are ever attended upon idleness. I do not mean close application to your studies—that you should never enter into those amusements which are suited to your age and station. They may be made to go hand in hand with each other, and used in their proper seasons will be found to be a mutual assistance to each other. But what amusements are to be taken and what is the great matter to be attended to? Your own judgment, with the advice of your real friends, who may have an opportunity of a personal intercourse with you, can point out the particular manner in which you may best spend your moments of relaxation, much better than I can at a distance. One thing, however, I would strongly impress upon you, namely, that when you have leisure to go into company it always should be of the very best kind that the place you are in will afford. By this means you will be constantly improving your manners, and cultivating your mind while you are relaxing from your books, and good company will always be found much less expensive than bad.

You cannot offer as an excuse for not using it that you cannot gain admission there, or that you have not a proper attention paid you in it. This is an apology made only by those whose manners are disgusting, or whose character is exceptionable, neither of which I hope will ever be said of you. I cannot enjoin too strongly upon you a due observance of economy and frugality. As you well know yourself, the present state of your property and finances will not admit of any unnecessary expense.

The article of clothing is now one of the chief expenses you will incur, and in this I fear you are not so economical as you should be. Decency and cleanliness will always be the first objects in the dress of a judicious and sensible man. A conformity to the prevailing fashion in a certain degree is necessary, but it does not follow from thence that a man should always get a new coat or other clothes upon every trifling change in the mode, when perhaps he has two or three very good ones by him. A person who is anxious to be a leader of the fashion or one of the first to follow it will certainly appear in the eyes of judicious men to have nothing better than a frequent change of dress to recommend him to notice. I would [illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible] you are [illegible] would prevent it, for you [illegible] employed, and if it is not in pursuit of those things which are profitable, it must be in pursuit of those which are destructive. Your affectionate [illegible], friend and uncle,

GEORGE WASHINGTON.

To Mr. George S. Washington.

It is the End.

Shun the bowl, it will only bring destruction and death. Why do you drink? The answer is always the same: "I don't know, I just drink." Think of some loved one far away to whom you write and always tell her that you are not drinking a drop. Think of the old, gray-haired mother to whom you gave the solemn pledge, "I will never drink another drop." Think of the many promises you have made to friends, relatives, and to your God. Yet you broke them and fell by the wayside. The man that insists on you drinking when you do not want it is not your friend but your enemy. Did you ever look into the future? You did not. Well, then, picture to yourself a young man who has all the facilities of making a fortune and good name for himself. He becomes addicted to the habit of taking a toddy now and then with his friends. He meets them more frequently and it becomes a habit. He is not satisfied with his sweet comfort of home life. He exchanges them for the more agreeable companionship of his friends (as he thinks) in the bar-room. Witness the result. He soon becomes known among his companions as a hail fellow well met. He spends his money more recklessly. He thinks that friendship never dies. He finds out his mistake when too late. His money vanishes like chaff before the winds. He reaches the end of the rope. The friends in whom he placed so much confidence leave him one by one. He soon finds himself alone, and without money, and, as a consequence, without friends. Where are they? They are saying to one another: "Charlie is a good fellow, but he should not drink the way he does." Who brought him to it? His so-called friends. He becomes reckless and [illegible]. People pass him by and tell each other what he used to be. He imagines that every man is his enemy and acts accordingly; goes from bad to worse and finally the race is over, he dies the drunkard's death; is placed under six feet of earth; he is gone, unthought of and uncared for; not a flower marks the spot where his body lies. Think of it well. It will come sooner or later. It is the inevitable result. It is the end.—[Evansville Argus.

THE PROPER THING.

Black lace shoulder capes are worn.

Organdy dresses are trimmed with black French lace.

Violet is a shade much used in millinery this season.

White predominates this season in dresses and bonnets.

White and colored cotton embroidery is used for trimming.

Large bows of white ribbon or soft silk, adorn many summer gowns.

Embroidery matching the costume is preferred to lace for trimming.

A diamond spur with a ruby lash is a favorite design for a lady's lace pin.

Stripped silks are made up with plain silk of the same tint as one of the stripes.

Thin fabrics prevail this summer, heavy silks and satins are the exception to the rule.

A Shaker bonnett of white shirred muslin makes a very pretty head covering for a baby girl.

Gathered waists are the fashion of the summer for all thin fabrics and for light summer silks.

The long tulle veils that cross back of the head and are brought forward and tied under the left ear, are used mostly with round hats.

The foundation skirts of dresses must be narrow in order to be stylish; two yards and a quarter is the greatest width of short walking dresses.

The art of the jeweler seems to have reached a climax when by delicate mechanism tiny bugs and beetles of silver are endowed with motion as if alive.

The revelations recently made by the Pall Mall Gazette, has not by any means put a stop to the nefarious business, as has been proved by a reporter who, made a mock purchase of a young lady to be delivered to him where ever he might designate. Our Government has made a great mistake in discriminating against China in this matter, especially when the same end might have been attained without disturbing our friendly relations with that country. It is rumored that Colonel Lamont will be appointed marshal of the district of Columbia in the fall.

Notice.

Notice is hereby given that an application has been made by the Fulton and Oswego Falls Street Railway Co. to the Board of Trustees of the Village of Fulton for their consent to the construction of a street surface railway in Fulton, N. Y., from the corner of 3d and Oneida streets along Oneida street to First street, thence along First street to Broadway and thence along Broadway to the bridge over the Oswego river and canal and that such application will first be considered by said Board of Trustees at a meeting to be held at the Police Court Room in the Village of Fulton, N. Y. on the 7th day of August, 1885 at 8 o'clock p. m.
Dated Fulton, N. Y., July 18, 1885.
By order of the Board of Trustees.
ARVIN RICE, Clerk.

[illegible]ANISTAN AGAIN.

[illegible] promises to produce [illegible] of war between [illegible] and Russia. Recent expe[illegible] taking them at a large [illegible]. That experience brought [illegible] pretty complete proof [illegible] government really wishes [illegible]. The czar was quite as de[illegible] in favor of peace as Mr. Glad[illegible] new rumors charge the Rus[illegible] such an advance as indicates [illegible] to force hostilities. Sensations [illegible] scope in the uncertain stories [illegible] come from the vicinity of Zulfikar [illegible]. They turn out to have little foun[illegible], and often serve their purpose in [illegible] speculations of London and the [illegible] capitals.

[illegible] they were out of power the [illegible] were nagging the ministry to [illegible] the honor of England." In [illegible] Lord Salisbury will seek peace by [illegible] instrumentalities at his command. [illegible] will have the advantage of an opposi[illegible] which is not anxious for war.

[illegible] will be time enough to regard war [illegible] between these great powers, [illegible] the declaration has been in fact [illegible]. Collision on the disputed [illegible] may bring about that result, [illegible] chances yet are largely in favor of [illegible] continuance of peace; but no one can [illegible] how long conflict can be avoided.—[illegible] Herald.

FALSE MODESTY.

How unfortunate it is that the wearing [illegible] of the women of this country is [illegible] in accord with the tastes and desires [illegible] "crank." We would suggest [illegible] fashions of the day be subjected to [illegible] dictation before being introduced [illegible] the public on the forms of our fairer [illegible]. A short time ago, war was declared [illegible] the "mother Hubbard" dress by [illegible] of fogies in some of our western [illegible], and local ordinances were made [illegible] their appearance on the [illegible]. Now Washington society is [illegible]turbed over an assault upon the gauze [illegible] of ladies by another detachment [illegible] the "crank" population of the coun[illegible], in the form of a circular which [illegible] tacked upon trees throughout the [illegible], in which a raid was instituted up[illegible] the custom of ladies wearing trans[illegible] material or rick-rack garments in [illegible] public, and especially at meetings with [illegible] religious proclivities. This is a [illegible]tion of the circular: "We therefore [illegible] proclaim to whom it may con[illegible] that all females who can so grossly [illegible] both their own and the opposite [illegible] as to appear in tight-fitting dresses, [illegible] of white muslin or transparent [illegible] of any other color without an [illegible] garment, can have no claim to [illegible]desty, and are unfit persons to enter [illegible] respectable society." Those hard[illegible] and "too awfully nice" men who [illegible] themselves "Disgusted Gentlemen" [illegible] would institute a law depriving the [illegible] creatures of cool attire of re[illegible] pattern, should wear colored [illegible] lest an uninterrupted view with [illegible] naked eye upon ladies in muslin [illegible] would so disturb their delicate [illegible] of modesty that they will be [illegible] to continue in so noble (?) a [illegible]. Such false modesty is disgust[illegible] in the extreme.

[illegible] FAILURE OF JOHN ROACH.

[illegible] Roach the great ship builder has [illegible] an assignment. This unfortun[illegible] throws about 2,500 men and [illegible] out of employment. The failure [illegible] Dolphin and the resulting action [illegible] Whitney, and the opinion [illegible] General Garland, that there [illegible] contract with the govern[illegible] this vessel was concerned [illegible] that the fate of the other [illegible] would be similar to [illegible] Dolphin, is no doubt the [illegible] failure. The government [illegible] all the amount on the [illegible]. Secretary Whitney [illegible] Roach's bondsmen on the [illegible] the United States were [illegible] a sufficient sum to guaran[illegible]. Moreover, the gov[illegible] a lien upon the vessels [illegible] [illegible] was also then owned the [illegible] Iron Works. He does business under the style of John Roach & Son, but he is the only one in the firm.

POOR Spain seems to be powerless in trying to check cholera which is making rapid strides through the country. The death rate last week was estimated at 700 per day. At this rate it will not take long to depopulate the country.

THE latest reports from Mt. McGregor seem to indicate that Gen. Grant is rapidly failing. Yesterday he was in a deep stupor all day. A dispatch at 8 o'clock this morning says that Dr. Douglas thinks his patient will live twenty-four hours.

ABOUT 50,000 people were present at the opening of the Niagara Park Reservation last Wednesday. Gov. Hill, U.S. District Attorney Dorsheimer, Erastus Brooks and others made interesting speeches.

SURELY Hanlan, the ex-champion oarsman, is not afraid to try his strength with Teemer. But from the fact that he did not accept Teemer's challenge which was held open until the 18th, it would seem that he feared the superiority of the Pennsylvania oarsman. Should these two men meet, a close race will be the result.

JOHN A. LOGAN, the man who expected second place on the Republican ticket last fall, says this of the Democratic President: "I called on the President last week and was very favorably impressed with him. He seemed to me, in the brief interview we had, to be a man of great force of character. I believe he is trying to give the country a good administration."

THE revelations recently made by the Pall Mall Gazette, has not by any means put a stop to the nefarious business, as has been proved by a reporter who, made a mock purchase of a young lady to be delivered to him where ever he might designate. His object in the purchase was intended to convince the committee appointed to investigate the matter. The London crusaders have a dainty job before them which will require time and labor to suppress.

WE feel ourselves authorized to state that Roswell Pettibone Flower is a candidate for the democratic nomination for governor of New York, and will remain so until the state convention of the democracy shall have selected its candidate. After that, Flower will support the ticket whether it be led by his name or by that of some other democrat. It is not improper to add that Mr. Flower is a reformer of the civil service after the school of Jefferson, Jackson and Tilden, and not after the humbug republican school of Dorman B. Eaton & Co.—[New York Sun.

MR. JOHN RUSSELL YOUNG, ex-United States Minister to China, who has recently arrived in this country, says of the Chinese restriction act that it is merely an offence to Chinese pride, as the government of that country is opposed to the emigration of its subjects, and is doing all in its power to prevent them from coming here. Our Government has made a great mistake in discriminating against China in this matter, especially when the same end might have been attained without disturbing our friendly relations with that country. To completely carry out the restriction act Mr. Young suggests that the United States should negotiate a treaty with England, by which coolies from Hong Kong would be prohibited from sailing to this country.

THE general trade situation as reported to Bradstreet's is characterized by the customary dullness observable at this season of the year. There is a slight gain in the movement of general merchandise reported from Chicago and leading dealers in various lines there look confidently forward to a good fall trade. HARPER'S.

Harper is filled with its usual interesting matter, with the addition of the second installment of Howell's new story "Indian Summer" which bids fair to surpass any of his former efforts. "English and American Railways," is an interesting, illustrated article describing all the leading differences in railway travel in the two countries, giving credit to each where it is superior, and it generally falls to the American system. "A Trip on the Ottawa," is full of interest and its views are finely drawn. There are but a few of the many readable articles in August Harper.

Thousands of persons who will read this paragraph are in abject misery to-day when they might be in a satisfactory condition. They are weak, lifeless, full of odd aches and pains, and every year they know they are getting worse, even though the best doctors are patching them in spots. The origin of these aches and pains is the kidneys and liver, and if they would build these all over new with Warner's safe cure as millions have done, and cease investing their money in miserable unsuccessful patchwork, they would be well and happy and would bless the day when the Lord "hit 'em" and indicated the common-sense course for them to pursue.—[London Press.

The consent of a majority of the property holders along the line has been obtained. Mr. D. C. Hadcock of Syracuse, the projector and principal stockholder of the new road, said in reply to a Times reporter that "according to law the project must be advertised fourteen days, and that as soon as this was complied with, which will be August 5th, active operations will be begun and the new road rapidly pushed forward to completion."

The road will run from the corner of Oneida and Second streets, through Oneida, First and Broadway to the D. L. & W. depot in Oswego Falls. It is confidently expected that the road will be in operation by September 1st. It is proposed to put two summer and two winter cars on at first. The fare to all points will be five cents.

The articles of incorporation have been executed and forwarded to the Secretary of State.

With the completion of the new road, and the introduction of the water works, Fulton will need only electric lights to complete her happiness. We understand that the question of lighting the village by electricity is being seriously considered by a company of enterprising men who will make a success of the project if undertaken. We earnestly hope that ere many mouths the electric light will glisten on the rails of the new road.

The Regatta.

The first regatta of the Pathfinder Canoe Club of Fulton occurred last Friday afternoon on the river just below the village. The day was a delightful one, and many Fultonians were present enjoying the pleasant, grateful shade of the island and the many cool retreats along the bank of the river. About 3:30 a pistol shot from the judges boat called the contestants for the first race. This was a sailing race, two miles with a double turn. The competitors were John Foster, Herbert Markham, W. S. Royce, H. L. Lake and Justin Morrell. The prize, an elegant silver cup, given by Thomas Mossé, was won by W. S. Royce.

The second race, single paddle, two miles, was won by John Foster. The contestants were H. L. Lake, W. S. Royce, J. J. Morrell and John Foster. The prize was a beautiful silk flag. Owing to the lateness of the hour, the third race, double paddle, was postponed. An invitation had been extended to members of the Oswego club, but owing to a previous engagement they were unable to attend. The next meeting of this club is expected to occur in a week or two on Neahtawanta lake, due notice of which will be given. The club feel highly gratified at the interest taken in their first regatta.

Why the Taxpayers Support It.

Mr. Editor.

DEAR SIR—Will you allow me to ask through your columns why it is that the taxpayers of the Village of Fulton are taxed for the building of the bridge across the race?

Fulton, July 20, 1885.

Many years ago the business men of this village, then known as the water company built a bridge across the raceway. After a time the bridge gave way and the result was that the village sued the company for damages and was victorious, recovering a judgment of $3,500. On the 18th day of October, 1864, the board of trustees called a meeting and the citizens voted in favor of a proposition to the effect that on payment of this judgment the village should repair this bridge and also the one on 1st street, at the expense of the water company and that thereafter the village would maintain the two bridges at the expense of the taxpayers.

Drowned at Troy.

Saturday's Albany Journal says: Gus Kinny of Fulton, aged about 20, and employed as a driver on Captain George Baker's canal boat John Reddick, disappeared from behind his team as the boat passed through West Troy about two o'clock this morning, and he is believed to have been drowned. Captain Baker notified the West Troy police and continued to Albany, where his boat is being unloaded.

The body of young Kinney who was drowned at Troy arrived here last Monday, and the funeral was held yesterday from the house in the Upper Landing. The remains were buried at Cokase.

Guy Pratt, little son of Mr. and Mrs. James Pratt has been dangerously ill for the past few days. Dr. Hall reports the little patient as much better to-day.

One of the handsomest boats upon the canal is the "Thos. J. Farrell," owned by Capt. B. J. Clark, which has just been repainted. W. D. Patterson did the work.

Several Fulton youths with their best girls were in the city yesterday and driving in a reckless manner through the streets. Officer McCarthy stopped one couple and made the driver cease abusing the horse.—[Oswego Palladium.

Last Monday morning as Eugene Ward was fishing upon the bridge, someone picked up his cane and walked off with it. Any information in regard to it will be thankfully received at Mrs. C. Lalonde's residence on Rochester street.

Hon. Willard Johnson was at Oswego two or three days last week as one of the appraisers in the case of the D. L. & W. railroad against the R. W. & O. to appraise the damages alleged to be due the former on account of crossing their track near West First and Utica streets in that city.

Youngs Bros. have fitted up Indian Point, just below the village, for the accommodation of picnics. A well has been driven, furnishing an abundance of pure water. This point is one of the most pleasant picnic grounds on the river. Passengers ferried over on signal.

A young grammarian was asked to parse the word girl, and replied thus; "Girls is a particular noun, of the lovely gender, lively person, double number, kissing mood, in the immediate tense, and in the expection case to matrimony, according to the general rule."

Boating on our beautiful river is very popular this summer. The numerous sailing skiffs with their white canvass floating to the breeze and the many handsome new row boats, really present a picturesque scene. VanBuren's island and one or two other points have ample accomodations for campers. Fultonian's are blessed with an abundance of Nature's beauty.

There will be a game of base ball on the Fair Ground at 3 p. m. to-morrow by the young men of Fulton for the benefit of the Bartholdi Pedestal fund. Should the program of the day be fully carried out we can safely predict an interesting game. Let everybody turn out to-morrow and help forward the commendable work. For complete particulars see bills.

H. C. Gardner has our thanks for a copy of a handsome little book entitled the "Tourist's Guide," issued by the R. W. & O. railroad, which gives a complete description and handsomely illustrates the beautiful scenery along their line from Niagara Falls to the Thousand Islands. Mr. Gardner is selling special rate tickets to all points on the St. Lawrence via. this road.

An exchange gives the following caution in relation to the use of beet "greens:" "The other day, while the cook was preparing beet greens for dinner, she accidentally discovered a white worm imbedded in a leaf after they were cooked. Closer investigation led to the discovery of millions of them in the dish of greens prepared for dinner. What the worm or bug is we do not know, but we advise our readers to examine the beet tops they prepare for greens."

Track laying on the Syracuse, Phoenix and Oswego railroad is making steady progress and has now reached a point about four miles this side of Woodard. Only two miles of track now remain to be laid to complete the connection. Work on the bridge and approaches at Three River Point is progressing in a satisfactory manner. The demolition of the former bridge is in full progress. Since Saturday contractor Potts has been severely indisposed at the residence of his brother-in-law, Mr. D. N. Stacy at Pennellville, but is now improving. Work on the road, however, has suffered [illegible] from this cause.—[illegible].

[illegible] Educational Matters.

From the Daily Saratogian we learn that our school commissioner, D. D. Metcalf of North Scriba, took an active part in the State and National Educational Associations which have been holding forth at Saratoga the past two weeks. The Saratogian speaking of the National meeting says: "The Department of Superintendence held its concluding session at the Bethesda Parish House reading room yesterday afternoon. On motion of Mr. Metcalf, the department favored the plan of gradation in rural schools, and suggested that the matter be brought to the attention of the association, also that especial attention was directed to the subject of classification or gradation in country schools, and a committee composed of Messrs. Metcalf, Holcombe and Burns, was appointed to study the subject and report upon it at the February meeting of the Department."

Another Meteor.

Last Friday evening about 9 o'clock, people upon the street were startled by the brilliant lighting up of the heavens by what was supposed by many at the time to be lightning, but which was, in fact, a large meteor passing over the village. Owing to the clouds the spectacle in this locality was somewhat obscured. People in other places who had an unobstructed view of the celestial visitor, say it presented a most beautiful appearance, showing many colored lights. A short time after its disappearance a dull rumble was heard, thought by many to be an earthquake. Several Fultonians were egotistical enough to say that the appearance of the meteor was in honor and approval of the important changes and improvements about to take place in our village, but the fact that it exploded near Poughkeepsie instead of Fulton, has a tendency to shatter this theory.

The Knights Templar.

Lake Ontario commandary expected to visit Fulton last evening for the purpose of drilling resident members but the plan was changed and instead six of the Fulton members came to this city and were joined by a large number of the local members and marched to the state armory where they had a drill. The Fulton members were obliged to return at 8:45 and in consequence the drill ended shortly after eight o'clock. The commandary made a very creditable parade in accompanying the Fulton men to their train and on the return to their quarters. The members have only been drilling a short time and already show marked improvements under the tuition of Commander Cropsey. The visit to Fulton is only postponed for a short time.—[Oswego Times.

The New Pension Examiners.

On Saturday last Dr. W. A. Hall of this village, received notice of his appointment to the position of pension examiner for Oswego county. Dr. Hall is an able physician, and has been quite active in politics. He has served a term as coroner. His appointment is an excellent one in every respect.

Dr. Whited of Oswego has also received his appointment. The third member of the board is not as yet known. Dr. Pardee of this village has received his preliminary papers, which have been filled out and returned, but up to this (Wednesday) noon he has not been appointed. A better appointment than Dr. Pardee could not be made.

Good Templar's Festival.

The Good Templars will have an Ice Cream Festival at their Lodge room on Friday evening, July 24th, at which time the wheel quilt which the ladies of the Society solicited names for some time ago will be on exhibition and will be sold to the highest bidder. Admission free.

Last Sunday night a horse belonging to Capt. Plopper of the canal boat Geo. Boyd, was stolen from the barn of the Burden house. The horse was three years old and weighed about 900 pounds. No trace of the animal has yet been obtained.

Mr. H. D. Trimble, of Palermo, was in town Saturday and disclosed to a Register representative that he expected to be a candidate for the Republican nomination to the assembly. He has the advantage over some of the other candidates of having been before the two former conventions.—[Phoenix Register.

Mr. E. E. Johnson has recently resigned his position as station agent of the New York, Ontario & Western railroad in this village. During the three years that Mr. Johnson has held this position he has discharged his duties in a manner very satisfactory to the company and the public. He expects to go to Wyoming county, where he will engage in business. Mr. George Webb, formerly of Mexico, a practical railroad man, is at present in charge of the station.

The work of rebuilding the hardware stores on Oneida street has been begun and is now fairly under way. Dr. Bacon has purchased the block formerly occupied by Sheridan Bros., and will erect a fine building on its site. Mr. J. J. Stephens is superintending the erection of his store immediately adjoining. When finished these stores will present a fine appearance. J. J. Wright will probably occupy his old location, and there is some talk of Geo. Johnston going into Bacon's new store.

On Sunday last Prof F. Kenyon Jones the well-known organist of Father Kearney's church, passed the day in Oswego among the churches. At high-mass at Father Barry's church he sang the tenor solos in Peter's mass and the duett "Et Incarnatus Est" with Miss Larkelle. In the afternoon he attended Vespers at St. John's, and afterwards called on Father Griffa, who entertained him most pleasantly. Later in the evening he visited the organ gallery at Christ church, and enjoyed an hour playing the noble organ, where ten years ago he officiated as organist.

Armed with a warrant Officer Poole searched these houses and found several pairs of the stolen shoes. One pair was taken off Mrs. Harris, another from Mrs. Baker. A pair of fine boots, but little worn, was found in a closet. Poole brought the articles to Salmon, who identified them. During the time the premises were searched Harris was away from home. Immediately upon his return he was arrested, and while in charge of Officer Murphy, he jumped through a window and made his escape. He has not yet been found. The police have learned of the whereabouts of the balance of the goods, some of them being taken to Oswego and sold. Officers Poole and Murphy yesterday morning went to Three River Point and arrested Charles VanValkenburg, who is employed on the Phoenix railroad. Several pairs of shoes were found in his house on Broadway. He was brought here and placed in jail.

Volney.

VOLNEY, July 20.—It is said that not long ago, nor very far from this place, as a young gentleman was one evening riding out with a young lady, a person stepped up the carriage, took hold of the lady and attempted to take her out, threatening to shoot her. The young man put whip to the horse and got away, took the girl home where she fell on the floor in a frenzy, declaring she would hang herself. The next day the would be assassin called on the young lady, had a talk, and in the evening took her off and got married. The attempted "assassination" is supposed to be due to the lady's riding out with "another fellow."

July 5, at the residence of the officiating Justice of the Peace, John Distin, Mr. Adam Crouch and Miss Ada Parkhurst of Volney were married.

The trial of Louis Reil for treason began at Regina on Monday. Riel pleaded not guilty. He maintained a quiet air and watched the proceedings closely, frequently prompting his lawyers. He was in no way agitated. He says that God is on his side, and he has no fear as to the results of the trial. After the adjournment he was sent back to the barracks, where he will be sent every night for safe keeping.

THE department of agriculture, says the Rochester Herald, sent a scientist to California to investigate the grasshopper plague, and he seems to have accomplished something practical. He advised the mixing of a bran mash, strongly impregnated with arsenic, which was to be scattered about the fields in tablespoonful heaps. This was eagerly devoured by the hoppers with fatal results. Fields of two and three hundred acres were cleared of the pests by one application.

A large number of telegraph poles about two miles up the river were split by lightning during the storm of last Wednesday afternoon. Many are shattered from top to bottom and from some the splinters were thrown around for a distance of 12 or fifteen feet.

Oswego river is getting quite a reputation for camping. N. Johnson's family with Miss Bertha Lawrence, have been spending the past two weeks and will stay this week, while B. R. Howe and family, Dr. and Mrs. Whitaker, Mr. and Mrs. E. M. Baker, and others followed this week. It is certainly a beautiful place. The tents are pitched in a little grove, while just back of it is a large spring which furnishes an abundance of pure water and fishing on the river is good.

The camp is situated about two miles up the river.

Lightning entered the store of B. R. Howe last Wednesday upon a local telegraph wire. It did no particular damage but left several blackened spots on the sash and frame.

Mrs. Fred Guile died in the this village on Thursday morning. She was 31 years of age and leaves a husband and 2 small children, one of these but a few days old. Funeral took place from the church of Immaculate Conception on the following Saturday, at 3 p. m., and was largely attended. The bereaved family have the sympathy of the entire community.

The Baptist Sunday school from Baldwinsville picniced on the fair grounds yesterday. They were accompanied by a brass band which discoursed some fine music during the day.

Liveryman Ingamels yesterday forenoon received a telegram from Chief of Police Wright of Syracuse, stating that two men named Harrington and Mason had been arrested in that city. They were driving a gray team belonging to Ingamels and one of the horses was dead. Ingamels left on the first train for that city, and returned last evening with the remaining horse. Harrington says that Mason stole $20 dollars at H. H. Merriam's last fair time, which he took from a box, leaving a gold watch for fear of detection. Mrs. N. N. Stranahan corroborates this statement of facts. Harrington says that Mason also stole $80 at Aaron Stranahan's at about the same time and leaving two $20 gold pieces for fear of detection. He also acknowledges being engaged in chicken stealing, and it is thought they may be connected with the stealing of several quantities of wheat which have been taken, one of these from A. Stranahan of Bowens Corners.

Mason and Harrington both live on Worth St. in Lower Oswego Falls, and have had a livery of Ingamels several times during the past two weeks. When arrested, a dark lantern and a revolver were found under a bag in the back part of the buggy.

The Ætna Life Insurance Co.

The Ætna Life Insurance Company of Hartford issues all forms of life and endowment policies. But the most attractive, comprehensive and desirable plan of insurance is the terminal endowment, introduced by the Ætna. Its attractive features are that it gives all the benefits of whole life insurance and in addition a provision that policies will become payable as endowments—at age eighty—For example: A $10,000 policy at the of 30 will cost $235.50 per year and in 10 years the premiums will amount to $2,355, and at that time the insured will be entitled to a dividend of $761.50, and in addition will be entitled to a paid up policy of $2,520.00 upon which no more payments are necessary; or if the insured desires he may receive $1591.50 in cash and surrender his policy; or he may after receiving the dividend of $761.50 have his policy continued in force for the full amount of $10,000 for ten years and 172 days.

A policy for 15 years will give better results. The premium for 15 years will be $3,532.50. The dividend at that time to which the insured will be entitled is $1,509.90 and in addition a paid up policy of $3,880 upon which no payment will be required; or if the insured prefers after receiving the $1,509.90 he can have the policy continued in force for 14 years and 55 days without further payment; or if he prefers he can receive in cash $3,029.90 and surrender his policy. $3,532.50 the amount of premium paid, less $3,029.90 the amount of the cash surrender value, equals $502.60, the net cost of the $10,000 insurance for fifteen years.

The policies are incontestible by their terms and non-forfeitable after three years. This is certainly a grand feature of insurance. The above figures have been given us by Mr. Smith, the general traveling agent, and are guaranteed by company.

Weeds as Green Manure.

The growth of most weeds is mainly by exhausting the surface soil, as they get less from the atmosphere or subsoil than cultivated crops or grasses. Hence when plowed under as green manure, the earlier the work is done the better. With some weeds among clover, earlier plowing is necessary than would be desirable for the clover alone, in order to prevent weed seeds ripening. Sorrel and red root, where they appear, have to be plowed under before the clover is fully in blossom.

Celery Again.

A writer in the Rural New Yorker says that when he attempted to winter celery in boxes in his cellar in the way directed in this column recently it wilted and refused to blanch. The reason was that the soil in which the roots were was too dry. The editor of the Rural New Yorker advises this writer that the box should have been watertight for a height of three inches, with an aperture for putting in water without getting it among the tops.

Adjusting Steel Plows.

A plow to run easily for either man or team should be set so that the bottom of the plow will rest flat, the point neither turning down nor up. Some farmers never get the hang of adjusting steel plows, and we have known them to throw aside valuable implements as worthless for lack of a little skill in adjusting them to run easily.

Poorly Paid Clerks Honest.

It is not true that embezzlements, larcenies, defalcations and financial "irregularities are the work of obscure subordinates. On the contrary, it is wealthy, or fairly well off, cashiers, directors and presidents who rob the banks; trust funds are stolen by men whose position in society has put them far above suspicion of such weakness, and railroads and other great corporations are despoiled by millionaires. A poor man has very little temptation to steal ten millions or one million. His needs and desires are so limited that such a sum has few attractions for him. He knows the possession of it would be a burden, and would probably lead to his detection and punishment. His reputation for honesty and trustworthiness is the capital, and he would risk everything by one false step. Say his principles are no better nor his conscience more active than those of other men who are tempted and do fall, yet the consideration herein named will hold him back from crime into which they madly rush. The wealthy, fast-living, speculating financier who goes wrong "borrows" the funds intrusted to his care and uses them in kite-flying experiments. Wealth begets the desire for more, and he never gets enough. If he wins he returns the loan as a means of quieting his conscience, and a little [illegible] he has sufficient nerve to make a larger draft upon his neighbors' accounts. In his case the possession and use of money creates no suspicion against him. He, therefore, regards his chances of detection as extremely small and [illegible] to take them. Furthermore, [illegible] on his wide acquaintance and [illegible] to give him, if the worst should [illegible] a safe deliverance in the courts [illegible] the Canadian border.—[Boston [illegible].

The Country Boy.

[illegible] boy or girl is fane to face [illegible]

[illegible] with, she [illegible] game of draw poker [illegible] or her husband [illegible] time."

He and his wife went to Boston immediately after the marriage via Fall River on a Sound steamer. They had relatives in that city and so the bridal tour was to begin from there and extend some distance West by the way of Niagara Falls. After a month Gerald and his wife returned.

"He will be at the club, boys, to try a game of draw," was the remark of his many friends. One, two days, and a week passed, and still no Gerald appeared. "That is queer," thought every one.

Yesterday his most intimate friend met him in Broadway. He was astonished at the change. Where was the man of will power and dogmatical assertion of a month ago! Not in this Gerald.

"What is the matter, Gerald, old boy? Are you ill? Have you become a Puritan or what?" was the anxious query of his friend.

Gerald said sadly: "I have got an original wife."

"Why, did you intend to marry a counterfeit?"

"No, but she is one of the way back primitive originals, the beginners, and there is no denying it. I have sworn off poker."

"Great heavens! are you mad?"

"No, but I must tell you how it happened, how I found out I had an original wife. Before we were married she never said anything about my ways or habits, for if she had I would have told her that if I could not play draw poker at the club the match would be declared off. I congratulated myself on marrying a woman who would mould readily to my disposition, not I to hers. Three hours after the ceremony she said to me in the cabin of the Sound steamer:

"Gerald, for my sake, I want to ask a little favor of you?"

"Certainly, my dear," I answered.

"Give up draw poker and that horrid club."

"Why, it stunned me, the boldness and originality of the request.

"Madam," said I, sternly, "you married me and not my habits. They are mine and not yours, and I firmly decline your request."

"She pleaded with me, begged me not to play poker with the captain of the boat that evening in his private room, shed tears, and finally, when she saw she could not move me, kissed me tenderly and went into our stateroom. I was moved, but I resolved to play cards anyway with the captain, so as to gain my point and be my own master. I played poker until 3 o'clock in the morning and won right along. I got up and went to my state room, whistling merrily. I walked in quietly so as not to disturb my sleeping wife. I pulled off my coat and looked in the lower berth. My wife was not there. I looked in the upper berth. She was not there. What did it mean? I went out and sought the chambermaid. She had not seen my wife. I thought it was strange. I rushed back into the state room and called her name aloud. I ran out into the cabin and fairly shrieked her name. It suddenly occured to me that she had jumped over board to commit suicide because she was married to a monster! Everybody was amused on the boat, and knew nothing of her whereabouts. The engines were reversed and the boat went back several miles to see if any white floating garment could be seen on the water. None, all a quiet surface. The captain shook his head and asked me to bear up bravely, that trouble came to every man. I walked about in the cabin in front of our stateroom swearing that she was an angel and that I had killed her. I said that if I could only see her face again, if heaven would bring her back, I would be her slave, and be as a man should be to his wife. I even went so far as to get down on my knees and pray that if my hand touched another card it might wither and her spirit haunt me until I died. I asked the passengers to mob me, declaring I was a murderer. Finally, in my desperation and despair, I said:

"Let the spirit of my wife appear that I may attest to it my oaths of reformation."

"Just then my wife quietly walked out of a stateroom opposite the one we occupied. I shall not describe the scene that followed. I know she said:

'Swear not by spirit; but by my flesh and blood, which has come back to you to hold you to your oath.'

"Now, what do you think? My wife was lying on the upper berth in the opposite stateroom peeping over the skylight at me making a guy of myself. Well, I cannot go back on my word now. But she is an original wife, ain't she? Let us have some soda water."

CONSTIPATION!

There is no medium through which disease so often attacks the system as by Constipation, and there is no other ill flesh is heir to more apt to be neglected, from the fact material inconvenience may not be immediately felt from irregular action of the bowels. When there is not regular action the retention of decayed and effete matter, with its poisonous gases, soon poisons the whole system by being absorbed into it, causing piles, fistula, headache, impure blood and many other serious affections. BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS will immediately relieve, and one bottle positively cure or relieve any case of Constipation.

[illegible] the lady's [illegible] Jackson, [illegible] was in her childhood. She was a [illegible] with red hair. After [illegible] to the hermitage in Tennessee, [illegible] private secretary remained in Washington. The daughter grew. In time she became a beautiful young lady, as pleasing in manners as she was attractive in person. She was conspicuous in society. Men prominent at the time were her escorts. A brother of ex-President Polk fell in love with her, sought her hand in marriage and was accepted. He was a handsome man, and possessed of more intelligence than his brother, who served as Chief Executive. The young lady's father opposed the proposed match, and urged his daughter to accept the attentions of a Texas Congressman. The Congressman pressed his suit, and, though the young lady loved Polk, in respect to her father's wishes she consented to marry him. Polk was told of the engagment. He opposed it, and begged her, who had promised to be his bride, to disregard her father's wishes and elope with him. She consented. One afternoon while she remained alone at home, Polk called for her in a carriage, and she agreed to go with him to the residence of a minister on Capitol Hill. As the carriage containing the two was being driven along Pennsylvania avenue, her father stood in front of the old National hotel. He saw the two young people, and, rushing to the street, stopped the horses. He ordered his daughter to alight, addressed a few emphatic words to her companion, and taking her arm, hurried her to her home. In a short time her marriage to the Texas Congressman was announced.

He was an unattractive man, and was possessed of a most violent temper. The marriage was not a happy one. His habits were such that, in a comparatively short period, his money as well her own was gone. He died a few years ago, and his wife began living the second chapter of her unfortunate life—she became a government clerk.—[Washington Correspondence to the Chicago News.

"Yes, I come in after a hired man," said the old farmer as he sipped his root beer on the market yesterday, "but I've got disgusted and shan't try very hard to find one."

"What's the matter with hired men?"

"Too high-toned and important. Why, I had one last spring who rigged up an umbrella over the plow, so as not to get tanned, and he refused to eat with with the family because we stuck our knives in our mouths! At the end of a week he quit. Said that labor was ennobling and so forth, but the landscape in that vicinity offended his taste."

"Yes."

"Wall, I took on another, and he put on cuffs and polished his boots before going to work and he quit at the end of a fortnight, because we didn't have a pianner in the house. Why, that chap never got up till 7 o'clock and he insisted on going to the village to get shaved and perfumed up every evening.

The third one quit me yesterday. He wanted stained glass in his bedroom winder. He wanted me to buy him a guitar. He wanted to paint all the roofs red and put pea-green on the corn-cribs. He suggested a hog-pen with a parlor to it and spent two days of my time trying to arrange a way for the wind-mill to milk the cows. I found him writing poetry in a corn field and because I spoke up sharply he quit the job, polished up his boots and sent for a carriage to bring him to the city."—[Detroit Free Press.

THRASHED INTO MANHOOD.

Constable John Frick. That's me. A [illegible] rough to look at, but sound in-[illegible]

[illegible] of folks affect to sneer at a constable; look down on him in a way, as if [illegible] was naturally mean and no account. But Constable John Frick has a soul [illegible] him, and a heart as soft as a woman's. Indeed, he has been called chicken-hearted on account he wouldn't kick a [illegible] dog, nor tramp on a sick kitten.

But this is neither nor there.

Constable John Frick is going to tell some of his experience on duty.

I mind the day well when I received the paper to warn a certain family that they must "get out," that is, leave the house of Lawyer Craigly, because it was an awfully stinging cold day in March, when the wind seemed to be tearing things to flinders round the corners of the old frame buildings, and whistled and howled in a way to make a base burner head boss of the ranch.

Rooms 6 and 7, in a great rambling barn of a place, one of a dingy block down by the river; a stormy-looking brick building that had once been a warehouse. Now the long, narrow wilderness of store-rooms were cut into little cubby holes to live in at both ends, with just one window for light, and dark passageways to pass in and out.

I remember I thought they were miserable places for God's creatures to live in, and awful weather to put a family out on the sidewalk.

I may as well own up that Constable John Frick had "no heart" for this part of the business. Of course the landlord had a right to his rent. That's evident. If the tenants didn't pay they must go out.

All the same Constable John Frick felt mean and uncomfortable.

To save his neck he couldn't account for it, but it seemed as if something would keep on suggesting: "Suppose there is a delicate woman and a lot of little children?"

For answer, the soul of Constable John Frick kept on responding: "Putting 'em out in the cold roadway such stinging weather will be a miserable business, make the best of it," and his heart "kicked" strong against it.

But this was borrowing trouble. And it wasn't "business."

It might be that the man—Carl Sevholm was his name on the writ—would go out peaceful. I know I prayed strong it might be so, though it would be fees out of Constable John Frink's pocket if he did.

Room 6 in the rear on the ground. I had to reach it through a saloon. Curious how saloons seem to be everlastingly mixed up with poor families having to be put out into the street.

Who kept the saloon I never knew. There was a greasy-faced, fat-bellied hulk of a man, in a brown knit woolen jacket, behind the bar, and a slim young fellow sitting crouched against the wall to one side, boozy, stupid from the effect of liquor or beer.

It pretty nigh made me sick to look at this young chap; he was so froway and [illegible], as if he had been rolled in a dust heap, and then raked through a gutter.

Mr. Sevholm. As I looked at him I involuntarily said to myself: "God help your wife and children!"

The greasy-faced man jerked his thumb over his shoulder to indicate No. 6, and I rapped for admittance.

Never was so suprised in my life. Expected to find a slatternly, froway woman to matched the sodden husband, and a mess of dirty, squalling brats, tumbling about the floor in confusion.

Nothing of the kind. If you'll believe me, I found a slim-built, pale-faced little woman sitting on a low rocking chair with a wee baby on her lap, trying [illegible] of the fretful pain it was [illegible]

[illegible]

It may seem a strange admission to make, but Constable John Frick apologized for doing his duty. Actually said he was sorry for having to do it. Then he touched the wan cheek of the baby with his rough fingers, and said he hoped it would soon be well, and otherwise talked in a way some folks might have thought was ridiculous in a constable.

But then, if a man has a soft, tender heart, being a constable won't change it, you know.

When the landlord came to the 'Squire's office, four days later, and peremtorily ordered the things put out of rooms 6 and 7, Constable John Frick felt about as blue as he had ever felt in all his life. He hadn't been able to get that delicate little woman's sad face out of his mind, nor the sick baby, nor the drunken wretch of a husband.

To tell the plain truth he and his good wife had talked the matter over frequently. You see, she was a mother, and had a mother's big, tender heart in her bosom, quick as a flash to feel where children were concerned. Only that morning, when I was starting away on duty, she said, promiscuous like:

"Recollect, John Frick, if you put that poor woman and her baby out into the street such a day as this—snowing and blowing fit to kill—you needn't ever look me in the face again."

"Jane," I said, in my most dignified voice, "I must do my duty."

But Lord, what a heap of mean, cruel things we do in that same name of duty.

When the writ of expulsion was put into my hands, and the landlord said he wouldn't give another day, I felt meaner than a skunk. The weather was just fearful. It was not only biting cold, but damp and foggy, and enough gloomy to make folks in trouble bend their ideas to getting relief by self-murder.

I found the same sodden young man in the saloon, as tipsy and slouchy and dirty as before. No, come to think, not exactly the same. Now he was noisy drunk, swaggering about the place, swearing and bragging, thick-tongued and maudlin, and looking still more disgusting than when he was doubled up on the chair.

"What the —— do you want in here?" he yelled, as I was passing on to room 6.

"You dry up, Sevholm," snapped the greasy-facd man, grabbing him by the arm and swinging him back from following after me. "He's got business with your wife. Keep still—you! You're not fit for business."

But the tipsy loafer broke away and burst into the presence of his wife; and when I had explained the nature of my errand, he ranted out:

"It's all right, Elsie. I've got a place ready. I'll fetch a wagon and have the things moved right away." And out he started on a run.

"I'm glad of that," I said to his wife, as she held up her white, troubled face toward me. And just then the thought was forced upon me: "How in the world did so nice a woman become tied to a brute like this?"

"Oh, if he only will!" was the pitiful exclamation of the heart-stricken woman.

I now learned that another suite of rooms had been secured, only awaiting the payment of the first month's rent in advance, and that by the sale of a portion of the wife's best wearing apparel the needed money had been secured. I also learned that the man was a first-class workman in a business that paid exceptionally high wages, and that until he had fallen into habits of intoxication they had lived as happily and respectably as hearts could desire.

Would he return with a team and gain the new home for his family? or would he continue his drunken spree and spend the money his wife's clothing had been sacrificed to secure? I asked these questions a score of times, as I stole furtive glances at the troubled look in the woman's eyes, and noted the terrible strain her mind was in while he was gone.

The furniture was nearly all packed in readiness for removal; and I knew, though she did not tell me, that the frail wife had spent her strength in the arduous preparation.

I had told the landlord that they were ready to move, and would be surely gone that day. He was not half satisfied. He had come tearing to the office in a great stew of anger and impatience to have them thrust out forthwith. He would not grant another hour's delay, so there was no help for it; if Sevholm did not speedily appear I should be compelled to place their effects on the sidewalk.

So stating to Mrs. Sevholm, I added that I would rather take a licking than do it. With tears of thankfulness in her eyes she responded:

"You shan't be put to the pain of it. God bless you for your kindly sympathy. You are like the dear old father I once had."

Then after she'd turned her head a minute to brush away the tears that blinded her, she drew a heavy gold [illegible] from the bosom of her [illegible] held it up for me to [illegible]

[illegible]

"If this will be enough I will lend it on the chain, and you can pay it back whenever you are able. That way you won't need to lose your mother's present nor pay any interest."

She couldn't speak for thanks. Her heart was too full.

At that very minute her husband came tearing into the room before his wife could get the jewelry out of sight.

"Give that to me," he screamed. "I knew you had it all along. But you lied; lied!"

With this he struck at her in his drunken rage, and poured forth a torrent of rage and vituperation.

Then I grabbed him and yanked him backwards with a pretty rough jerk, but before I could secure him he gave me a clip under the ear that knocked me over a stool, and made another savage lunge at the defenceless woman, as she strove to get out of his way.

The blood of Constable John Frick was now up to fever heat. Generally he is a mild-tempered man, with a constitutional tendency to peace. He never could stand quiet and see a woman or child abused though; and now he tackled that maddened brute with as little compunction as he would have trampled the life out of a sne akorr at.

I knocked him down, kicked him a time or two in the ribs, and mopped up the floor with him in a way that sobered him so he fairly roared for mercy. Never gave a man such an unmerciful thrashing in my life before.

And all this time his wife, her face as white as death and holding out her arms imploring, begged for mercy on his cowardly hide.

That was womanlike, too.

"Now you get a team and move this stuff lively!" I said, as I let him crawl up off the floor.

Turning to his wife, as she stood all in a tremble, I assured her he had never had anything do him as much good as that beating would do.

And I was right, as I am able to show.

I did not see or hear anything of them except once, about three months after, when Sevholm called at the office and redeemed the chain, till as much as two years had gone by. I chanced to be walking, one evening, on a street I had not seen before, when I came to the front of a mighty pretty cottage, with a trim garden and grass lawn in front; and I stood admiring it a bit, as I have a fashion of stopping to enjoy the sight of a nice place, when a hand was laid on my shoulder real hearty, and a cheery voice cried out:

"Constable John Frick! Give me your hand!"

If you'll believe me, it was that identical loafer, Carl Sevholm!

But not the first bit of a loafer now. Not much. You wouldn't meet a smarter looking man nor a more respectable gentleman in a long day's march. It was a solid pleasure to look at him, and remember what a God-forsaken scamp he had been, not three years ago.

"Come right in and see Mrs. Sevholm!" he said, pulling me up to the side porch, all covered in pretty vines. "She'll be mighty glad to see you."

Pleased? You'd better believe it. Pleased wasn't half a name for it. The light of new-born happiness and thankful gratitude was just dancing in her bright eyes.

Ah, and wasn't she a picture! Health and rosy gladness of heart had all come back to her. Soul-numbing trouble had all gone. She was just as sweet and nice looking a lady as I ever set eyes on; and the baby, as plump and fresh as a spring robin, was toddling around like a house afire.

The house was furnished handsome, I can tell you. Everything in top apple-pie order. It was easy to see that the old miserable saloon tippling was played out for good.

When I stood up to leave, after enjoying a real pleasant chat, and promising to call again, Sevholm clasped my hand and said:

"Constable John Frick, that was an awful thrashing you gave me. My bones ached for a month. But it did me more good than anything I ever had. And I thank you for it to-day. It made a man of me. God bless you!"—[W. Whitworth, in Cleveland Leader.

[illegible] of the condition of Gen. Grant and discussing the probabilities of his death and the limit of life left to the sick man. Mrs. Sartoris and Stenographer Dawson were conversing a little distance away when Henry, the general's nurse, stepped hastily upon the piazza and spoke quietly to the physicians. He told them he thought the general was very near to death. The medical men hastily entered the room where the sick man was lying and approached his side.

Instantly upon scanning the patient's face Dr. Douglas ordered the family to be immediately summoned to the bedside. Haste was made and Mrs. Grant, Jesse Grant and wife, U. S. Grant, jr. and wife and Mrs. Fred Grant were quickly beside the general's cot. Mrs. Sartoris and Mrs. Dawson had followed the doctors in from the piazza and the entire family was present except Col. Fred Grant. A hasty summons was sent for him, but he entered the sick room while the messenger was earching for him. The colonel seated himself at the head of the bed with his left arm resting upon the pillow above the head of the general, who was breathing rapidly and with slightly gasping respirations.

Mrs. Grant calm but with intense agitation, bravely suppressed her emotion and took a seat close by the bedside. She leaned slightly upon the cot resting upon her right elbow and gazing with tear-blinded eyes into the general's face. She found there however, no token of recognition, for the sick man was peacefully and painlessly passing into another life. Mrs. Sartoris came behind her mother, leaning over her shoulder, and so witnessed the close of a life in which she had constructed a strong element of pride. Directly behind Mrs. Grant and Mrs. Sartoris and at a little distance removed stood Drs. Douglas, McCready and sands, spectators of the closing of a life their efforts and counsel had so prolonged. On the opposite side of the bed from his mother and directly before her stood Jesse Grant, and U. S. Grant jr., and near the corner of the cot, the same side as Jesse, and near to each, was the general's stenographer and private secretary, N. E. Dawson. At the foot of the bed and gazing directly into the general's face, was Mrs. Col. Fred Grant, Mrs. U. S. Grant, jr., and Mrs. Jesse Grant, while somewhat removed from the family circle, Henry, the nurse, and Harrison Tyrrel, the general's body servants, were watching the closing life of the patient and master. Dr. Newman had repaired to the hotel to breakfast and was not present. The general's little grandchildren, U. S. Grant, jr., and Nellie, were sleeping in the nursery above; otherwise the entire family household was gathered around the bedside of the dying man.

The members of the group had been summoned not a moment sooner than was prudent. The doctors noticed on entering the room and pressing to the bedside that already the purplish tinge, which is one of nature's signals of final dissolution, had settled beneath the finger nails. The hand that Dr. Douglas lifted was fast growing colder than had been the case through the night. The pulse had fluttered beyond the point where the physician could distinguish it. As the respirations grew more rapid at the close they also became less labored and almost noiseless. This fact was in its results a comfort to all the watchers by the bedside to whom was spared the sense of an agonizing or other than peaceful death.

The wife almost constantly stroked the face, forehead and hands of the dying general, and at times as a passionate longing to prevent the event so near at hand would rise within her, Mrs. Grant pressed his hands and tenderly kissed the face of her husband. Col. Fred Grant sat silently, though his bearing was that of a soldierly son at the death bed of his hero father. U. S. Grant, jr., was deeply moved. Jesse bore the scene steady and the ladies while watching with wet cheeks were silent as befitted the occasion.

The morning had passed five minutes beyond eight o'clock, and not one of the strained and waiting watchers but who could mark the nearness of the lifetide to its final ebbing. Dr. Douglas noted the nearness of the supreme moment and quietly approached the bedside and bent above it. While he did so the sorrow of the gray-haired physician seemed closely allied with that of the family. Dr. Shrady with dignified concern in the event at hand, also came near. It was seven minutes past eight o'clock and the eyes of the general were closing. His breathing grew more hushed as the last functions of the heart and lungs were hastened to the closing of the ex-president's life. A peaceable expression seemed to be deepening in the firm and strong lined face, and it was recognized as a closing comfort in the sad hearts that beat quickly under stress of loving suspense. A minute more passed and was closing as the general drew a deeper breath; there was an exhalation like that of one relieved of long and anxious tension. The members of the family [illegible]

[illegible] breakfast a moment too late and reached the cottage only in time to minister to the family sorrow and gaze upon the scarcely hushed lips of the dead general, to whom Dr. Newman's love had bound him in such close ties and relations.

New Countrymen in New York.

"It is a curious thing," said a white-haired man who has lived in New York all of his life, but who retired from active business over ten years ago, "that the countrymen one sees in New York to-day are few and far between, as far as may be judged by appearances, or very rural when they aren't counted. I have watched the people in New York streets for many years, as I have always had a fancy for studying the faces and manners of fellow-pedestrians. Even when I was a boy it was my favorite amusement to wander about the streets after business hours and stare at people who swept to and fro. Until ten years ago there was a regular influx of countrymen about this time every year. Just as sure as June came around, just so sure did hordes of cumbersomely clad and awkward people come to town. They were guyed, laughed at and ridiculed. Sketches were written about them and produced in the variety theatres, and the writers for the press brought out their follies. A short time ago the Sun called some attention to the matter by announcing the almost entire disappearance of countrymen from New York. It is an actual fact, and one that has not been noticed until the Sun spoke of it, that roughly dressed and more or less uncivilized countrymen are now the rarest of all objects to be found in New York. The whole of America seems to have become suddenly civilized, and men from a small town from the interior of any of the back woods States come to New York wearing clothes made by the big New York tailor establishments, fashionable hats and neat shoes.

"It is, indeed a matter of some difficulty to distinguish at sight an average New York man from the average young man of Keokuk, Penn Yan, or Duluth; but this is worth noting, and that is when a greenhorn does appear in the streets of New York he is one of the blackest stripe. I passed such a one yesterday, and I confess that I stopped and looked back at him; he must have been from Bayou Sara. He had an old fashioned stock such as our grandfathers used to wear, a long frock coat that reached almost to his heels, baggy trousers, buff waistcoat, and high stovepipe hat and heavy boots. The sleeves of his coat were so long that he rolled them up, and they had been rolled so long that the creases showed plainly at the ends of the sleeves. His trousers were as much too short as his sleeves were too long, but he did not seem to mind that a bit, and he stumbled along with the air of a man following a plough. That costume was once a common one in New York—that is, it was common among the men who visited the metropolis from the backwoods; but now it is so rare that, speaking of such peculiar clothes I am reminded of the hired man of whom so much has been written and said. The hired man, you know, has a particular niche in American social life, he is something between a servant and a friend. In Europe such a person is entirely unknown. There either a man is a gentleman, a tradesman, or a servant.

"On all farms, and the hired man, you know, was always prevalent on farms, it was always conceded that on Sunday, after the horses were fed and the chores done, the hired man should be what he always termed a gentleman. To this end he always renounced his working clothes and dressed up on Sunday afternoon. He usually had a black frock coat and trousers, heavy but well polished boots, a stovepipe hat, which was invariably a size or two too small for him, and which left a blood-red line across his forehead when he took it off. It was for many years the custom of the hired man to array himself in all the glory of this attire and sit in the shade of the barn doors and whittle Sunday afternoons away. At night he went to visit his best girl. A gentleman who sells mowing machines among the farmers tells me that his type of hired man has disappeared as completely as the suburban visitor of years ago. In his place is a natty young fellow who wears Derby hats, low shoes, variegated hosiery, and who dresses up every night and goes to the nearest tavern or grocery after his work is done. So you see in a few years more what are known as 'store clothes' will have revolutionized nearly all the picturesque figures of American life out of existence."—[N. Y. Sun.

[illegible] the civil war, and having acted as aide-de-camp to the governor of his state in 1861 and afterwards as colonel of the 21st Illinois volunteers, was appointed brigadier-general in the same year. While in command at Cairo, he secured Paducah, and with it the state of Kentucky. In November 1861 he fought and won the battle of Belmont, and in January of the following year conducted a reconnoissance to the rear of Columbus. He captured fort Henry on the Tennessee and pursued the confederates to fort Donelson; captured it Feb. 15. This brilliant feat elevated general Grant to the rank of major-general. Having been appointed to the command of the west district of Tennessee, he advanced up that river to Pittsburg Landing where he met a confederate force of 70,000 men. The federal army was overwhelmed crushed and dispersed, but, undismayed general Grant formed new lines, planted new batteries, and then, held the confederate in check till dark when the long expected arrival of the rear guard of 35,000 men under Gen. Buell enabled him to fight, April 6 and 7, the glorous battle of Shiloh, whence, the confederates, abandoning the field, retreated to Corinth. Gen. Grant was second in command to Gen. Halleck at the seige of Corinth, and when the latter was ordered to Washington he was appointed to the command of the department of Tennessee in which capacity he marched against Vicksburg, the so-called Gibraltar of the confederates on the Mississippi. After a long and memorable seige, this important place was surrendered unconditionally, and 37,000 prisoners, 150 cannons with an immense amount of military stores fell into the hands of the victors. Upon the defeat of Rosecrans at Chickamauga Grant was sent to repair the disaster, and on Nov. 25, 1863 he defeated Gen. Bragg at Look Out Mountain. This great victory by which East Tennessee was reduced and Kentucky saved was, perhaps, the most brillant strategic and tactical movement of the war, and placed Grant on a footing with the ablest generals of any country or of any age. A few months afterward, March 1, 1864, Grant was made commander-in-chief of the armies of the United States. His plan then was to destroy Lee's army. Washington was covered by Seigel and Richmond was manaced by Butler while Sherman in Georgia was to cut off reinforcements to Lee. Grant, with Meade's army of 150,000 men was to destroy Lee's army or send them back. On the night of Tuesday May 3, Grant crossed the Rapidan and entered the wilderness. After eleven days of bloody battles the two armies still forced each other. Fearing his supplies would be cut off Lee retired and Grant succeeded in reaching the Chickahominy. The performance of this movement with Lee's army so near, is one of the most brilliant pages in his military career. With the spring of 1865 Lee, whose resources were about exhausted, decided to assume the offensive and on the night of March 27 he massed three divisions of his troops before Fort Steadman and on Grant's right and by a sudden rush at daylight captured that important position. Before noon it was taken. On Sunday, April 2, the confederates were flanked at Big Five Forks and 6,000 men captured. The attack under Grant's direction then commenced along the whole line and the assault was so successful that on the same day his forces held the confederate intrenchments from the Appomattox above Petersburg to the river below. That afternoon Lee telegraphed Jefferson Davis that Petersburg and Richmond must be abandoned, which operation was performed that night, and on the next day, April 3, 1865, the national army entered Petersburg and Gen. Weitzel occupied Richmond. On April 9th the army of Virginia capitulated to general Grant. In 1866 Gen. Grant was promoted to the rank of general, that order being created especially for him. In August, 1867, on the suspension of secretary of war Stanton by president Johnson, Grant consented to fill the office ad interium, but the senate refused to approve the suspension and on January 13, 1868, Gen. Grant surrendered the office to Mr. Stanton on June 20, 1868. Gen. Grant was unanimously nominated for president by the republicans in June, 1868, and elected in November. In 1872 he was re-elected over Horace Greeley. After his second term of service in 1877 he left the United States to travel abroad. Upon his arrival in England he was hospitably entertained, the right of citizenship of London and other towns being conferred on him. With the details of his connection with the firm of Grant & Ward the people are familiar. It is believed the course of Ward, which deeply grieved the general, has hurried his end. General Grant was put upon the retired list by the present congress.

GENERAL GRANT.

[illegible] at Mt. McGregor in this State, went to his last rest the most illustrious son of this Republic.

To no man since its birth has the Nation paid such sovereign tributes. Not content with having placed him at the head of its armies, when upon their success depended the existence of the Union. All untried as he was in affairs of state it raised him to the greatest office in its power to give.

It is needless to recount the history of Grant as a statesman. Suffice it to say that one of his first official acts was to veto the inflation bill, passed by both houses, and thus stamped out the most dangerous and audacious heresy which has assailed our honor and prosperity as a country; and won for him that fitting title "the man of iron." Again by the popular vote was he chosen President and served the people well. And in all these high places the "Silent Man" bore himself most seemly. Modest yet dignified, honest, yet sagacious, a true man at all times and in all places. Nothing sheds a brighter lustre upon the career of the great General than the cause for which he fought, and which above all others glorifies its champion, the cause of freedom and humanity.

"Let us have peace" said the hero at the close of the mighty struggle, and to that end followed his wise policy of reconstruction.

The throbbing heart of the nation will follow him to his resting place in Riverside Park, heretofore but a place of joy —now a shrine, to which a grateful people will bear their offerings of love.

"We have lost him; he is gone;
We know him now; all narrow jealousies
Are silent, and we see him as he moved!

STIRRING THINGS UP.

Secretary Manning touched off a big gun at Washington one day last week and the shell lit and exploded in the custom house at Oswego, knocking things endwise. An order directing the dismissal of Deputy Collector of Customs H. H. Lyman, the entry and liquidation clerk, T. B. White, and three inspectors of customs, have brought Oswego politicians to a realization of the fact that there is a change of administration and the boys say that "it is no laughing matter." The salary of three inspectors is ordered reduced from three to two dollars a day. The duties of the Deputy Collector will be performed by the cashier without extra salary. The bond and entry clerk will perform the duties of the entry and liquidation clerk for $200 a year less. With this change the result will be a saving of $5,000. The Oswego custom house has long been known as a refuge and pensioning institution for political brawlers and wire pullers, as for instance, in the case of our friend Col. T. B. White who will be remembered as the man who made such a vigorous declaration for Blaine on a dry good box in our village last Fall. The abolishment of these high-salaried, unnecessary officers is a commendable act. A majority of the people of this country voted for reform last November, and they are getting it in good earnest.

GOV. HOADLY of Ohio and Roscoe Conkling are making themselves conspicuous in not sending messages of condolence to the bereaved family of Gen. Grant.

IT is confidently asserted that the New York Central has already secured control of the North River Construction company, the terminal bonds and float[illegible] debt of the West Shore road and [illegible] the West Shore company is practically in the hands of the Central.

AN investigation into the system of convict labor in South Carolina has resulted in revealing the grossest cruelty on the part of overseers. Sixteen deaths among convicts have taken place during the past six months from over-work and brutal treatment. The hiring out of convict labor is sure to result in the worst abuses, and is one of the worst forms of slavery. It ought not to be tolerated in a civilized country.—[New York Observer.

WE cannot refrain from saying that it seems a great mistake that the family of General Grant have consented to make Central Park his last resting place. The selection suggests no appropriateness. In New York General Grant met with financial ruin. Had Washington, the capitol city of our country, or even West Point where the hero first attained his great military tactics, been chosen as the burial place, the world could not but have expressed satisfaction.

AN interview in the New York Tribune says:—"Governor Cheney is much interested in the protective tariff and is one of the managers of the new American Protective Tariff League. Talking on the tariff question, he said: "Our factory workers all over the country need to be aroused to what the free trade agitators are insiduously doing, in the way of breaking down the market for labor in this country. As things are going, labor will presently be reduced to a par with labor abroad. That means a double disaster, for our laboring people, receiving high wages, have been large consumers of our products. Under low wages they will be unable to buy largely and all business will suffer. Besides, the people of this country, having once tasted the beneficial results of a protective tariff, will never peaceably consent to return to the condition of foreign labor. There is no more comparison between American and English operatives than there is between the appearance of our mechanics as they enter their shops on a week day in their greasy clothes and as they enter church in their best on Sunday."

STATE AND VICINITY.

Syracuse Democrats have organized a Roswell P. Flower club.

Paul Young, aged 25, was drowned while bathing at Utica Sunday.

Several blocks in the business portion of the town of Bergen, Genesee county, N. Y., were destroyed by fire at an early hour Monday morning.

Hon. William C. Rowley, one of the most prominent members of the Monroe county bar, and well known throughout the state, died in Rochester on Monday.

Onondaga county fair will open Sept. 22. Balloon ascensions are to be made on Wednesday and Thursday and Governor Hill has been invited to deliver an address on the last day of the fair.

Boat owners at the Thousand Islands are indignant at the enforcement of the law compelling them to carry a light between sunrise and sunset on the St. Lawrence.

The floating population of Niagara Falls since the park was made free is just about equal to the stationary population, and Sundays it exceeds it.

Thomas A. Frederic, a broker of Syracuse, was caught to the extent of over $1,000 in the failure of Babcock & Andrews, and last Saturday attached the firm's furniture to satisfy his claim.

The land belonging to Cornell University comprises 240 acres, of which 120 is especially devoted to the farm. Not originally fertile, it has been made sufficiently so to yield $6,000 annually in gross products.

Natural gas was struck in Ithaca in the heart of the village while a well was being driven for water Monday. There is a powerful odor of petroleum experienced. Oil operators declare the presence of every indication of oil. Much speculative excitement is developing.

John Travis, a well-known resident of Weedsport, committed suicide by hanging himself in his barn in the rear of his residence, Sunday. The deceased was about sixty-five years of age, and has been despondent since the death of his son Eddie, who died at St. Joseph's hospital, in Syracuse, a short time ago.

The peppermint acreage in Wayne county is immense this year, surpassing that of any former year. It is reported that there are at least 8,000 more acres devoted to its cultivation in and around Lyons than ever before, and there is said to be a proportionate increase in Arcadia, Sodus, Galen and other towns in the eastern part of the country.

[illegible] It is not work that kills men. It is irregularity of habits and mental worry. No man in good health frets at his work. Bye and bye when the bank of vigor suspends, these men will wonder how it all happened, and they will keep wondering until their dying day unless perchance, some candid physician or interested friend will point out to them how by irregularity, by excessive mental effort, by constant worry, and fret, by plunging in deeper than they had a right to go, they have produced that loss of nervous energy which almost invarably expresses itself in a deranged condition of the Kidneys and liver, for it is a well-known fact that the poison which the kidneys and liver should remove from the blood, if left therein, soon knocks the life out of the strongest and most vigorous man or woman. Daily building up of these vital organs by so wonderful and highly reputed a specific as Warner's safe cure, is the only gurantee that their strength will be equal to the labors daily put upon them.

Mr. Kelly has nervous dyspepsia, we learn, indicating, as we have said, a break-down of nerve force. His case should be a warning to others who, pursuing a like course, will certainly reach a like result.—[The Sunday Herald.

Personal and Political.

Editor Purcell, of the Union and Advertiser, who accidentally called the late Governor Cleveland a "moral leper," evidently would say it was a typographical mistake, and he is now wrestling with italics in praise of the President's appointments. "Some day, some day, some day I will pay thee." Behold, how good and how pleasant it is, &c., &c., &c.—[American Rural Home.

The President contemplated leaving Washington next Saturday on his vacation. The death of General Grant has made it necessary for him to change his program. He will not leave town for that purpose until after the burial of the ex-president.

Funeral Notes.

Ex-President Arthur left Montreal last night for New York to attend the funeral.

Gen. Benj. F. Butler has consented to deliver a memorial oration at Lowell, Mass.

President Cleveland and his cabinet have signified their intention of attending the funeral.

Vice President Hendricks has designated the following Senators to represent that body at the funeral ceremonies: Justin Morrill, John Sherman, John A. Logan, J. Donald Cameron, Wade Hampton, W. M. Ransom, Jos. E. Brown, J. G. Harris and John F. Miller of California.

The Funeral.

MT. MCGREGOR, July 24—The funeral arrangements, as decided upon to-day, are that services for the family shall be held here at 11 a. m. on Aug. 4. They will be conducted from the veranda of the cottage, and Dr. Newman will officiate. Gen. Grant, only a few days before he died, wrote to him requesting him to do so, and the family have already asked him to conduct the ceremonies. He will deliver a funeral discourse. The train conveying the remains will leave the mountain at 1 p. m., and will be drawn by the same engine that brought the General up here. It will arrive at Saratoga at 2 o'clock, taking an hour for the run that is usually made in forty minutes. The casket will be put into a hearse at the road crossing just beyond the depot, and will be driven to the Delaware and Hudson depot, where it will be put on a special train, which will leave Saratoga at 2½ and will arrive in Albany at 4½. The body will then be taken to the Capitol, where it will lie in state until nearly noon on Wednesday, Aug 5. The funeral train for New York leaves at just 12 o'clock, and arrives in the city at 4:30. Then the body will be taken to the City Hall, where it will lie in state until Saturnay, Aug. 8, when the interment will take place in Riverside Park. Dr. Newman will conduct the burial services on this occasion.

GENERAL NEWS.

In Norfolk, Va., during a destructive storm Sunday evening, two men were killed by lightning and two severely injured.

It is said negotiations for a treaty of commerce between Spain and the United States are still being carried on at Madrid.

Friday night eight incendiaries fired a number of houses in Ulin, Russia, and property valued at 600,000 roubles was destroyed.

It is denied in London that Beatrice's wedding has created discord in the relations of the royal families of England and Germany.

In Fredericton, N. B., Rev. John Sampson was arrested Saturday for horse stealing. He made an unsuccessful attempt to kill the officer when arrested.

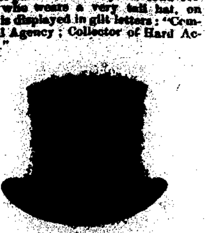
[illegible] with the arrangement that if they refuse to pay, their names will be entered on the circulars sent out to the agency's [illegible]. If this does not accomplish the desired purpose, a collector is sent out to visit the delinquent. If he still refuses he is called on either at his business place or house by a second collector, who wears a very tall hat, on which is displayed in gilt letters: "Commercial Agency; Collector of Hard Accounts."



This man calls every day until some arrangement is made satisfactory to both parties, or till the debt is paid. The collector's daily calls soon attract the attention of people, and his business is fully defined on his hat.

This process has become a necessity as a checkmate to that class of people who, able to pay, do not do so until compelled and who have only derision for the old and ordinary methods.

The magnitude of this army which favor a merchant until he insists on settlement and who then shift their patronage to another dealer, is appalling.

The leverage of the U. S. Commercial agency system is not intended to apply to worthy or unfortunate people, but to those who can and prefer not to meet honest claims. It is said to do its work more effectually than dynamite.

It is a step gained when business men organize themselves for protection against an evil which under the seemingly necessary credit system has grown to such enormous proportions, and a marked change in methods will result to the dismay of the D. B's. This scheme is said to work first rate in bringing old-timers to the front.

Each merchant that becomes a member of this agency will be well protected and the best attention shown to their bills that are left in our office for collecting which is legitimate in its course of dealings as well as successful.

Let it be understood that this is an entirely different system from those which have heretofore established themselves in this place. Mr. Thurston, the assistant manager can be seen at the Lewis House. Office hours from 3 a. m. to 9 a. m. and from 12 to 2 p. m. and from 6 to 8 in the evening.

Cheese Market.

(FROM THE UTICA HERALD.)

AT UTICA July 27.

We have seldom seen such a dull market as to-day brought forth. Not until 5:30 p. m. were any prices to be heard of and then they were not satisfactory. In truth there is nothing satisfactory about such a market. Buyers claimed that they lost money last week and could not take the risk of doing so this week. Salesmen, on the other hand, claimed that the cows are shrinking in milk very rapidly, and that they are not getting as much milk from the same number of cows as they did at this time last year. And last year it will be remembered was an exceptional one for shrinkage. It is explained in several ways. The cows were turned out too early on account of lack of hay, and they grubbed the pastures just as the grass was coming up, and so destroyed the roots. Pastures, therefore, are thin, notwithstanding all the rain they have had. And this year dairy products are so low that it will not pay anyone to feed extra, no matter how much milk he might get from it.

Transactions of the day are as follows: Five lots, 500 boxes, at 6¼c.; 65 boxes, at 6½c.; 17 lots, 1,850 boxes, at 6¾c.; 55 lots, 5,900 boxes, at 7c.; 3 lots, 289 boxes, at 7¼c.; 9 lots, 1,654 boxes, at 7¼c.; and 5 lots, 715 boxes, at 7⅜c. Sales 10,953 boxes; commissions, 2,213 boxes; total 13,166. Ruling price 7c. One year ago the sales were 12,-083 boxes, ruling price 9½c.; two years ago, 12,-580 boxes, ruling price 9½c.

LITTLE FALLS, July 27

CHEESE.—Salesmen were almost stunned upon learning that prices had dropped fully one cent per pound since last week. Trade dragged and factorymen could hardly make up their minds to sell at the prices offered. But it was no use, buyers had a bad deal in New York last week. Inquiries for the cause of so great a depression were frequent, but no one appeared to give any explanation that was very satisfactory. As a rule factorymen sold lighter quantities than usual, fully realizing, however, that this is no time to hold stocks. But having sold liberal amounts for several weeks past, they were prepared to make light shipments this week. The June cheese are now gone from factories in this section, almost without exception, and some have sold three to five days of their July make. Trade to-day is as follows:

Lots.	Boxes.	Price.
1	77	6 cts
1	83	6½cts
53	3,289	6¾cts
23	1,607	7 cts
1	66	7¼cts
5	418	p. t.
22	1,359	Com
105	6,899
Farm Dairy	600
Total	7,499

FARM DAIRIES.—There were 600 boxes farm cheese sold, the range in price being 6@7½c. The latter price was paid but for one lot, the ruling figure being 6½c.

BUTTER.—Fifty-two packages of creamery butter sold at 16¾@17c., nearly all at the former price. Twenty packages farm dairy sold at 15@16½c.

AT FULTON.

The market was rather quiet here this week owing to the decline in price. Twenty-eight factories offered 2,957 boxes. A few boxes were bought at Utica ruling, 7 cents, but the bulk was held over. The price last year was 9 cents, two years ago 9½ cents.

[illegible] Little Falls and Syracuse [illegible] excursions. Bands of music [illegible] Little Falls, [illegible] and [illegible] before 12 o'clock the throng was so great that no man could number. It didn't take long to learn that this was a picnic; tables were set throughout the grove covering scores of acres, and you could not turn without stumbling over one. A large number soon took to the water and the dozen or more steam yachts, besides the innumerable row boats were kept busy carrying passengers. The bathing houses were well patronized. The numerous handsome cottages were crowded with invited guests all day long. The young folks lingered longest about the dancing platform where unusual good music was furnished. The hotels were all crowded and even the monster Algonquin for once found its space too small. During the day the "Will Douglas" took parties to South Bay, a quiet, cool retreat fanned by the lake breezes which gain momentum from an unobstructed passage. The day passed without any disturbance or accident, and taken as a whole it was a very orderly crowd. Beacon Beach has many attractive points and is fast growing into popular notice. Later in the day, a small party took passage in the new steamer "Alice" for an extended trip around the lake, landing at North Bay, where from the balcony of the Lake View House the finest view of this lovely lake is seen. A pleasant hour was spent at this delightful retreat now filled with summer guests.

The Bucket Shop Failure.

SYRACUSE, July 25.—The failure yesterday of Babcock & Andrews, proprietors of probably the biggest "bucket shop" in the State, is for $500,000 or more. They were short about 600,000 barrels of oil. Their assets are estimated at $50,000. The firm's principal office was in this city and they had branches at Canastota, Oneida, Rome, Utica, Little Falls, Herkimer, Richfield Springs, Gloversvile, Amsterdam, Schenectady, Albany, Troy, Saratoga, Balston Spa, Glenns Falls, Newburgh, Poughkeepsie, Hudson, Rondout, Cazenovia, Catskill, Waterville, Fulton, Oswego, Watertown, Ogdensburg, Adams, Clyde, Rochester, Medina, Lockport, Buffalo, St. Catharines, Ont., Hamilton, Ont., Toronto, Ont., Cortland, N. Y., and Ithaca, N. Y. A line of twenty-five eastern offices also report to the Albany office. The manager of the head office here says that they lost $75,000 on the May wheat bulge; $65,000 on the oil rise three months ago, and $25,000 in oil, and $7,000 in New Jersey Central yesterday.

They could have got through after all, only they were short 600,000 barrels of oil at 79c. and below. They figure their assets at a nominal rate, mostly in office furniture and they have $100,000 in customers' notes which are almost valueless. The firm consisted of Myron M. Babcock, an old Central railroad conductor, and Wm. D. Andrews, formerly an insurance clerk in this city. They started business in Troy, N. Y., in 1882, with a capital of $10,000. They claim to have been worth a year ago $150,000 and are now penniless. The bucket shop players all over the State are badly bit.

Mr. W. C. Tucker, the manager of the Fulton office of the above firm said yesterday in reply to a TIMES reporter:

"The office here will not be closed up. It is expected soon to pass into the hands of other Syracuse parties, who will continue business. The firm are indebted to customers in Fulton less than $800. All deals will be closed at once, and all liabilities paid as far as possible."

Life without a Newspaper.

Once upon a time a certain man got mad with the editor and stopped his paper. The next week he sold his corn at four cents below the market price. Then his property was sold for taxes, because he didn't read the sheriff's sale. He was arrested and fined $8 for going hunting on Sunday, simply because he didn't know it was Sunday, and he paid $8 for a lot of forged notes that had been advertised two weeks and the public cautioned not to negotiate for them. He then paid a big Irishman, with a foot like a forge hammer, to kick him all the way to the newspaper office, where he paid four years' subscription in advance, and had the editor sign an agreement to knock him down and rob him if he ever ordered his paper stopped again. Such is life without a newspaper. —[N. Y. Newsdealer.

Hotel Improvements.

Under the new management the Lewis House is undergoing many beneficial improvements. Several rooms in the house have been elegantly refurnished and made to look cheerful and inviting. Then to the main hall including the porter's room, which was disfigured by the recent fire, has been repaired. The sample room will be enlarged, and in the east corner of the room fronting Cayuga street, which has heretofore been used as a pool room, an elegant office will be fitted up and used by Leonard & Wilson as a livery office. New closets will be placed on every floor of the house. [illegible] Burt will spare no [illegible] everything about the [illegible] and convenient [illegible] new home of [illegible]

The tobacco crop in the vicinity of Hannibal is reported as looking well.

The Presbyterian Sunday school are picnicing a few miles down the river today at a pleasant spot called "Woody Dell."

As soon as the news of Grant's death reached Fulton last Thursday, bells were tolled and the flag on the opera house placed at half mast.

Our exchanges are filled with kind words and letters of sympathy from all parts of the continent on the death of our foremost citizen.

The strawberry crop of Oswego county brought from $80,000 to $90,000. T. H. Collar of New Haven had three acres of berries, and received $1,100.

James Dobbins of Lower Oswego Falls, while at work in the factory last night, lost the fore finger of his right hand by being caught in the machinery.

By recent law passed, no district school can be kept open during a session of a teacher's institute. In violation of this provision a teacher forfeits pay during such session.

Now it is that the small boy slicketh up and presenteth himself at the tabernacle and demandeth a lesson leaf and a comfortable seat in the Sunday school, for verily the picnic season is at its height.

Rev. Mr. Phillips foreign missionary to Asia, who is spending a vacation in this country, gave an interesting talk on the missionary subject to the Baptist congregation last Sunday evening.

THE TIMES was in error last week in stating that Chas. VanValkenburg of this village had been arrested for complicity in the burglary at the opera house stores recently. It should have been Frank VanValkenburg.

A prominent and active business man of this place made the remark the other day that he "honestly believed that the population of Fulton would increase two thousand in the next five years." We can only hope that this prediction may prove true.

J. R. Joslin, president of S. A. Wood's Machine company of Boston, New York, Chicago and St. Louis, was here last week to look over Gilbert's railway swing saw, a valuable new improvement. After a thorough test at the Oswego Manufacturing company's shops, he expressed his entire satisfaction with its working and will at once begin to manufacture them. The Standard Oil company's shops have ordered a number of these machines. A. G. Gilbert, of Fulton, is the patentee.—[Fulton Cor. Standard.

A TIMES representative spent a few pleasant moments in Mr. Style's studio the other day and was greatly impressed with a marine sketch which he has just finished for a Syracuse party. There was also a specimen of decorative painting on plush, executed by the skillful hand of Mrs. J. T. Sheridan. The design is that of a grape vine some two yards in length, ladened with rich clusters of white grapes and surrounded by large dewy looking leaves. So real and fresh is this painting in appearance that one is almost tempted to reach out and pick the lucious fruit. Mrs. Sheridan shows great ability in this art and wherever her work goes it meets with commendable and deserving praise even among the severest critics. This piece of work goes to a party in New York.

South Scriba.

SOUTH SCRIBA, July 28.—A serious accident occurred here Saturday in the shooting of Dr. Phelps. The Scriba club were having a glass ball shoot at the doctor's and at the time of the accident the doctor was "tending trap." Charles Coe of North Scriba was at the score, and in putting a shell into the gun, in some unexplainable way the gun was discharged the shot taking effect in the right side and arm of the doctor, causing a serious if not a fatal wound. Drs. Pardee and Hall of Fulton were there on short notice, and every thing that could be, was done for the sufferer. He remains about the same. Dr. Pardee attends him. Dr. Phelps has lived here about five years and has become very popular, and the accident has cast a gloom over the whole community.

Police Court News.

Peter Briggs was arrested last Sunday for public intoxication. He was arraigned before Justice Arvin Rice and fined $8 or 8 days in the O. P. Paid.

For several days a delapidated specimen of the genus homo has been roaming around town obliging people to listen to his mournful wail of "'ny-umbrellers-to-mend?" Last Monday he secured a contract and from the profits of his job he proceeded to celebrate its successful completion, and got full, eventually landing in jail. Owing to his inability to find $5 to deposit with the court he was remanded to his cell in the village bastile.

On The Defensive.

OSWEGO, July 27.—On Wednesday next the Rev. Daniel O'Connell, pastor of St. John's Catholic church in this city, will go to Albany to answer charges of drunkenness and seduction. For some time past he has been busy preparing a defence. Yesterday at both masses men were stationed in the vestibule of the church and each male member of the congregation was asked if he had ever seen anything unseemly in Father O'Connell's conduct since he has been connected with the church. If he answered in the negative, he was requested to sign a paper to that effect. Father O'Connell said that he intended to pay off the church debt and build a schoolhouse, and declared that he would remain in charge of the parish. There is great interest in the approaching trial.

The Street Railway.

At the meeting of the managing board of directors of the proposep street railway on Monday evening, they accepted the proposition of Henry McTighe, an experienced contractor of New York, to build and equip the road complete, with steel rails and first class cars. As soon as the board of trustees grant the right of way at a meeting, to be held August 7, active operations will be begun.

New Foundry.

J. M. Campbell of this village began work this morning in his new foundry on First street, adjoining Pearman's machine shop. Mr. Campbell is well known in Fulton, having been connected with different foundries for several years, and all work done by him can be relied upon. The new foundry should be liberally patronized. The first heat will be taken on Friday. Attention is called to his advertisement in another column.

Waste Not, Want Not.

The principle of the old merchant's injunction to a young lad just entered his employ—"Untie the strings: do not cut them"—is of wide application. The man who cuts the strings of packages he opens, leaving a useless lot of ends and knots, is likely to be more or less in debt and living from hand to mouth. He has not been taught to save and the wastage of littles keep him poor, for it extends into every item of income and expenditure. The littles saved by investments of clothing at Kent & Miller's, 18 and 20 South Salina street, amount to much in the aggregate. Don't neglect the opportunity to save when comfort and elegance and complete satisfaction go with it.

We ask those who are back on subscription to remit or call and settle. We are always ready to assist you through our columns if deserving; then why not reciprocate.

Quite a serious accident took place near the Gilberts Mills cheese factory the other day. As Clinton Burrett's and and Linnet Turner's wagons coming from opposite directions neared the last turn toward the factory it became the ambition of the drivers to see which should make the turn first and come in ahead. The result was a collision at the corner by which the driver of Mr. Burrett's wagon was thrown out. His team being free had no intention of quitting the race but after running a short distance brought up against the rear end of S. Byer's wagon and with such force as to throw Mr. Byer over his dashboard and onto his horses which commenced to kick and cut Mr. Byer in the head so severely that he is laid up in consequence.

COUNTY COMMENT.

Interfering with the Mail.

Mrs. Hannah Althouse, of Oswego Falls, who was taken to Oswego last week by deputy marshall Ward charged with interfering with the mail, had an examination before commissioner Getty Monday. The complainant is W. W. Wells, a brother-in-law of Mrs. Althouse. He testified on the examination that sometime last September Mrs. Althouse came out into the tobacco lot where he was at work and handed him a letter with the remark that she had opened it by mistake, and supposed he would send her to jail. He told her he wouldn't do anything of the kind if that was the case. Mrs. Althouse's version of the affair is that one Harriet VanBuren had been visiting the two families, and had returned to her home in Canada. The defendant was expecting to hear from her, when one day Mr. Althouse, who sells milk, came into the house and tossed his wife a letter saying, "There's a letter from Canada." Without stopping to look at the address the defendant hastily tore it open, and on discovering that it was addressed to Mr. Wells made haste to hand it to him. Since that time the families have had a falling out and Mr. Wells caused her arrest.

Trustee Meeting.

The Water Works.

At the last meeting of the board of trustees, a contract was closed with J. W. Pratt, president of the Fulton waterworks company, to furnish thirty-two hydrants for fire purposes, under a water pressure of some 125 feet. The water company contracted with Hinds, Moffett & Co. to build the entire works, furnishing some six miles of underground pipe. Work was commenced this morning at the spring. Contractor Wm. Patrick of Phœnix, an experienced man, has charge of the work. The works are expected to be finished by Nov. 1st.

SPECIAL MEETING.

Board of Trustees.

FULTON, July 18, 1885.

Board met pursuant to a call of the President. Present President Waugh and Trustees Bradford, Chase and Kendrick.

Mr. N. N. Stranahan appeared before the Board and presented an application from the Fulton and Oswego Falls Street Railway Co., for the consent of the Board of Trustees to the construction of a street rail road from the inter-section of Second and Oneida Streets, along Oneida-st., to First-st., whence along First-st. to Broadway and thence along Broadway to the Bridge, over the Oswego River.

Mr. Johnson came in.

On motion of Mr. Kendrick the application was received and ordered to be placed on file, and the 7th day of August, 1885, at 8 o'clock P.M. at the Police Court Room, was fixed as the time and place where the said application will be first considered, and that the Clerk publish the notice of such application as required by law, but the expense thereof to be borne by the said Railway Company.

On motion the Board adjourned.

[illegible] the best condition for [illegible]. When all our wheat [illegible] with a cradle farmers could [illegible] cutting when the earliest [illegible] in the best condition and so [illegible] the ripest spots in the [illegible]. heavier [illegible] the grain was the most back- [illegible] was then the general practice [illegible] wheat to get pretty hard be- [illegible] and many believe that in [illegible] condition wheat will make the [illegible] quantity of the best quality of [illegible].

Now, [illegible] wheat with a large [illegible] and generally binding by machinery, it is not feasible to select and [illegible] the earliest spots first. When a [illegible] reaper will cut from 12 to 15 acres a day there is not much chance for cutting the riper spots first, and, as it is all bound before it falls from the machine there is no other way than to let it dry out and cure in the bundle and in the shock.

Just at what stage in the process of maturing, wheat is in the condition to make the most and best flour is one of mooted questions that have never yet been fully settled. Some contend that wheat is in the best condition while still in a partially doughy state, before it will readily shell from the head when rubbed in the hand. Others contend, just as decidedly, that wheat should be so ripe as to shell freely before cutting.

Wheat left standing until dry and hard, will generally be found more shrunken at threshing than that which has been cut in a less mature condition, especially if the weather is hot and dry during the later stages of ripening, because it will dry out much more rapidly, standing with the heads isolated then when bound up in bundles and packed together in shocks. But does it lose anything of value in the flour, anything but water? Are any portions of the wheat's ingredients rendered less soluble or nutritious by sudden drying? Will the same variety of wheat under similar conditions show more or less albuminoids in the flour, cut partially ripe than when cut fully ripe. These are important questions in order to determine the question, when to cut wheat, and it is for those connected with the agricultural experiment stations to solve them.

After wheat is cut and shocked, it will cure more rapidly and thoroughly in small shocks than in the barn, if protected from wetting by rain. At least, it will cure more naturally through the effects of the sun's heat and by the wind than by the means of partial fermentation in the mow. But it is not safe to leave grain long in the shocks, especially in catching weather, unless the shocks are so constructed as to turn the water.

Farmers have various devices for capping the shocks for this purpose. We used to practiced this one: Set up eight or ten bundles, compactly, in two rows and use two bundles for caps. Bind the cap bundles; tight near the butts; divide the tops in the middle, breaking them down to the band, then place each bundle over half the shock, butts up, tying the butts of the two bundles together. Shocks set up in this way will stand a long time, shedding rain very well.

Where wheat can be sufficiently cured to thrash easily, in the shock, much labor may be saved by drawing directly to machine, without mowing or stacking.—[American Rural Home.

FACTS FOR FARMERS.

If apples have set very thickly whip some off.

Nothing can surpass succulent grass as a milk-producing food.

Late potatoes are more subject to the ravages of the bugs than are the early crops.

Feed a teaspoonful of ground flaxseed once a week to each fowl and see how nice the feathers will come.

Young chickens, turned in the garden will eat up all the bugs and insects; but keep the fowls out, as they will do more damage than good.

Unfermented manure is very injurious to young trees, in fact any trees. If the season is wet, a soft, rapid growth through the summer will be likely to result in winter killing.

A farmer near Ithica, Wis., has sued a bee-keeper for injury done his pastures by bees "trespassing" thereon, and the result of the suit is being anxiously awaited by bee keepers.

[illegible] bark lice, Prof. Cook recommends the following: Put a quart of [illegible] and a gallon of water into a [illegible] to boiling, and then, [illegible] a pint of kerosene. [illegible]

[illegible] of the peach-growing. From the upper Ohio valley and the lake states there comes but one report; it tells of trees all dead, whole orchards, even in the most sheltered situations, having succumbed to the severe freezings. In New England there was much winter killing, and the few surviving trees that bloomed were stripped of their blossoms by the late frosts of spring. New York and Pennsylvania shared in a like experience.

In Maryland, Delaware and New Jersey, where the peaches of commerce are grown, the bloom was good, and indications point to a crop slightly above the average. The cold, backward spring, with late frosts, has injured the otherwise favorable prospects in Virginia and North Carolina.

Georgia and all the Gulf states report condition unusually high. In the former state many correspondents claim that the outlook is for the largest crop ever known. Tennessee and Kentucky likewise report very favorable conditions, while in the west and northwest the almost universal expression is, "no blooms" and "tree dead."

A Good Word for Our Climate.

The advent of disagreeable weather in spring is always seized upon as a pretext for general denunciation of the intolerable climate prevalent in this part of the country; and people otherwise most loyal and patriotic do not hesitate to say that we have about the most atrocious climate on the face of the earth. But such wild talk is both foolish and untrue. It cannot be denied that our climate has faults, serious faults. Its changes are capricious and sudden. It does not prevent that unvarying regularity which in theory it should present. It makes large drains on the vitality, while even its unrivalled ozone does not always repay; and it certainly appears to produce many disorders of the throat and lungs which are comparatively rare in many other countries.

But when all this is admitted, it still remains true the climate of the Atlantic seaboard is healthful in the highest degree. As a general thing, people live and thrive in it. Take up any record of deaths in a paper of the New England or Middle States, and it will be seen that the average age of deceased persons is very high. Indeed the peculiarities of the climate beget a hardiness that is a most valuable aid to longevity. People who live in a softer and more equable climate may possibly pass a more pleasant existence. But they are neither as well fitted to perform the duties of life, nor as likely to live to a good old age.

Nor is our climate such a breeder of consumption as is generally supposed. As a matter of fact, some consumptives from the East who go to South California for relief find that its soft, enervating temperature only hastens their malady and they are obliged to hurry back to a cold northern region. The truth is that a cold or even a capricious climate will not cause pulmonary disease if proper precautions are taken to guard against it. In its recent Adirondack correspondence the Tribune has shown how much benefit consumptives may derive by spending a winter in that region, although such a course would seem to be contrary to all accepted ideas. But it is not necessary to go to the Adirondacks for health. With all its drawbacks our own city is by nature one of the healthiest regions in the world, and no one who faithfully observes the laws of health need fear its climate.—[New York Tribune.

A great deal of attention should be given to the proper airing of the mattress every morning, and at least once a week a stiff brush should remove the dust which will accumulate, even in the best ordered house around and under the tufts of cotton, or the bits of leather or whatever is used to tack the mattress with. Attention should also be directed to the edge of the mattress, where the braid is sewed, for dust sifts under that.

WATCH THE KIDNEYS.

They are the most important secretory organs. Into and through the Kidneys flow the waste fluids of the body, containing poisonous matter taken out of the system. If the Kidneys do not act properly this matter is retained, the whole system becomes disordered and the following symptoms will follow: Headache, weakness, pain in the small of back and loins, flushes of heat, chills, with disordered stomach and bowels. You can thoroughly protect the Kidneys by BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS, and when any of these symptoms manifest themselves you can quickly rid yourself of them by this best of all medicines for the Kidneys. BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS are sold everywhere at $1 per bottle, and one bottle will prove their efficacy.

Hardened Liver.

Five years ago I broke down with kidney and liver complaint and rheumatism.

Since then I have been unable to be about at all. My liver became hard like wood; my limbs were puffed up and filled with water.

All the best physicians agreed that nothing could cure me. I resolved to try Hop Bitters; I have used seven bottles; the hardness had all gone from my liver, the swelling from my limbs, and it has worked a miracle in my case; otherwise I would have been now in my grave.

J. W. MOREY, Buffalo, Oct. 1 1881.

Poverty and Suffering.

"I was dragged down with debt, poverty and suffering for years, caused by a sick family and large bills for doctoring.

I was completely discouraged, until one year ago, by the advice of my pastor, I commenced using Hop Bitters, and in one month we were all well, and none of us have seen a sick day since, and I want to say to all poor men, you can keep your families well a year with Hop Bitters for less than one doctor's visit will cost. I know it."

DESTROY THAT SIGN.

One may feel that he's getting old, but he naturally dislikes that anything about his appearance should advise others of the fact. Yet nothing does this so effectually as thin and falling hair. Helping a Pretty Girl.

May be a man feels happy and proud and flattered and envied and blessed among men when he sees a pretty girl trying to raise a window of a railway car, and jumps up and gets ahead of the other boys and says:

"Allow me?" oh so courteously, and she says: "Oh, if you please, I would be so glad," and the other male passengers turn green with envy, and he leans over on the back of the seat and tackles the window in a knowing way with one hand, if peradventure he may toss it airily with a simple turn of the wrist but it kind of holds on, and he takes hold with both hands; but it sort of doesn't go up to any alarming extent, and he pounds it with his fist, but it only seems to settle a little closer in place, and then he comes around and she gets out of the seat to give him a fair chance, and he grapples that window and bows up his back, and tugs and pulls and sweats and grunts and strains, and his hat falls off and his suspender buttons fetch loose and his waistcoat buckle parts, and his face gets red and his feet slip, and people laugh and an irreverent young man in a back seat groans every time he lifts, and cries:

"Now then, all together!" as if in mockery. And he bursts his collar button, and the pretty young lady, vexed at being made so conspicuous, says in her iciest manner:

"Oh, never mind, thank you; it does not make any difference," and calmly goes and sits down in another seat, and that worried man gathers himself together and reads a book upside down—oh, doesn't he feel just good!

GOLD [illegible]

[illegible]
Here like flowers on his tomb,
[illegible] tear
[illegible]
Would forever make them bloom.

Thrilled by death's appalling knock,
Here we shudder where we stand,
For the tidings send a shock,
Like the rifting of the rock,
That upheaveth all the land.

All our glory's swept away,
And the pulse of pride is still,
And the gladness of the day
Is a phantom of dismay
On the brow of sorrow's hill.

The hoary years shall bow the head
To Grant's immortal name,
And heroes lead as once he led,
And on their country's glory shed
The lustre of his fame.

Serene and calm as Autumn's eve
Beneath a tender sky,
His creed sublime was to forgive.
He taught mankind the way to live.
And showed them how to die.

ROBERT STEPHENSON'S DREAM, And Dora Morrow's Interpretation.

[BY THE WANDERING JEW.]

Written for THE TIMES.

The clinic room of the city hospital on —— street was filled with the rank and file of our coming physicians and surgeons, awaiting the first lecturer of the morning session. This class was like all others of the same nature, full of animal spirits, cynical, egotistical and given to indiscretions. The room was small, and the seats, placed on a sharp incline reached to the tall ceiling, thus placing the students almost over "the pit," a space allotted to the operating table. A door led from the pit into the hall of the surgical ward of the hospital and through the entrance came the lecturers, and the subjects for each clinic. Just as the hands of the clock reached nine, the door opened and Dr. Gains—the great specialist of brain disorders—entered. His commanding presence and grey hairs received the respect they demanded, for the students ceased their horse play, and were all attention. Advancing to the table, the doctor laid aside his hat and the small case of instruments he carried.

"Gentlemen," he said, "I am here this morning to perform an ordinary operation—trepanning—but I am sure that you have never seen, and may never see again, a parallel case. The patient was admitted here three months ago, suffering from a comminuted fracture of the skull, and since that time he has to all intent, been dead. He has gained in flesh and strength, but his food has been forced into the stomach. You will see him a sound man physically, but bereft of the better part of man—the intellect. The loss of mind power is caused by the broken fragments of bone pressing upon the brain, and in this case both hemispheres are affected. Some cases of skull fracture we have had here, have caused only a partial loss of the intellect, and by the use of stimulants we have been able, temporarily, to make a thinking man of the subject, even before the aggressive bones were removed. In this case stimulants are of no avail, and we have been unable to get one word from the man's lips. The police say that it was a case of highway robbery, and that the blow was struck with a black jack or a sand bag. On the morning after the operation our patient will wake up and the three month's interval will seem to him as one night. While I am working, gentlemen, I wish silence; and now let the subject be brought in."

Again the door opened and two ambulance men entered with the stretcher, on which the patient was laid.

The transfer from the stretcher to the revolving table was soon made, and then the assistant surgeons entered, followed by a pale faced young woman, wearing the uniform of the trained nurses. As she took her seat near the table she was greeted with a hiss from the students, and Dr. Gains looked quickly to see the cause of the disturbance. His kindly gaze met hers, and a raised hand was sufficient to quiet the hisses.

The interest in the operation drew attention from her, and soon the steady hand and sharp steel had performed their work, and the subject was taken away to make room for another unfortunate, while the doctors and nurse went off the mimic stage to make room for other actors.

It was only an every day occurrence in clinic life, and although the operation would remain in the note books of the students, the incident would soon be forgotten.

* * * * * * *

The door of the long ward on the surgical floor opened softly to admit a short graceful figure, and as we follow the noiseless footsteps down the ward, we recognize the pale faced nurse of yesterday's acquaintance.

The dim gas lights are struggling with the first rays of the sun, and shed a sickly glow over the white curtains and coverings of the beds.

As the nurse passes each cot, some [illegible] sufferer looks out with wistful eyes, some favor they want, or some little attention to lighten their pain. [illegible]

[illegible] and general. Through the open window came the sunlight and the perfumed breath of early May. The light fell on the face of a young man tossing in broken slumber.

The woman [illegible] herself upon her knees at the bedside and offered up a half audible prayer, asking for strength and the restoration of her loved. Tears, useless tears. She could not hold them back, but with them and the prayer came a feeling of contentment that lightened her trouble and gave her hope.

With quick hands she began to rearrange the fruit and flowers she had brought the evening before. Busy with this work she [illegible] chat first with herself then at the sleeper, but answering all the questions herself, until she had gone over her past troubles and her future plans.

Dr. Gains unnoticed had stood in the doorway unwilling to break in on the pretty scene and yet unable to go away.

The story interested him and he let her talk until she found him out. In an undertone he inquired how the patient had slept, and then felt of his pulse.

"He's a fine looking man, isn't he, nurse? But I suppose that you are prejudiced, and I ought not to ask the question." He stood looking at his subject, and the look was not wholly professional.

"Oh, doctor! He is waking! Won't you leave him with me? I'll call you if necessary."

Her pleading eyes gained the point, for the doctor reluctantly withdrew.

Silence. Would he never open his eyes? The eyelids seemed determined to remain closed, but at last they parted, and Robert Stephenson gazed abstractedly at the ceiling. Feeling the presence of some one else he began to look around. Everything was strange to him, until he saw the nurse.

"What, Dode! You here? And in my room too! Why, how is this? am I dreaming yet?"

Dora stood silent, thinking it best to let him talk.

"But I've had an ugly dream, Dode; thought I was on the way to show you Uncle's will and the bonds I told you of, when something struck me from behind. I could see two men take away everything I possessed, but was powerless. After that everything was confused. Strange place, strange faces. Then there was a small room and a sea of faces, and everyone jeering and laughing, but you were near and I did so try to speak. Agony is no name for it, Dode. One man said they would have to take my brains out, and they started to do it too, darling, when I began to wake up. I'm so glad 'twas only a dream——but I can't guess why you are here, and why I feel so out of sorts. Speak to me, Dora! I feel that something has gone wrong, or you wouldn't be here so early."

"There Rob, dear, lie down again; You've been sick, and I'm here trying to help you. Keep quiet awhile and I'll come back, for I have a story to tell that is of interest to you. Promise you won't get up or excite yourself."

"I promise, Dode, but I did want to show you those papers. Hand me my coat and I'll get them ready." But she was gone.

"That cap looks funny," he mused, "and her dress too." "This is not my room, so I guess that something did happen."

Feeling drowsy again, he went to sleep.

Dora found the doctor, told him what had transpired, and then went to her room.

She tried to think of some story with which to cloth the horrid truth. Happening to see her copy of Longfellow, her active brain soon wove a tale, strongly flavored with Hiawatha. After rearranging her dress, she went back to her task.

Rob was asleep, so she let him slumber for some time before she woke him.

"Back again, Dode? Glad of it, for I got tired of my own company and went to sleep."

"Now, Rob, I intend to tell you an Indian story, and you must draw your own inferences. Promise not to interrupt nor get excited, and if you hear anything unpleasant, keep it to yourself."

Rob of course promised, and told her to begin the "fairy story."

To reassure him, she took one of his hands and began:

"Ages ago, before the white man had invaded the land of the Datotahs, there dwelt a maid in Hiawatha's happy country. This maiden was loved by many braves, but she gave her heart and love to Shingebis—of another tribe. Poor he was in worldly goods but rich in manly beauty and affection.

"You can have her," said the father, "when you bring me a hundred ponies."

Faint at heart he left his loved one standing at her father's wigwam.

"Wait for me, Oh, lovely maiden. I will come again and I will win thee."

Thus he left her, weeping at her father's wigwam. Back to his tribe went Shingebis. And ere a day in camp he found his uncle dead, and Shingebis alone the dead man's heir. Now a man of wealth and many ponies, turned he again toward his loved one and started forth. Many days he traveled, 'til the murderous band of Black Wolf fell upon him in the forest. Robbed him of his [illegible] of his ponies and left him dying in the forest. [illegible]

[illegible]

"Oh, my beloved Shingebis! [illegible] I have enough for two. [illegible] about the stolen, but take me as I am. Take me, and all I own and love me always.' And happy thus this man and maiden lived and loved for many seasons, in Hiawatha's peaceful country."

"This is my story, Rob. Put yourself in Shingebis' place, change the time to the present, and you can see why you are here in this hospital—for hospital it is—and why I am with you. It's all true, darling, and just as soon as doctor finishes his work, and pronounces you all right, we will leave this place, and nothing shall separate us again."

STEPHENSON—MORROW. On Friday, June [illegible], at the residence of Dr. Gains, by Rev. S. H. Hutchins, Robert J. Stephenson to Dora Eaton Morrow, daughter of the late Walter Morrow, all of Brooklyn.

St Louis and New York papers please copy.

Small Beginnings.

Horace Greeley was a compositor by trade.

George Ehret was a brewery workman.

H. B. Claflin was a dry goods clerk at $100 a year.

Harriet Beecher Stow was a country school-marm.

Robert Collyer, the eloquent divine, was a blacksmith.

Edwin Harrigan, the actor, was a ship carpenter, and is proud of it.

B. T. Babbit was a working soapmaker and a journeyman mechanic.

Edwin Forrest was a butcher boy in Philadelphia. He commenced to act as a rider in a circus.

Russell Sage was successively a farmer's boy, clerk and country store keeper before he became a financier.

John W. Mackay was a miner, working for day's wages before he became a mine owner and money king.

P. T. Barnum made his first money in a Connecticut hat factory. He was an editor before he became a showman.

John Hoey, who owns the better half of Long Branch, began his pursuit of fortune as driver of an Adams Express wagon.

Jonas Chickering, the first American piano manufacturer, was a cabinetmaker's apprentice. Henry Steinway was an other.

August Belmont learned banking as a petty clerk in the employ of the Rothschild. He is now the Rothschild of America.

The founders of the house of Harper Bros., one of the greatest publishing houses in the world, were journeyman printers.

Sidney Dillon drove a contractor's dirt cart till he saved money enough to buy a cart and set up as a contractor for himself.

John McCullough wheeled a barrow in the Philadelphia gas works before he learned chairmaking and became an ametur actor.

J. G. Brown, the famous artist, was a coach painter. He sold the first picture he painted for $5, and his income is now $25,000 a year.

The late George Law was a common laborer before he became a contractor and millionaire. He generally looked and acted his origin.

Robert Bonner earned his living as a typesetter at Hartford over forty years ago. Every one knows Robert Bonner and the New York Ledger now.

John Kelly worked in a rope-walk at 8 years of age, and afterward learned the trade of a grate-setter. In 1835 he was a printers devil on the Herald.

Hiram Hitchcock, the proprietor of the Fifth Avenue Hotel, was a clerk at the St. Charles Hotel, in New Orleans before the war.—[New Orleans Times.

Ex-President Arthur was the son of a poor country minister in Vermont and as a youth taught a rural school and became an expert wielder of the birch.

Jay Gould commenced life as a tanner's boy, and came to New York hoping to make a fortune out of a patent mouse trap. He has used a different kind of a trap to make it since.

Daniel Drew, who died poor after amassing half a dozen enormous fortunes, rose from the position of a driver hired by the day to be the most pious millonaire in the United States.

Henry Villard, who lately bankrupted in right royal fashion, made his first break for fortune as a war-correspondent for the newspapers. He was not a very talented writer, however.

The late Gov. E. D. Morgan earned his first capital as a country huckster, driving an old wagon and a horse to match in his native State—Massachusetts. He is said to have had a razor eye for a bargain.

Levi P. Morton, of Morton, Bliss & Co., late American Minister to Paris, and ten times a millionaire at a little more than sixty, began life as a clerk in a country store in the interior of this state.

Thomas A. Edison was a newsboy on the railroad. He also peddled candies and peanuts on the cars. Samuel F. B. Morse, the father of telegraphy, which Edison has done so much to perfect was once a painter in New York, and painted portraits for $5 apiece.

John Jacob Astor, the founder of the family, was a peasant's son. He wandered from his German home to England [illegible]

St. Jean Baptiste, Manitoba, July [illegible]. Editor Times:

We have been spending a few weeks very pleasantly at [illegible], northeastern Dakota, one mile from the line between Dakota and Manitoba. In that region there are many beautiful farms, and across the line on the Mennonite reservation of 35 miles from east to west and 6 miles from north to south, there are many Mennonite villages, and as we have crossed over a number of times, have learned some of their usages or manners of living. They settle in villages from two to five miles apart and cultivate a small part of the land, and upon the rest herd large numbers of cattle. The buildings of each family are all under one roof, dwelling, barn, stables, [illegible] outhouses, &c. Upon their reservation a Mr. Brown has purchased a section [illegible] acres and has [illegible] a model farm. On our way coming over here we had a view of the farm and took some notes of the same, and with your permission, Mr. Editor, we will give your readers a description of the same. Mr. Brown's farm consists of a section of fine prairie land, located in the Mennonite reserve ten miles west of Gretna, Man., and a short distance north of the line of Dakota. Mr. Brown settled one piece five years ago, when it was a tract of wild prairie land, and during the time has transformed the place into a beautiful prairie farm, a thing of beauty and a source of profit. Few farms in Manitoba can boast of as many and as good buildings as Mr. Brown's contains. As we drove along over the smooth prairie road that leads to the place, the collection of buildings presented the appearance of a small village. The house faces the east and is a substantial two story building, painted white. The main portion is 30x20 feet in size, with a two story addition 40x27, the rear of which opens out upon a fine garden. Then there are wood sheds and other buildings, all connected with the main building by covered passage ways, conductive to comfort and convenience, when the icy blasts of winter sweep over the prairie. To the northeast of the dwelling house are two large granaries, a story and a half high, one 60x20 and the other 60x18. In one are over 4,000 bushels of wheat and in the other a large quantity of oats. Grain that Mr. Brown is holding for higher prices. Running from those granaries to the northeast corner of the house is a close board fence twelve feet high, and in connection with the buildings forms a complete wind and snow break, so that in winter the front yard is free from snow drifts. About 100 yards from the house is the stable for horses, a substantial frame building two stories high 60 x32, with a leanto on each side 60x12. A short distance away is a large barn for cattle 60x20, and a short distance from that a frame building a story and a half high, 20x36, which is a model pig house, divided off into pens, in which are some fine porkers, and supplied with a huge kettle for boiling feed and with vessels for holding it.

Then there is a meat house and dairy 20x26, a summer kitchen 22x12, and a work shop and ware house 12x40. Stretching away back from the house and north of it is an immense field of waving grain, containing over 350 acres. On the south side of the section and in sight of the Dakota line, a tract of 100 acres is fenced off for pasture, where some very fine cattle roam.

Nearly all the buildings on the farm are nicely painted, and everything about the place is clean and well kept. Mr. Brown is proud of his farm and well he may be, and he is very gentlemanly to callers who wish to see his farm buildings and stock. He has expended a good deal of money in good buildings, but he says it pays in the long run, as his grain and his stock are always well kept.

We are now about 40 miles north of Dakota, in Manitoba, near the village of St. Jean Baptiste and 10 miles south of the flourishing village of Morris. All the way from the Dakota line is one continuous prairie with some fine farms covered with wheat, and occasionally a small village. The unbroken prairie is covered with flowers of every hue.

Before leaving Dakota for Manitoba, I visited with a Mr. Finley McGuin who, when he was a young man worked for Mr. J. C. Wells of Granby, N. Y., who to make our visit as pleasant as he could, gathered a few friends and with a fine span of roans drove us up on the Pembina mountains for a grand picnic, and for sight seeing. The flourishing village of Walhalla is on the Pembina river at the foot of the mountains, and on the way up we passed a fine cemetery and upon the top were fine plains interspersed with groves of small timber and berry bushes filled with berries much like huckle berries, called here "suskatoons," a beautiful fruit. At some of the bluffs we could look down steep banks for over 100 feet into the winding Pembina, at other places a long inclined plain. On the top of the mountains we were over six miles from the the Manitoba line, but we could see with our glasses many farm houses and small villages and the sight as the ladies say was "perfectly delightful."

A. P.

Commodore Vanderbilt, who died [illegible]

[illegible] hairy arms, each one provided with suckers at every joint [illegible] away, as if the dead monster [illegible] power to harm.

We [illegible] off the Florida coast gathering sponges [illegible] we got our sponges in anchoring our small sloop or schooner over the bed and then diving from her rail to the bottom of the sea, carrying a weight along to sink us [illegible] bottom in thirty or thirty-five feet of water and come up with more or less of a haul.

On that warm coast the shark and the octopus and other horrible things belonging to the fish or reptile species, are present, and often lying in wait. The diver has a horror of them at first, but the feeling soon wears away, and some men become perfectly reckless. During the first year I never went down without a sharp knife in my belt to give any prowling shark a thrust, but later on I would take a header off the rail when a shark's dorsal fin was cutting the water not a hundred yards away.

During the second season we lost two men by sharks, but I took no precautions and had no narrow escapes. In the beginning of the third season we anchored over a splendid bed, in a location well sheltered from storm and swell, and we had reason to anticipate a profitable catch.

There were four of us on that trip, and the first man over the rail was an old diver named Peterson. This was about 7 o'clock in the morning, and although we had been up for two hours the bay had been clear of sharks. We watched Peterson go over, but we watched in vain for him to come up. Twenty seconds passed—then thirty—then forty, and the captain leaned over the rail and cried out:

"Boys, the old man has got fast down there and is a goner!"

We waited ten seconds longer and then felt sure that we should never see the old man alive again. We were in twenty-eight feet of water, and the trawl showed the bottom to be clear o weeds and made up of rock and sand. It was hard to guess what had happened. He might have bumped his head against a rock, or had his foot caught in a crevice—he might have burst a blood vessel or been taken with cramps. None of us thought of an octopus in connection with his sad fate. We had seen a small one three days before, and we knew that the creatures lurked in the still waters, but somehow we speculated on all other theories but this.

As you may imagine, the loss of old Peterson upset us, and it was a good half hour before any of us had rallied our courage. It was my next turn down, and as I finally got ready to go the captain handed me a long, keen shark-knife on which he had just put an edge. I accepted it, more in hopes it might be useful in enabling me to send up the dead body than through any bodily fear. If Peterson had been caught in a crevice, or was held fast by a marine plant the knife would loosen him.

Well, over I went at last, and it was only a few seconds before I struck bottom close to a large rock. Sponges were growing all around me, and as I reached out for the nearest I felt something whip across my bare shoulders. All the dress I had on was a pair of trunks, leaving legs, shoulders, arms and most of the body naked. That "something" stung and burned and blistered, but in two seconds the feeling had passed from my shoulders to my waist, and in another second it was in my legs. It was not until I tried to spring away that I realized my situation. At the first move I was jerked in the most violent manner towards the rock, and the burning increased tenfold.

An octopus had gripped me! He had three of his terrible arms around me! and was drawing me to the rock. How his suckers burned and blistered. How the hairy arms gripped and twisted!

I tell you I was a frightened man, and for several seconds forgot that I had a knife in my belt. When I finally reached for it the octopus had dragged me into the shadow of the rock, and there I saw old Peterson's body. Two of the creature's arms were around it and I was to make a second victim.

My left arm was bound to my side, but the right was free. As I drew the knife I caught sight of the reptile. In fact, the arms were drawing me within reach of his beak. I did not slash at the arms, but struck straight at the jelly-like body. I had then been down so long that my ears were roaring and I realized that I had only a few seconds to spare. Luck guided my blows and I slashed at the creature until pieces of the body floated around me and the arms let up on their grip. Then I started for the surface, and I reached it about as near dead as a man could be and have any life left. They pulled me inboard, [illegible]

[illegible] achievements. But, all unexpectedly, an alarm comes—the rudder of his constitution is gone. He has been careless of its preservation; mental strain, nervous excitement, irregular habits, overwork, have destroyed the action of his kidneys and liver. This would not occur were Warner's safe cure used to maintain vigor. And even now it may restore vitality to these organs and give back to the man that which will lead him to the haven of his ambition.—[The Traveler.

Clara Belle on Loose Clothes.

I haven't had much to say in answer to those majestically wise old fellows who have lately been writing about reform in the dress of women. They are simply comical, in the main. But when one of them asserts that, for the sake of comfort, we ought to make all our clothes loose, he is so grotesquely astray from the truth that I can't help telling him that he is a simpleton. There is something or other in the disposition of woman which makes her like to be held hard and fast. That is why she wouldn't really give up corsets if she could. From the tightly pinned hair on her head to the shoes on her feet, she prefers to have her coverings moderately snug. Why, only yesterday an incident went to prove the truth of what I am urging that she feels lost and awry without the sense of sustainment arising from cuddled garb. My dear friend Annette has a gait unexampled for grace and firmness. She is not so pretty, to tell the honest fact behind her back, as to make men turn to look at her face, but they do inspect her heels, to see if there are wings to them, so flexible and airy are her footsteps. What was my astonishment, therefore, on meeting her and observing, as she approached, that she wabbled from side to side, that long strides and mincing steps were intermingled and that all the beauty of her carriage was gone.

"Goodness gracious, Annette," I exclaimed, "what have you been drinking? Get right home—do, dear girl."

"I haven't swallowed so much as a ginger lemonade to-day," she replied; "but I'll tell you what's the matter. I am accustomed to extra long hosiery, you know; and my stocking supporters are the kind that are firmly fastened to the belt. But I've a dress-reform aunt, and she induced me to put on a kind of toggery that I did not understand. She declared that I was stopping the circulation by too snug stockings and to humor the dear old dolt I harnessed myself according to her directions. You saw the consequences at a glance, didn't you? My legs feel as though the skin, muscles and bones were all gone, and they were like a pair of jelly-fish incapable of supporting my weight. That's what's the matter with my gait."

President Porter, of Yale, in his recent lecture on law as a profession, spoke of the studies which a man should excel for that profession, and also of the power of rapid thought and coolness which are necessary for the study and practice of law, as being two different things. In such a country as our own this profession is offered, he thought, great advantages to one who has political aspirations. The financial and social inducements are also strong; not that every lawyer gets rich from the practice of law, but it opens so many avenues by which wealth may come. On the other hand there are objections. The law has more than its share of drudgery. Some of the associations and the people with whom one must be brought into contact are sometimes very disagreeable.

THE NEW COLLECTOR.

[illegible] announcement last Saturday of [illegible] appointment by the President of [illegible] B. Poucher to be collector of the [illegible] of Oswego, was a surprise to the people of Oswego and in fact to nearly all throughout the county. Mr. Poucher is a teacher of mathematics in the Oswego normal school and has never been known as an active politician. He is a brother of Hon. William A. Poucher and his appointment is no doubt due to [illegible] that gentleman. Mr. Poucher has held the important position in the school for many years and his abilities as a teacher are widely known. He is well qualified for the position and will make an efficient officer. The city papers have sounded the feelings of the business men of Oswego and the appointment seems to give good satisfaction to both parties. The Kelly followers are especially well pleased. Mr. Poucher will run the affairs at Oswego after the administration style—simply business principles. He will qualify for office at once and will probably take possession about the middle of the month, and until that time the present collector, Mr. Lamoree, will continue in office.

NORTH AND SOUTH ARE ONE.

That the people of the South are not sincere in their feelings over the death of the great general, is not doubted when we read the tender tributes to his character by the southern press. Such glowing eulogies as have been written by southern pens over the man who was instrumental in their defeat will touch the heart of all northerners. They could not speak more warmly nor lavish more words of praise on the death of one of their own cherished leaders. Nowhere in all the South do we hear one single expression of bitterness or unpleasant feeling. Truly the North and South are one—a union forever.

IT looks now as though America would escape the cholera this year.

MAUD S., the famous trotter, astonished the world by making a mile in 2:08¾ on the Cleveland track last Friday, thus beating her own record. Upon hearing the news Mr. Vanderbilt sent a telegram congratulating Mr. Bonner, Bair the driver, and Maud S. Many strongly believe that the mare can make a mile in 2:08.

LAST Sunday afternoon a terrific cyclone swept up the Delaware river striking Philadelphia near Greenwich Point, demolishing a portion of the works of the Pennsylvania Salt Manufacturing Company and injuring several employes. The storm then took a course across the river completely wrecking several river steamers and ferry boats. Many passengers were blown from the decks and were drowned. The gale was so violent that it twisted the heavy machinery of the boats above the lower decks as if they had been made of putty. In other localities houses were unroofed, people killed and injured, while many were left homeless.

THE trial of Louis Riel was concluded at Regina on Saturday. The jury, after being out thirty minutes, brought in a verdict of guilty. Francois Cosgrove, while crying like a child, announced that he was asked by his fellow-jurors to recommend the prisoner to the mercy of the Crown, and the judge said the recommendation would be considered. Riel was sentenced to be hanged on the 18th of September at Regina. Judge [illegible] said he could hold out no hope of a reprieve or interference by the [illegible]. Riel took the result coolly, having spoken two hours reviewing [illegible] of 1869 and the half-breed's [illegible] up to the present.

Cheese Market.

(FROM THE UTICA HERALD.)

AT UTICA Aug. 3.

Our market was very dull until late in the day, and salesmen were blue over the prospect. They had hoped to see prices only a little off, so that the New York market would be held about firm But buyers were not at all anxious to get stock and advised in many cases that it be sent on commission. This gives us the heaviest amount of cheese consigned that we have had this year. Three of the choice lots were held over, but as a rule everybody else sold or sent all they could get rid of. No one has any confidence in cheese this month. Six years ago cheese went down to 5c. in August, but it is hardly believed that it will go so low this year. Cows are still shrinking in milk, and this shrinkage ought soon to begin to show in the sales. Transactions of the day are as follows: Five lots, 686 boxes, at 6c.; nine lots, 952 boxes, at 6¼c.; 48 lots, 5,533 boxes, at 6⅜c.; 17 lots, 2,272 boxes, at 6¼c.; seven lots, 766 boxes, at 6⅝c.; Six lots, 816 boxes, at 6¾c.; two lots, 230 boxes at 7c. Sales 11,250 boxes; commissions 2,750; total 14,000 boxes. Ruling price 6⅜c. Transactions of corresponding day one year ago, 10,915 boxes, at 9¾c.; two years ago, 11,704 boxes, at 9⅛c.

LITTLE FALLS, Aug 3

CHEESE.—We have had rather a slow, tame market. Prices have taken another tumble, the ruling price being one-half cent below that of a week ago. Factorymen generally supposed that 6½c. would be the ruling price, but the figures given your reporter do not so make it. Reports were also current that two or three lots had sold at 7c. but we failed to corroborate them. Factorymen sold light quantities, sales amounting to about the same as last week. There is great discouragement among dairymen, as well there may be, at these extremely low rates, and there seems to be no prospect of improvement for several weeks to come. Cows are shrinking fully as much as last year at this time and there is nothing encouraging to dairymen in any view of the situation. Sales for the day are:

Lots.	Boxes.	Price.
4	233	6 cts
43	2,897	6¼cts
25	1,861	6⅛cts
12	967	6⅜cts
9	856	p. t.
3	163	Com
100	6,989
Farm Dairy	650
Total	7,639

FARM DAIRIES.—There were 650 boxes dairy cheese sold at prices ranging at 6@6½c., the bulk at 6¼c.

BUTTER.—Forty packages of creamery butter sold at 16½c., and 22 packages of farm dairy at 16⅛@17½c.

AT FULTON.

The market was largely attended Monday evening and but few transactions were made owing to another drop in price. Twenty-eight factories offered 8,238 boxes. Utica ruling was 6⅜. The price one year ago was 8⅝, two years ago 9¼, three years ago 10¼.

THE RECORD OF THE FAIRS.

The superiority of Wells, Richardson & Co's., Improved Butter Color over all others made, is again demonstrated by its record at the Autumnal Fairs. The test of practical use is what tells the story, and the great value of the premiums given by the Agricultural Fairs. See in fact, that the judges in these are cases regular farmers, who know what their needs are and what will supply them. Wells, Richardson & Co's. Improved Butter Color, which has taken [illegible]

[illegible] to the agency's [illegible]. If this does not accomplish the desired purpose, a collector is sent out to visit the delinquent. If he still refuses he is called on either at his business place or house by a second collector, who wears a very tall hat, on which is displayed in gilt letters: "Commercial Agency; Collector of Hard Accounts."

This man calls every day until some arrangement is made satisfactory to both parties, or till the debt is paid. The collector's daily calls soon attract the attention of people, and his business is fully defined on his hat.

This process has become a necessity as a checkmate to that class of people who, able to pay, do not do so until compelled and who have only derision for the old and ordinary methods.

The magnitude of this army which favor a merchant until he insists on settlement and who then shift their patronage to another dealer, is appalling.

The leverage of the U. S. Commercial agency system is not intended to apply to worthy or unfortunate people, but to those who can and prefer not to meet honest claims. It is said to do its work more effectually than dynamite.

It is a step gained when business men organize themselves for protection against an evil which under the seemingly necessary credit system has grown to such enormous proportions, and a marked change in methods will result to the dismay of the D.B's. This scheme eme is said to work first rate in bringing old timers to the front.

Each merchant that becomes a member of this agency will be well protected and the best attention shown to their bills that are left in our office for collecting which is legitimate in its course of dealings as well as successful.

Let it be understood that this is an entirely different system from those which have heretofore established themselves in this place. Mr. Thurston, the assistant manager can be seen at the Lewis House. Office hours from 8 a. m. to 9 a. m. and from 12 to 2 p. m. and from 6 to 8 in the evening.

Board of Trustees.

FULTON, July 29, 1885.

Board met pursuant to adjournment.

Present President Waugh and Trustees Bradford, Chase, Hulett and Johnson.

The minutes of the last regular meeting, and the special meetings of July 18 and 22, were read and approved.

A petition signed by E. G. C. Rice and others, asking for a street lamp on West side of Second street, about opposite residence of J. C. Tucker, was presented, and on motion of Mr. Johnson, the same was received and referred to the Lamp Committee.

Trustees Gage and Kendrick came in.

The following bills were reported favorably by the Finance Committee, and on motion of Mr. Hulett, the same were audited at the amounts claimed, and the Clerk was instructed to draw orders on the Treasurer, therefor, viz:

J. N. Clark, Special Police,	2 00
Button Fire Engine Co., Repairs for Steamer. No. 1,	23 35
J. Kavanaugh, lamp lighter, 1 month	38 25
	$63 60

On Motion of Mr. Johnson, the Clerk was directed to draw an order on the Treasurer, in favor of the Fire Department for $300.00.

The Clerk read a letter from Mr. H. Howard, of Baldwinsville, relative to the License of the Opera House. On motion of Mr. Johnson, the same was ordered placed on file.

On motion of Mr. Johnson, Mr. Gage was appointed a committee to procure a place for keeping the road scrapers.

Mr. O. H. Scholtz, collector in 1884, presented a final report showing the whole amount of the warrant issued to him collected, except the sum of $4.30. On motion of Mr. Johnson, the report was referred to the President and Clerk, to examine, and the Clerk was directed to enforce the collection of the amount returned, if possible.

The lamp lighter stated to the Board that some new globes were needed for the gas lamps and on motion of Mr. Johnson, the Clerk was directed to procure one-half dozen of each size.

Dr. Woodbury came before the Board and made a statement in regard to width of roadway on Third street, between Academy and Highland streets. On motion of Mr. Johnson, the matter was referred to the Street Committee.

The Street Committee reported that they had apportioned the expense of repairing the pavement on First street, over Lewis House drain, and the well near Kenyon Block, as follows, to-wit:

Whole expense,		$47 81
Mrs. Cora L. Lewis, to pay,	41 43
Willard Johnson, "	3 19
And the Village, "	3 19
		47 81

Also, that they had apportioned the expense of putting in the sewer from the well on west side of First street, under tow-path to the canal as follows, to-wit:

Whole expense,		$33 36
Willard Johnson, to pay	11 12
Mrs. Cora L. Lewis, "	11 12
And the Village, "	11 12
		33 36

On motion of Mr. Gage, the report was accepted and the Clerk was instructed to collect the several amounts, and pay the same to the village Treasurer.

Mr. W. J. Watson came before the Board and made a statement in regard to putting up some electric lights on First and Oneida streets. After some discussion the matter was dropped without any action being taken by the Board.

On motion of Mr. Bradford, Saturday, Aug. 1, next at 10 A. M., was appointed as the time for determining the location of the Hydrants and all the members of the Board were requested to meet at the office of the Clerk at that time.

On motion of Mr. Johnson the Board adjourned to Aug. 5, 1885, at 7½ o'clock, P. M.

ARVIN RICE, Clerk.

The entries for the above races are very numerous, and will afford some exciting sport. Among the entries are some of the finest and fastest trotting stock from all parts of the United States. We also notice among the entries several well-known fast horses from this vicinity. There will be excursion rates on all roads entering Rochester.

Monday's Fire.

Last Monday evening about 7 o'clock, an alarm of fire was sounded and after about nine-tenths of the population of the village had started for the scene, it was found to be a tar barrel in the rear of J. W. Pratt's house on First street. The conflagration was built by Jas. T. Pratt to test a new fire extinguisher of which he and H. C. Giesler are the makers. It appears that after Pratt started the fire and commenced throwing his grenades, that owing to his perturbed state of mind his aim was faulty, and several of the grenades were thrown completely over the burning barrel and adjoining fence into the neighbor's yard, where their effectiveness was wasted on the desert air. As a fair test of the new grenades, this could hardly be called a complete success.

A Cannon Ball Deep in the Earth.

OSWEGO, August 2.—While some of the troops were engaged in digging a sewer under the archway which leads into the fort to-day, they came upon a twenty-four pound cannon ball four feet below the surface. The ball is thought to have been dropped there before the building of the present fort in 1843. Cannon balls are often found in making excavations in the vicinity of the fort, but none have been found previously at so great a depth.

Closing Out.

The business, established over 13 years since, (formerly known as the model shop) is now to be closed out. Bargains are offered in sporting and electric goods. The Century Magazine.

The mid-summer August Century opens with a lively, gossipy account of life at "Camp Grindstone" the sporting ground of the American Canoe association on the St. Lawrence. It is fully illustrated and will make pleasant reading for the hundreds of canoeists at present camping at the Islands. A striking portrait of Wm. Lloyd Garrison, taken at the height of his fame, is the frontispiece of the number. The historical articles were written by his sons, W. G. and F. J. Garrison, with an introduction by T. W. Higginson who writes of the causes which impelled Mr. Garrison in slaveholding times to declare "I will be heard." The concluding chapters of "Silas Lapham" are given, to the regret of all. A practical paper on "Hotel Keeping is contributed by George Iles. The war articles are of interest and written by Gen. Porter and W. E. Goss, both fully illustrated. A dozen pages of editorial discusses timely topics. The number is an exceedingly interesting one. Copies always on sale at Ney's news room.

The Giant Mining and Bullion company, limited, of Oswego, with a capital of $20,000, has been incorporated.

Hog cholera has again appeared in the northern part of Onondaga county, and hogs are dying by the score. Michael O'Brien, a farmer, who raises a large number annually, is the heaviest loser thus far. The attention of the state authorities is to be brought to the prevalence of the disease, which promises to become epidemic.

George Conley went to Syracuse last fall under the name of George Gilbert. He took a place as "professor" in a roller rink and made many mashes. Society ladies took him out riding, and a married lady of prominence wrote him letters glowing with love, and alluded to clandestine meetings at a low resort. Sunday a warrant for his arrest for the seduction, under promise of marriage, of Clara Falstick of Easton, Pa., issued in June, 1884, was produced and Conley was locked up.

The commission of the new collector of customs of Oswego will bear the name of Isaac B. Poucher, who has been a school teacher all his life and is no politician. The real collector will be William A. Poucher, the Democratic manager for the district, who will direct the patronage of the office and run it "for all its worth." The scheme is the same which names Hedden collector at New York, and sets up H. O. Thompson as master of the office. The mugwumps clasp their hands and call this double dealing reform.—[Utica Herald.

A silver dollar, says an exchange, weighs very nearly an ounce. Hence any letter not heavier than a dollar can go for a single two cent stamp. This is easily remembered. If you want to be more exact, take a silver dollar and a fifty-cent piece, and you have an ounce almost to a feather's weight. Provided you haven't the silver dollar handy, use two halves, or if you have nickles only, five of them and a small copper cent will give you an ounce. Commissioner Peter LaMay will continue work on the road between Crosby hill and Volney Centre next Monday. Those who have signed and postponed the work until after haying will please be on hand. All who feel interested in improving the condition of this piece of thoroughfare are invited to turn out and assist.

A spiritualist grove meeting will be held on the Oswego Falls fair ground Sunday Aug. 16. The meeting will be addressed by Mrs. Carrie C. VanDuzee of Gouverneur, N. Y. There will be two sessions, one at 10:30 a. m., and the other at 1:30 p. m. Admittance to grounds, 10 cents.

Foster Bros. knife manufacturers of this village, have been granted a patent on a tobacco plant cutter. This enterprising firm have already established a wide known reputation in tobacco sections for manufacturing a superior tobacco knife. The factory is now running at full capacity to meet the constantly increasing demand for their goods.

Syracuse Herald: Franz Schumer wanted to go to Oswego with his wife, mother, sister-in-law and children. He came to this country three months ago, and went as far as Cleveland without finding employment. He thought that a friend of his in Oswego could get him work. Superintendent White passed him and his family to Fulton.

There is altogether too much drunkenness about town on Sundays of late. The authorities should suppress this lawless conduct by making a few arrests. The licenses of one or two liquor sellers who make no bones of keeping open Sunday after Sunday should be revoked. Such scenes as were visable on our streets last Sunday are most disgraceful to the respectable portion of the community to say the least.

Track laying has been practically completed on the Syracuse, Phoenix and Oswego road and the Italian laborers have been paid and discharged. The bridge at Three River Point is expected to be completed by the middle of next week, and will be a safe and substantial structure. The next to receive attention will be depots, a telegraph line and the necessary switches which will be commenced at once, and it is expected the road will be in full operation early this month. During a certain stage of the ceremonies in New York, all cities and towns in the Union will be notified by telegraph and 63 guns will be fired. A large number of our merchants have signified their intention of closing their places of business from 2:00 till 4:00 o'clock, during the exercises in the opera house.

Good for Oswego Falls.

It is said that the Riverside factory company propose to remove their Massachusetts mills to Oswego Falls. Should this be done it will give the village an immense boom.—[Oswego Times-Express.

When a TIMES reporter called at the mills and inquired of one of the head men as to the truth of the above item, he was told that the statement was entirely false and that no such a change had ever been contemplated.

Chas. Harris Arrested.

Charles Harris of this village, who was arrested some time ago for burglary, and made his escape from the officers, was re-arrested yesterday in West Bay City, Michigan. Officer Poole left last night for that city and will bring Harris to Fulton, where it is hoped he will get his just deserts.

OBITUARY.

Mrs. Joseph Munger daughter of Joel Smith died at her home in Oswego Falls on Saturday August 2, aged 21 years. The funeral services were held yesterday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

The death of Mrs. Henrietta Harris occurred at her late residence in Lower Oswego Falls, Friday July 31. Deceased was 50 years of age and was loved and respected by many. The funeral took place from the house on Sunday, Rev. Mr. Markham officiating. The remains were interred in Mt. Adnah.

Harriet Brockway, sister-in-law of W. Hill of this village, and one of the oldest residents of this town, died at her home near Ingalls Crossing on Friday last, aged 87 years. The funeral was held Sunday at Mt. Pleasant.

At the regular meeting of the Fulton Fire Department last night F. C. Mosher was elected delegate to represent No. 2. C. W. Streeter the Hook & Ladder and N. H. Gilbert to represent No. 1 at the Fireman's Convention to be held in Syracuse next week.

Mr. D. A. Waterman, who for the past thirteen years has kept the model and repair shop in this village, has sold the store and will close out the business. The model shop has won a very enviable reputation with Mr. Waterman as manager and Fulton people are sorry to lose so skillful a workman.

Work upon the new stores on Oneida street is progressing rapidly, the second story having been reached. There will be two separate stairways leading to the second floor, instead of one as formerly, thus making the two stores entirely independent. Modern and tasty fronts will be put in and when finished these buildings will greatly add to the beauty of Oneida street.

The New York, Ontario & Western road, in order to accommodate those wishing to attend the funeral obsequies of General Grant, will sell special excursion tickets good for passage on August 4th, 5th, 6th, 7th and 8th, and returning to Liberty and points north up to and including August 14th, and south of Liberty tickets will be good returning to and including August 10th. All wheelmen will be welcomed and given a place in the parade to be held at 1 o'clock p. m.

"For many years the state school fund has been parceled out according to a threefold standard. One third of it is distributed according to the number of teachers in the district, one third according to the average attendance throughout the school year, and one third according to the number of persons of school age (between 5 and 21) in the district. At the last session of the legislature this law was changed, so as to leave out the last of the three former divisions. The money is now divided into equal parts, one of which is distributed according to the number of teachers, and the other according to the average attendance.—[N. Y. Mail and Express.

The Fulton correspondent to the Oswego Times intimates that the consent of the majority of the property owners above the Universalist church on First street had not been obtained and adds "let us have no bulldozing." The railway company have no intention of "bulldozing" any one, and are ready and willing to comply with all of the provisions of the law, and if it can be [illegible] things, or that the village of Fulton and its thoroughfares were created for the express use and benefit of the residents of First street, they will at once abandon the enterprise.

Selfishness and old fogy notions have too long driven all improvement from our village, and it is time that citizens of all classes should unite in supporting any enterprise that will add to our common prosperity.

The West Shore Not Supported.

As for the people who are protesting so loudly that the business community is badly treated, (by the consolidation of the West Shore with the Central,) that it needed a competing line, and that it ought not to be deprived of that advantage, it may be as well to say that this sort of growling has little practical meaning. The business men of New York have never wanted competition with the New York Central enough to keep the Erie out of bankruptcy. When the West Shore was built and put in operation, they did not want competition with the New York Central enough to send their business to the new road if they could get as low or a shade lower rates over Mr. Vanderbilt's lines. The people who will not make the slightest effort or sacrifice to support a competing line when they have one, have less right than anybody else to complain when the competition ceases.—[New York Tribune.

New Photograph Gallery.

Mr. H. C. Beals, who was recently burned out in the Oneida street fire, has erected a handsome gallery between Farrell's clothing store and the Vienna bakery. The building is one story high, is fitted with all modern improvements, and when opened, which will be in about a week, it will be one of the most convenient and pleasant gallerys in this section. That Mr. Beals is a first-class artist, all who have seen his work will testify.

[illegible] November. A [illegible] has much [illegible] one of his [illegible] is so little [illegible] may be [illegible] is a wonder [illegible] follow [illegible] for the same [illegible] labor, in no [illegible] so much food be procured at so little cost. It comes just at [illegible] year when most needed. [illegible] to enrich the ground, [illegible] so as to give the crop a vigorous start. Turnips may be put in up to the middle of August for November feeding. Superphosphate harrowed in with the seed will give the plants an extra start and a better growth.

Get a few sheep and turn them in that poor lot, which does not produce enough grass to support cattle, if you have not manure enough to make it fertile to produce crops. Sheep will thrive and get fat where cattle would almost starve. They also scatter their droppings over the field, and never fail to enrich lands where they are kept. On poor farms they are most emphatically the best factors for increasing fertility. On rich land the same rule holds good, as they will make them richer. By the simple means of a portable shed, which can be moved about the field, and under which the sheep will readily congregate, the poorest spot may be made fertile, and the whole field, by frequent and regular changes of the flock, may be thoroughly enriched. This is a well known characteristic of the sheep, and by such management as mentioned above, the thinnest farm may be readily enriched and made fertile.

Pasturing the pigs is the cheapest way of making pork. An acre of good clover will provide quite a number of pigs with food and keep them in a good thrifty condition. An account is given in the Wisconsin State Agricultural Report for 1876-7 of a farmer who had some interesting experiments in pasturing hogs. On the first of June 80 good young hogs, averaging 150 pounds each, were turned into a 15 acre field of clover that had been sown in the spring before. On the 15th of September following, the hogs averaged a fraction over 250 pounds, a gain of 100 pounds to each hog, or 553 pounds to each acre pastured. It is evident that if a gain of nearly 600 pounds of pork per acre of clover can be obtained, this must be an economical method of producing pork. The consumption of the clover on the ground by the hogs would greatly improve the fertility of the soil.

A farmer in Huron, Wayne county has for years had immense quantities of field daisies growing upon his farm. They have been a nuisance, and have choked attempts to raise full crops upon the land. Last year a New York gentleman told him the despised daisy was a fashionable flower at parties, dinners and social gatherings of æsthetic people. He took the hint, and this season made arrangements with a number of florists and caterers in New York, Boston and Philadelphia for shipping to them on commission quantities of the field daisies for decorations at parties, etc. He has carefully picked and shipped barrels of the flowers to these cities, and has had several good sized bank checks for them as the result of his enterprise. He is now only sorry that he has not a larger crop of field daisies for shipment.

This year's watermelon crop is simply immense, and southern steamers that reach here are so loaded with them as to be top-heavy. Barnwell county, S. C., is one of the great, probably the greatest melon raising counties in the southern region. It is estimated that fully 1,000,000 melons will be sent from there this season to Charleston and the chief markets in the north and west. The melon crop is generally very profitable to Barnwell farmers because the land upon which it is raised is such that it is unfit for other crops, and is also cultivated at very small expense. The farmers of that county alone, expect to sell $50,000 worth of melons this season, and, to some of the "poor white trash," the income from melons is quite an important item.

Orchard Pruning.

A late English horticultuist says that after trying all sorts of plans, he is thoroughly convinced that there is nothing equal to the little and often system of pruning or rather pinching. The soft young shoots can be readily removed by the finger and thumb, which is the easiest way. To which we may add, that any owner which is really interested in his garden will be likely to pass along his trees and shrubs quite often, and if he sees any want or defect, he will at once supply or remove it. With this view, a well-known cultivator recently remarked that his season for pruning was all the way through.

Repousse brass work is the newest fancy occupation of women of leisure who are artistically inclined.

Black canvas over orange silk. striped tilleul color, makes a dressy walking costume for early fall.

The Scottish token of good luck is a spray of white heather now put into the bouquets of fashionable brides.

The imagination of the modiste is the only law that governs hats and bonnets and their trimmings this season.

The prettiest and most economical summer bonnets are of white muslin and white lace, piece and border lace.

Small pins or brooches, no ear rings, few finger rings, and a very slender bracelet make up the catalogue of the summer jewelry of a woman of taste.

A few women, generally of mature age, wear a terrace-like projection at the back of their dresses, but as a rule big bustles are only seen in "fashion plates."

The horrid, waggling crinolette bustle is no longer worn. The best dressed women have learned to wear their draperies in a manner that makes any save a very small bustle unnecessary.

Pretty black straw Fanchons, dotted with cut jet, lined with black velvet and trimmed with two rosettes of white mauresque lace, fastened on the top with long dead gold pins, are effectively worn with either white or black frocks.

The Surviving Generals.

The only two great commanders now living who faced each other in making the thrilling and crimsoned annals of the late civil war are Gen. William T. Sherman and Gen. Joseph E. Johnston. Grant met Lee, Joseph and Sidney Johnston, Beauregard, Buckner, Bragg, and Pemberton in battle as chief commanders, and of them Joseph E. Johnston, Beauregard and Buckner survive.

Meade, who met the terrible shock of battle at Gettysburg, was borne to the City of the Silent within a short time of the imposing southern pageant that committed the dust of Lee to the mother dust; and Thomas and Hood, who fought the last great battle of the war at Nashville, both sleep the dreamless sleep of the dead.

Sherman and Johnston alone remain of the great commanders who locked horns with each other in the flame of battle. Their campaign from Chattanooga to Atlanta, and from Atlanta to the sea, was the most brilliant of the war, and they are the only two great commanders who are left to sit down and talk their battles over, as they often do in the heartiest good fellowship.

Of the many commanders of the heroic Army of the Potomac none remain, with the single exception of Gen. McClellan. Scott, McDowell, Burnside, Hooker, Meade and Grant, who in turn commanded that magnificent army, have all gone to join the great majority, and Longstreet is the only one of Lee's great lieutenants who lingers with the living. Jackson, Hill, Ewell and Stuart, who were in every great conflict of the Army of Virginia, rest with their great chieftain of Arlington.

Joseph E. Johnston and G. T. Beauregard are the only surviving Confederate commanders who led great armies to battle, and they are whitened by the frosts of time. Johnston has been in Congress and is now at the head of the National railroad bureau, while Beauregard is bartering his fame in the marketplace where swindlers rob the multitude.—[Phila. Times.

The Christian Bible.

The revision of the early Protestant versions of the Bible in different countries, and the wide-spread interest felt in the work among all classes, are among the many signs that the Scriptures are not losing their hold upon the minds of men. The study of comparative religion does not operate to weaken, it rather tends to increase, the influence and authority of the Christian Bible. Let anyone attempt to read the Koran, and he will rise from the effort with a profounder sense of the depth of power that belongs to the writings of the Prophets and Apostles. Editions of heathen scriptures and excerpts from heathen sages which have been sometimes put forth as rivals of the Bible bring no very large profit to publishers or editors. The Bible remains a well-spring of spiritual life. The conviction is not likely to be dislodged that within its hallowed pages life and immortality are in truth brought to light. The progress of [illegible] and civilization in the lapse of ages does not lessen the worth of the treasure which they contain.—[From an article on the Revised Version—The Century for [illegible]

Following the London style, the young men and girls of New York go about with their shoulders raised, throwing one leg over the other to get the true Piccadilly swing. This rolling gait has taken the place of the Alexandria limp. Some years ago all the English fashionables walked with a slight hitch-trip, in imitation of the Princess of Wales. Now they walk with a regular on-deck swing. A troublesome corn on a royal toe of England will change the gait of every society idiot in New York.—[New Orleans Picayune.

Every day the number of girls that fall from virtue in civilized countries is larger than that of the heathen converted to Christianity by missionaries. Why, then, do we spend our money on converting the heathen instead of saving the civilized? It is because prudery keeps church people in ignorance of the vice around them, and charity is only for the barbarian on the other side of the world.

BILIOUSNESS.

Bilious symptoms invariably arise from indigestion, such as furred tongue, vomiting of bile, giddiness, sick headache, irregular bowels. The liver secretes the bile and acts like a filter or sieve, to cleanse impurities of the blood. By irregularity in its action or suspensions of its functions, the bile is liable to overflow into the blood, causing jaundice, sallow complexion, yellow eyes, bilious diarrhœa, a languid, weary feeling and many other distressing symptoms. Biliousness may be properly termed an affection of the liver, and can be thoroughly cured by the grand regulator of the liver and biliary organs, BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS. Act upon the stomach, bowels and liver, making healthy bile and pure blood, and opens the culverts and sluiceways for the outlet of disease. Sold everywhere and guaranteed to cure.

How Ward Cleaned the Grants Out.

Long Branch Letter to New York World.

Mr. Childs, of the Ledger, says that the entire fortune of the Grant family was swept away by the failure of Grant & Ward to a most remarkable degree. Ward had ferreted out the most remote savings of the ladies of the Grant family. General Grant used to go up to New York to attend a board meeting from Long Branch, and when he did he received the usual director's fee of a ten-dollar gold piece. This he always gave to Mrs. Grant, until she had some seventy or eighty of them. Ward heard of this and got hold of them. He had so coaxed the remote savings of every individual member of the Grant family that when the failure came there was not a single member of the family who had $100 at his command. Now the sale of Gen. Grant's book promises to leave a fortune of at least $100,000 to his survivors. He receives 70 per cent. of the profits of the sales. This will amount to a fraction over a dollar a volume. Three hundred thousand copies of the book are already ordered. The $250,000 fund is guaranteed, so far as the interest is concerned, for five years yet to come. After that the fate of this investment is very uncertain. Mr. Childs says he was always uneasy over the reports of the great profits of Grant & Ward, and he used to talk to General Grant about it. The latter did not pretend to know anything about the business, but always brought up such men as James D. Fish, a bank president of twenty years, and others who were in with Ward, as a proof of his being all right.

S. B. Durfey, mate of steamer Arizona, had his foot badly jammed. Thomas' Eclectric Oil cured it. Nothing equal to it for a quick pain reliever.

"And why?" she urged. "Why, dear, can you not eat it here?"

"Because," he answered with a deep drawn sigh, "Because now we are in New York, you know, and an attempt [illegible]

GOLD [illegible]

[illegible]
[illegible] dozen mouths to be fed,
[illegible] to forget for the man in the field.
And the children to go away
To school, and the milk to be skimmed and churned;
And all to be done that day.

It had rained in the night, and all the wood
Was wet as it could be;
And there were puddings and pies to bake,
And a loaf of cake for tea.
The day was hot, and the aching head
Throbbed wearily as she said—
"If maidens but knew what good wives know,
They would be in no hurry to wed."

"Jennie, what do you think I told Ben Brown?"
Called the farmer from the well;
And a flush crept up to his bronzed brow,
And his eye half bashfully fell;
"It was this," he said, and coming near,
He smiled, and, stooping down,
Kissed her cheek; "'twas this—that you were the best
And dearest wife in town!"

The farmer went back to the field, and the wife
In a smiling and absent way,
Sang snatches of tender little songs
She'd not sung for many a day,
And the pain in her head was gone, and the clothes
Were as white as the foam of the sea;
Her bread was light, and her butter sweet
And golden as it could be.

"Just think," the children all called in a breath
"Tom Wood has run off to sea!
He wouldn't, I know, if he only had
As happy a home as we."
The night came down, and the good wife smiled
To herself, as she softly said—
"'Tis sweet to labor for those we love,
'Tis not strange that maids will wed!"

MY VEILED CLIENT.

At the time of the incident I am about to relate I was a young solicitor, with no very considerable practice, and therefore not always so discreet as I might have been had I been able to pick and choose my clients. My business hours were ostensibly from 10 to 5; but the fact of my house adjoining the office made me subservient to the wishes of the public beyond the time stated on the brass plate on my office door. In fact, it was generally after business hours that my most profitable clients came; and though I can say I refused many a time the agency of some shady business, still I must confess with regret that once or twice I found myself unwittingly involved in transactions which I would have much rather left alone. One of these I have occasion to remember too well, and I can never think of it but I thank Providence for saving me from becoming an accomplice, unwittingly, in a most audacious piece of imposture.

I was interrupted one night at tea by the servant entering and saying that a lady wished to see me. Hastily finishing the meal I hurried into my business room. As I entered and bowed, a lady rose, made a slight courtesy and remained standing. I begged her to be seated, and of what service I could be to her. It was a little time before she answered, and then it was in a nervous, frightened way, glancing round the room as if she were afraid somebody else was present. I saw that, although she was dressed in good style, she had not the air of a lady; but as she wore a thick veil, I could not distinguish her features, though I made out a gray hair here and there.

"I suppose I had better explain who I am and what I want," she began. "I am Miss Howard, of Graham Square, and I want you to make out my will."

I started voluntarily, for this elderly person, though I had never seen her before, had been the subject of many a surmise and many a gossip with the neighbors. She was reported to be very wealthy; but had apparently abandoned the world, for, during the last five years, she had shut herself up in her house, seeing no one but her servants. My curiosity was therefore piqued at the idea of making out this old eccentric's will. Taking up a pen, I asked her to give me the particulars of how she wished the property disposed of.

"That is very simple," she said. "I wish my whole property to go to Mr. David Simpson, of Stafford street, here. I have never been married; and I want the will framed so as to cut off any heir who might claim relationship to me. I also wish you to act as my executor in seeing my will carried into effect."

I made a note of the instructions, and asked when it would be convenient for her to call and sign the deed.

"If you could have it written out by to-morrow night, I could call then and sign it. I would like if you could arrange to have a doctor present to be a witness to my signing—a young doctor, if possible."

"Certainly, madam. To-morrow night at this time will suit, and I will arrange about a doctor being present. Is there nothing else you wish mentioned in the will?"

"No; nothing," she said, rising. "But be sure you make it so as to cut off all relations."

I assured her everything would be as she desired; and after assisting her into a cab which was waiting, noticing the while that she had a slight limp in her walk, I retired to my study to frame the will in accordance with my instructions. Next night, punctual to a minute, she called; and as I had a doctor present, the ceremony of signing was soon over, the doctor signing as a witness along with my clerk, and appending a certificate of sanity as desired by my client. [illegible]

[illegible] ly, I thought, but [illegible] everything should be [illegible] possible. Our [illegible] and I came away with a [illegible] of dislike for the man, who, I found, had acted as sort of factor for the deceased lady.

Acting within the duties of my executorship, and also with a desire to find out if possible the relations the old lady had been so anxious to cut off, I inserted a notice of her death in most of the leading newspapers in the kingdom. This had the desired effect; for in the course of a few days I was waited upon by a young gentleman, Edward Howard, who informed me he was a nephew of the late Miss Howard, and had called upon me, having got my name and address from the office of one of the newspapers to which I had sent the advertisement. During my interview with Mr. Howard, I was much impressed with his bearing on my telling him the position of affairs, as he was much more concerned at his aunt's death than at the purpose of her will. He told me that five years ago he had married against his aunt's wishes; she had refused to recognize his wife; and though he had written her several letters, he had never heard from her in reply. He thanked me for my information, and said he would likely see me again, as he was coming into town to a situation he had just been offered.

Some weeks after this, as I was returning home in the evening from a consultation, my attention was arrested by the figure of a woman in front of me. She was hurrying along as if trying to escape observation; but there was something in her style and the limp which she had that struck me as familiar though I could not remember where I had seen her. Just as she was passing a lighted part of the street, she happened to look around, and the face I saw at once explained to me the familiarity of her figure—both face and figure being an exact counterpart of my late client's, Miss Howard! Somehow or other suspicion flashed across my mind; my instinct told me something was wrong, and I determined to follow her and see where she went to. Pushing my hat well over my brow and pulling the collar of my coat well up, I followed thro' two or three streets, and was almost at her heels when she suddenly turned into a public house, when, so close had I followed her, I heard the attendant say in answer to an inquiry by her, "Number thirteen, ma'am;" and I saw her disappear into the back premises. I immediately followed, heard the door of number thirteen shut, and glancing at the numbers, quietly opened number twelve, and after giving an order for some slight refreshment to the attendant who had followed me, I took a hasty look around the room.

I found it was divided from the next only by a wooden partition, which did not reach the ceiling, and that by remaining perfectly quiet I could hear that a whispered conversation was being carried on in the next room. The entrance of the attendant with my order disturbed my investigations; but on his departure and regardless of the old saying that listeners seldom hear anything to their own advantage, I did my best to make out the conversation. I distinguished the voices of two men and one woman. The latter I at once recognized, or at least my imagination led me to believe, to be the voice of the person who had called on me a year ago to make her will. The voice of one of the men was strange to me; but after the discovery I had already made, I was not greatly astonished at recognizing the voice of the other man to be that of Simpson, the legatee in the will. The whole thing flashed upon me at once, and I saw I had been made the innocent machinery for carrying through a clever and daring piece of imposture. I, however, listened attentively to the conversation, in order to fathom the whole affair.

The first sentence I made out came from the stranger: "I told you young Sinclair was the very man to do the work for you. These young lawyers never ask any questions as long as they get the business."

"Well, well," said Simpson, "that is all right now. But the question is, what is to be done in the way of hurrying him up with the realization of the estate without exciting suspicion? The sooner we all get away from this the better. I am glad that young fellow Howard didn't ask any questions. But one thing's certain, we must get the old woman away from this immediately, or she's sure to get recognized. She's been keeping pretty close lately; but I dare say she's getting tired of it. Aren't you, old lady?"

"Indeed," was the reply, "I would be glad to get away from this place to-morrow if I could. I'm sure I only wish you could have been content with half of the estate with Mr. Edward, instead of burning the will, when you found it was to be divided between you and him, and getting me to do what I did. I'm sure its a wonder my mistress doesn't rise from her grave to denounce us all."

"Keep that cant for another occasion, old woman; its no use getting religious now. But I'll tell you what—I've got an idea."

Here the conversation got so low that I could not catch more than an occasional word, and what that idea was I never found out, as he never got the chance to try it on me, for I had heard enough to know that next door to me was three of the most daring conspirators I had ever come across, who had duped me, and made me, though unwittingly, the chief [illegible] My first [illegible]

[illegible] landing over [illegible] his ear. The [illegible] went to a long [illegible]

"You'll do it as quietly as you can for the credit of the house," said he.

"Of course," said the detective. "Show us in."

In another minute we were inside the room, with our backs to the door, the detective dangling a pair of steel bracelets and nodding smilingly around the room. The woman fainted. We had no difficulty in securing the men and in half an hour we had them safely housed in jail.

Before their trial came on we had worked out the whole story. The woman who had called on me and signed the will was Mrs. Simpson, Miss Howard's housekeeper, the mother of Simpson, in whose favor the bill was made; and the other man was a lawyer's clerk who had suggested to them the feasibility of such a scheme. The fact of Miss Howard's self-confinement and my own imprudence had nearly made the plot a success, but my accidental recognition of the housekeeper. Each of the prisoners offered to turn queen's evidence; but as we had no difficulty in proving the case, this was refused, and they were sentenced to various periods of penal servitude. I had then the pleasure of handing over the property to the rightful heir, young Edward Howard, who, notwithstanding that I had nearly been the means of depriving him of his inheritance, made me his agent.

The estate turned out to be much larger than I had at first thought, as I succeeded in proving that a large number of investments in Simpson's name really belonged to Miss Howard, and the management of so large a property fairly put me on my feet as regards business. I have had many good clients since then, but I have often thought that my Veiled Client was my best one, as she was the means of giving me my first lesson in prudence and my first start in life.

THE PROPER THING.

Silk skirts are trimmed with flounces of ecru embroidery.

The favorite summer shawl is the cream white India chuddah.

A novelty is French chuddah scarfs with brocaded stripes in India colors.

Thin woolen dresses have the tucked skirts made without foundation skirts.

Low shoes are more worn out of doors than they have been in any previous summer.

Dressy wrappers are made in the long princesse shapes with a Watteau fold in the back.

Yellow satin, so popular this season, is combined with white muslin embroidered with gold.

The old-time "spencer" or round-belted bodice, with full frill below the belt is again revived.

Slippers of bronze kid are in great favor for dress occasions, and are ornamented with gilt beads.

Cheese-cloth dresses in all colors are made with full tucked skirts, and round belted bodices.

On full-dress occasions lace bonnets are more fashionable than any others, and roses are their garniture.

Whole wrappers are now made of the all-over embroidered muslins so much used for dress waists, yokes, etc.

A square of fine French cashmere with two ends ravelled for fringe, makes a handsome and in expensive shawl.

Dressing sacques are made of the muslins that are embroidered all over in patterns of sprigs, leaves and dots or stars.

Apple-red is the name of a new shade in net veiling. It is soft and pretty, and throws a becoming shade on the complextion.

Dainty white muslin bags trimmed with lace and bows are used for holding the handkerchief with summer toilettes.

How to Select a Husband.

It has been remarked that the true way of telling a toadstool from a mushroom, is to eat it. If you die, it was a toadstool; if you live, it was a mushroom. A similar method is employed in the selections of husbands; marry him, if he kills you he is a bad husband; if he makes you happy, he is a good one. There is really no other criterion. Some young men that seem unexceptionable, indeed very desirable, when they are single, are perfectly horrid as soon as they get married. All the latent brute there is in the heart comes out as soon as a sensitive and delicate being seeks her happiness in his companionship. The honeymoon lasts a very short time, the receptions and the rounds of parties are soon over, and then the two set down to make home happy. If she has married a society man, he will soon begin to get bored; he will yawn and go to sleep on the sofa. Then he will take his hat and go down to the club, and see the boys, and perhaps not come till morning. If she has married a man engrossed in business, he will be fagged out when he comes home. He may be a sickly man that she must nurse, a morose man that she must seek to cheer, a drunken man that she must sit up for, a violent man that she fears, a fool for whom she must apologize—in short, there are thousands of ways of being bad husbands and very few ways of being good ones. And the worst of it is, that the poor, silly women are apt to admire in single men the very traits that make bad husbands and look with con[illegible]

[illegible] my train,' said the [illegible] not think of the [illegible] myself. That was [illegible] years ago. Though an engineer, I was rather wild, and when I courted the daughter of the section boss—as pretty an Irish lass as ever lived—the old man objected. He said if I didn't reform from my ways I'd be killed some night on my run, and he didn't want any widows and children on his hands. But the gal and I made up our minds that we'd get married anyway, and trust to luck for the future.

"So I made all the preparations for an elopement. I had a day run but one night I changed off with another engineer on purpose. That run brought me to the little station where the section boss lived during the night. It was all arranged that she should come on board my engine, ride to the second station with me, and there a telegraph operator, a friend of mine, was to have a minister ready. Everything worked all right, and the lass was soon seated behind me in the cab. How the old locomotive did run that night. She seemed to fly through the air without touching the rails, but even then she didn't go fast enough to suit me. At the next station we stopped for orders, and the orders were to side track three miles beyond at the coal switch and wait for No. 6. That was four miles from L——, where the minister was. It was pretty rough but orders had to be obeyed. We had got nicely on the switch, and stood waiting a little while, when the brakeman came running forward as fast as he could run, and from the top of the front car shouted: 'The old man's coming on a hand car. Look out.'

"I turned, and sure enough, 30 rods away, a hand car was coming with four men on it. Somebody had betrayed us. There was no time to lose. As quick as a flash I decided what to do. Shouting to the brakeman to uncouple the tender from the car, I told my fireman to jump for the switch. He did so and I opened the throttle. Just in the nick of time the switch was turned, and we bounded onto the main track. The old man made a run for us, but he couldn't make it, and then returned to his hand car and gave chase. The question was now, could I make L—— siding before No. 6 left there? If I couldn't I might have a collision.

"I pulled the throttle wide open, and while I fired the lass kept her eye peeled along the track. She was a brave girl and never faltered, though we run so fast that the engine bounded and swayed as if it would leave the rails. Soon she called to me. 'I see a light.' I looked and it was the headlight of No. 6. But I looked again, and could see the switch lights this side of her—she was standing at L——. I whistled fiercely for the switch, again and again,. I could see the engine of No. 6 beginning to puff—they were moving out. Again I whistled, and at last they heard me. No. 6 stopped puffing, the white switch light gave way to a red one, and in a few seconds we glided upon the siding. At the station was our minister, and in five minutes we were married. Then we followed No. 6 back to the coal switch, and I moved on with my train without the loss of any time. The upshot of it all was that when he heard of it the superintendant overlooked my 'wild run' for a wife, and the old man came down and did the handsome thing by us. I never see a wedding party but I think of that night's ride."—[Chicago Herald.

Points on the Future Queen.

It would be ungallant not to admit that the Princess of Wales is an ornament to her sex, and her sweetness and beauty are the themes of every scribe wherever the royal lady is to be seen in public. But has any one ever observed the wife of Albert Edward smile? Her absolutely immobile countenance and her set expression are well known, and photography produces them in perfect truthfulness. That fair, but sphinx-like face, one in time begins, naturally enough, to regard as a mask, beneath which the real index of the soul moves in concealment. Reflections such as these are suggested by examining the latest cabinet portraits of Alexandria clothed in her doctor's robes—doctor of music, not of law, nor of divinity—as she was lately seen in Dublin. It would be curious to know why the princess always affects one fashion in the arrangement of her coiffure, but the fact is she is bald or nearly so. Her head was shaved during a serious illness and her hair has since refused to grow. Consequently the royal wardrobe includes fifty wigs, the distinguishing feature of which is that the curls are brought well over the forehead. Artistic dressing serves another purpose also, and the presence of a mark on the swan-like neck is effectually concealed by the high collar, large bow, band of velvet or other artless contrivance invariably worn by the future queen. Poor lady, she knows her sorrow! It is in general recollection when it was the fashion at court dances to affect the "Alexandra limp," in servile imitation of the Princess of Wales, whose [illegible] slightly impeded by the effects of [illegible] [illegible]

THE LARGE JACK

REVEILLE,

Will stand the season of 1885 at the farm of S. Pendergast, one-fourth mile south of Phoenix, on the Oswego river.

REVEILLE was imported from Kentucky, where he was carefully selected to meet the wants of this locality. He will be nine years old next August, is fifteen and a fourth hands high and weighs over nine hundred pounds.

TERMS—Ten dollars to insure. Bills payable March 1st, 1886. Pasturage $1 per week. All accidents and escapes at the owner's risk. No deviation from these terms.

I desire to hire the service of about twenty mares for the year and will pay good prices for the colts when old enough to take away.

JOHN A. McKAY - - EDITOR

THE members of the Grant family have returned to Mt. McGregor, where they will spend the remainder of the summer.

CHAUNCEY M. Depew says that Mr. Gray, the editor of the Freeman's Journal, is the brains of the Irish party, and by his side Parnell is a mere figure-head.

ROSCOE CONKLING is now said to be stopping at a place called Cartsbad, in Europe. Much inquiry has been made after this gentlemen since the 23d of July, "but never a word spake he."

THE monument to be erected in New York to the memory of Gen. Grant, it is expected, will cost half a million dollars. At present but $25,000 have been raised. At this rate it will be some time before the required amount is obtained.

PRESIDENT CLEVELAND spent Sunday in Albany the guest of his friend, Dr. Ward. During the afternoon he took a short ride. On Monday evening he left Albany for the Adirondacks where he will spend a quiet vacation.

COLLECTOR HEDDEN notified L. B. Curtis, receiving teller of the cashier's office last Saturday, that he was removed. He is a half brother of George William Curtis. W. B. Burtnett of Orange county is the new cashier.

WE cannot but admire the straightforwardness and independence with which our esteemed contemporary, the Weedsport Cayuga Chief, treats every subject which appears in its columns. Such a journal is a credit to any community. The people of Weedsport may well feel proud of the Chief.

JOSEPH E. JOHNSTON, the confederate general, was in Portland, Oregon, when he received a message from President Cleveland stating that he had been appointed one of the pall bearers of Gen. Grant. He was soon on his way to New York. The brave old general is nearly eighty years of age.

A. A. MUNGER, one of the richest men in Chicago, has sailed for Europe for the purpose of investing $200,000 in paintings. He proposes to build up a great art gallery for Chicago which shall rival anything of the kind in America. Visitors will have free admittance by ticket, and ultimately the gallery will be given to the city. Mr. Munger's wealth is estimated at several millions.

A LARGE number of professional thieves from all parts flocked into New York from the time Gen Grant was laid in state in the city hall until he was buried at Riverside, with the intention of plundering and faring sumptuously off the great crowds. But the thieves were outwitted by the city detective force who made over one hundred arrests. At this state of things the remainder of the thieves fled to Coney Island and other places to avoid capture.

SECRETARY ENDICOTT has issued an order amending a certain regulation in which he proposes to have a rotation in office. It has been customary in the war department to provide favorites with easy berths while other officers are serving at undesirable ports, perhaps fighting on the frontiers. The order reads thus: "An officer shall not fill any staff appointment or other situation the duties of which will detach him from his company, regiment or corps until he has served at least three years with his regiment or corps; nor shall any officer remain detached longer than four years unless assigned to special duty by the War department."

IN an article on "disgraceful journalism" in the Oswego Palladium of Monday we find the following:

> "There are newspapers sold on our streets Sunday mornings which Oswego people can read without fear of being insulted, but the Syracuse Times, Standard, and Herald are not included in the list."

The Palladium does great injustice to the Standard in the above remark. Nowhere throughout the State is there a newspaper which contains more choice and appropriate selections of matter for Sunday reading than the Standard. This paper has free access to the homes of many of the best families in this village and is recognized as a model Sunday paper.

FRANCE is not showing a great deal of friendship for the United States these days. Only one Paris newspaper—The Temps—gives Grant and his career unqualified praise. The reason for this is that he always expressed a dislike for the Napoleons, refused to see the Prince Imperial while on his trip, and sent a ... message of congratulation to ... William over the result of the Franco-Prussian war. These actions of ... may have constituted a just grievance against him in the minds of the ... people, but this is no time for ... of their ill-will.—[Utica ...

... and citizens in the west have ... made complaints at ... [illegible]

... anxious ... in the ... and on the street corners discussing the ... which led to the great outpouring of people in this city, on Saturday. Never before in the history of the nation has there been an event which called forth such universal sorrow, or stirred the hearts of the common people more profoundly. There was noticeably lacking however, much of the gloom and sadness manifested in the sudden taking off of President Lincoln by the assassin's bullet; nor was there the deep seated and heart-felt sympathy which the long and painful sickness and death of President Garfield created. The people looked upon these as martyrs and loved them for their goodness. In the present case General Grant was thought to be the nations saviour and had won the hearts of all men by his distinguished military services, his honesty of purpose and the magnanimity shown the leaders of the Southern army, after laying down their arms. For these and many other noble qualities, which marked the career of a hero in battle, and have since given a more deserving fame as a civil ruler, the united nation paid homage in the splended funeral pageant of Saturday. Your readers have already gone over the graphic scenes, and but few words need be added. The day opened bright and clear and proved to be one of perfect beauty. All business ceased; and at an early hour the people, from many cities and towns, from distant states and territories, massed themselves on each side of Broadway and along the entire line of march, reaching fully ten miles. There is a population living within a radius of three miles including the city, of eight millions; of these it is said fully three millions found a place to witness the passing pageant. Having a favorable position near City Hall, at near 9 o'clock Gen. Hancock and staff mounted upon splendid steeds rode upon the plaza. They were followed by a battery and company of infantry; in due time, after a large company of singers rendered very effectively airs from Wagner's Tannhauser, the funeral car, drawn by twenty-four dark horses richly caparisoned, each attended by a colored groom, came forth from the grounds and took a position on Broadway; it was a most impressive sight. For a full hour this portion of the procession waited in order to get the thousands of troops in readiness many blocks up Broadway on the side streets to fall in line of march as given. At 10:15 came the order "march" and the first gun of the frigate Minnesota boomed over the water and the bells of St. Peter and Trinity began to toll. The column of escort when under full march presented an imposing appearance. No other occasion has ever equaled it on this continent. The music was very grand and solemn. When the First Massachusetts Reg't band played "Nearer My God to Thee," the bells rang in unison and it seemed the music of heaven. The Seventh Reg't band and a hundred others gave forth music solemn and majestic. More than three miles of solidly packed military and noted civilians kept step to the music. 60,000 men in line moved at the instance of one master mind, under the eyes of millions of people strained ready to catch every noted general, or distinguished diplomat, or great civilian. From an elevated position, stretching the eye far up and down Fifth Avenue, the vast throng stood quiet, rarely speaking a word. Wherever the catafalque moved there were uncovered heads and the stillness of death, and only a suppressed breathing which seemed to say "This is the end of all things." There was a rustle along the line when the President's barouche drawn by six horses passed, beside him sat his leading Secretary, Bayard, following was the Vice President and the cabinet, the Supreme court judges, U. S. senators, Governors of nineteen states, ex-Presidents Hayes and Arthur, foreign ministers and great numbers of the most distinguished men of this and other countries. The cortege moved in files of ten or twenty men.

The display of decorated blocks and residences was one never before equaled. All the great hotels were elaborately draped with striking mottoes culled from the laconic Grant. One which attracted most attention was "Let them take their horses with them, they will need them for their crops;" Grant to Lee, April 9, '65.

It was half past four o'clock when the tomb was reached; from an unknown source came forth music from Chopin's regal funeral march. After Dr. Newman and Bishop Harris, came Gen. Sherman in full uniform, beside him was the ex-Confederate Gen. Joe Johnston, then came Gen. Phil. Sheridan, resplendent in gold braid with Gen. Buckner, and others in order. Members of Mead post removed the casket, looking so simple yet grand in purple velvet, silver mountings and solid gold plate with the simple word "GRANT." The impressive burial services were of the ritual of the Grand Army, and listened to with evident signs of emotion. Upon the coffin was laid the wreath of evergreen, the white rose and the laurel wreath, each accompanied by the appropriate message. Bishop Harris read the first part of the Methodist burial service and Dr. Newman the concluding part. The casket was placed in the cedar box, and this in turn in the heavy plate steel receptacle, weighing a ton and one-half, and securely fastened. The iron gate of the vault was closed and locked, the key handed Gen. Hancock, who in turn gave it to Mayor Grace, and subsequently to President Cummins of the park. The seventh regiment next fired a volley, the regulars followed with another, and the battery a little way off, fired three salvos, and the end was reached. A ... [illegible]

COUNTY COMMENT.

The state board of health has directed the trustees of Pulaski to appoint a local board of health and cause them to examine into a drain which causes a nuisance.

At the yacht races at Oswego, Thursday, prizes were awarded in the following order: First class, Atlanta of Baldwinsville, Aileen of Oswego, ... [illegible]

... of any honored dead ... have just been borne ... attended with more pomp, and genuine sorrow, than has ever before been accorded to any of the illustrious dead of this or any other nation. Grant was surely of the people. One of the many; with, and for them, and the bowed heads, tear bedimmed eyes, and reverential quiet of the great crowds in the city to-day, told plainly what a hold this quiet unpretentious man had upon the masses. Men of all states gathered here to do him honor, and even the men who fought against him assisted at his funeral.

Ever since the news of his death was flashed into the city, the dwellers therein have vied with each other in honoring his memory. Every flag is half masted, and there is scarcely a building that does not show some emblem of mourning. The city hall in particular is elegantly draped, and the vestibule in which the remains laid in state is one field of black, fold on fold. Wednesday of this week at five o'clock the remains arrived from Albany, and were escorted to the city hall by General Hancock and staff, New York's committee of one hundred, a troup each of infantry, cavalry marines and blue jackets of the regular service, and the ninth, twelvth, seventh and twenty-second regiments of New York city, with the military, and family friends in carriages. Day and night, from Wednesday until Saturday, a constant stream of people two abreast passed through the vestibule of the hall to gaze, some for the first, but all for the last time, at the calm face of the dead commander.

Three hundred thousand people are said to have passed the coffin in the three days, and when the doors were closed Friday night the line extended to Canal street on Broadway, and all these people had to go away disappointed. Early this morning people began to gather in the city and Broadway, and Fifth avenue was crowded as early as seven o'clock. The tide of travel was up town, and at every corner the crowd received new comers and swept on to find some place from which to view the procession. Seats in windows along the line readily sold for large sums, and were scarce at any price.

I reached Fifth avenue and Twenty-fifth street at ten o'clock, just as the head of the line began to move, and stood there until the funeral car passed. This was shortly after two o'clock, and just half of the line had passed. Gen. Hancock rode at the head of the U. S. Regulars, who were followed by the first division N. G. S. N. Y., General Shaler, and visiting troops from Hartford Conn., Washington, Italians legions and colored veterans. Then came the second division N. G. S. N. Y., Major General Molineaux, with visiting troops from Pennsylvania, Georgia, Connecticut, Massachusetts, Virginia, Minnesota and District of Columbia. New Jersey militia were at the end of the second division. The militia were followed by the clergy and physicians, and next in line were the pall bearers in carriages.

THE PALL BEARERS.

Gen. William T. Sherman, U. S. A.
Lieut-Gen. Philip Sheridan, U. S. A.
Admiral David D. Porter, U. S. N.
Vice-Admiral S. C. Rowan, U. S. N.
Gen. Joseph E. Johnston, of Virginia.
Gen. Simon B. Buckner, of Kentucky.
Hamilton Fish, of New York.
George S. Boutwell, of Massachusets.
George W. Childs, of Pennsylvania.
John A. Logan, of Illinois.
George Jones, of New York.
Oliver Hoyt, of New York.

With uncovered heads the crowd gazed sadly at the catafalque as it slowly passed up the avenue. Plain, yet imposing like the man it bore. With the twenty-four black horses and the guard of honor, it passed from our sight leaving pity, sympathy, patriotism and gratitude struggling in each one's heart for mastery. One family united by a common grief honoring its dead. In carriages following the funeral car were the family and friends, including General Grant's old staff, and cabinet officers. Then Cleveland and Hendricks, the cabinet, members of Supreme courts, senators, speaker and members of the House of Representatives, Governor of New York, ex-Presidents Hayes and Arthur, Foreign Ministers, consuls, governors of states, generals with their staffs, the mayors of several cities, civil officers and citizens.

Following those marched the veteran division, fifteen thousand strong, (under General Sickles) and representing twenty-one states of the Union. Civic societies of New York and Brooklyn brought up the rear. The services at the grave were simple, and included the G. A. R. ritual. Minute guns boomed on the shore, and were answered from the vessels anchored in the Hudson. Riverside park extends from Seventy-second street to One Hundred and Thirty-first, along the river front. The tomb is placed on the bluff near One Hundred and Twenty-third street, surrounded by trees, and overlooking the majestic stream.

Fifty thousand men marched in line to-day, and to the visiting soldiers the nine mile march through the dense crowds and over gleaming pavements must have been a good test of their marching abilities. Some of the Virginia troops that halted near me were talking of the crowds. "Never saw anything like it." "Where do they all come from?" "Are they all New Yorkers?" and like expressions were readily exchanged. As most of the pick-pockets and confidence men had been arrested yesterday the police did not have much trouble, and the people seemed to melt away as rapidly as they came, each one wending west, and thinking of the man who had just gone from ... the glories and pomp attending ... funeral. [illegible]

... at the head.

At the Oswego-Star game in Oswego on Saturday the turnstile showed 2,400 paid admissions, while nearly 2,000 women were admitted free. A large amount of money changed hands on the result. The game ended with ten runs for the Stars to three for the Oswegos.

Thousand Island Notes.

Business at the Thousand Island park hotel is rushing. There were nearly 75 arrivals Saturday.

The Crossman house has now over 200 guests, and is filling to overflowing. Round Island park is also doing a good business.

Bob Toombs Talks.

ATLANTA, Ga., Aug. 10.—In an interview yesterday Gen. Robert Toombs said: "Gen. Grant was the greatest soldier produced by the war. Gen. Lee was a very good engineer, a man of fine family, but no man to head an army. Gen. Grant was simple-minded and honest, and had no more animosity toward the south than toward the north. Being a West Point graduate, war was a profession with him. Jefferson Davis was the wrong man for the confederate presidency. It should have been Albert Sidney Johnston or Gen. Joseph E. Johnston. The south was throttled by Davis's West Point ideas."

GENERAL NEWS.

The swine herds in South Essex, Ont., are being decimated by hog cholera.

The letters have been interesting if nothing more, and they relieve the monotony of prison life. If he is sincere he cannot amount to much, for no young man who thinks anything of himself goes to a penitentiary to pick out a wife. If he is fooling, well and good. Cheese Market.

(FROM THE UTICA HERALD.)

AT UTICA Aug. 10.

The market to-day was more active than for two weeks past, and displayed considerable strength. The fact that cheese was fairly cleaned up in New York last week, seemed to give a stimulus to prices, and the later dispatches from the east were more encouraging to buyers than those received in the early part of the day. The strife for pet lots was quite sharp, and several of them went to a buyer who has not often succeeded in getting them. He was willing to pay well for them, and his bids helped the rest of the market. This is the advantage of the Utica market, that we have enough buyers who are able to take cheese and pay for it, so that in anything like active times there is a fair amount of competition. Nearly three weeks of the July cheese is now taken. The make is said to be good, and cool weather is favorable for shipments. Transactions to-day were as follows: Five lots, 500 boxes, at 6⅜c.; 44 lots, 5,071 boxes, at 6½c.; 10 lots, 1,320 boxes, at 6⅝c.; 6 lots, 760 boxes at 6¾c.; 15 lots, 1,615 boxes, at 7c.; 11 lots, 1,337 boxes, at 7⅛c.; 2 lots, 230 boxes, at 7¼c. Sales 10,853 boxes; commissions 2,077; total, 1,92? boxes. Ruling price 6⅝c. Transactions of corresponding day one year ago, 11,335 boxes, 9¾c. ruling; two years ago, 12,515 boxes, 9c. ruling. Our market is ¼c. higher than last week and no higher than the New York quotations warrant. The advance is regarded as a healthy one.

LITTLE FALLS, Aug. 10.

CHEESE.—We have had a brisk market and a better feeling all around. It was talked early in the day that prices would be about the same as last week, possibly a little better on some lots, but sales ... were considerably surprised at the close to find ... fully one-half cent higher, making the ruling price 6⅞c. This advance on July cheese makes everybody feel good, as it was not expected and if it is maintained it will be strong encouragement for future trade. A liberal sale was made. We quote a few lots at private trade, some of which it is believed, were made at over 7c. Following are the transactions:

Lots.	Boxes.	Price.
2	93	6 cts
2	124	6¼cts
33	2,880	6⅜cts
50	4,290	6⅞cts
25	1,880	7 cts
5	515	p. t.
11	818	Com
138	10,145
Farm Dairy	750
Total	10,895

FARM DAIRIES.—There was a good lively trade in farm cheese, 750 boxes selling at 4@7c., the bulk at 5½c.

BUTTER.—Butter has made a little advance in price. 74 packages of creamery sold at 17@17½c., mostly at the latter price. 29 farm dairy went at 16@17½c.

AT FULTON.

The market did not vary in activity from last week. Considerable July cheese was sold. Many believe that when July cheese is entirely disposed of there will be good prospects for an advance. The transactions were as follows: Twenty-four factories offered 2,756 boxes of which 1,500 boxes were sold at 6⅝c., Utica ruling. Hoose was not on the market on account of sickness. The price one year ago was 9¾, two years ago 9 cents.

[illegible] Boothby, [illegible] principal of Fulton [illegible] for several years past. The community was startled last week by the intelligence that owing to extreme mental prostration, he had resigned his position in the school and, acting under the advice of physicians, had gone to Willard asylum for treatment. It is a well known and universally conceded fact that Prof. Boothby is one of the most indefatigable and tireless workers in our village. He has taken a great interest in the school and the advancement of the pupils, and with this end in view has devoted himself, regardless of his health, to their interests, leaving nothing undone that could be done to help them in their studies. Even on Sundays he has not only attended services regularly, but has also been the Superintendent of two Sunday schools, and each has been attended to in his characteristic vigorous way. For the past few months his school duties have been very laborious, and added to this was the work of the State Inter-Academic Literary Association, which recently met in Fulton and to which he devoted himself with all of his impetuosity, and largely through his efforts made it the success it was. After his recent return from Saratoga, where he attended the State Teacher's and National Educational Convention, he was completely prostrated physically and mentally. Owing to his condition it was evident that he would be unable to resume his place in the school, and he accordingly resigned, and last Thursday was taken to the asylum by H. V. Spencer. This sad news of Prof. Boothby's affliction will be read with extreme regret by all the educational and religious world, among whom he has been so well and favorably known. His place in our school among the scholars who loved and respected him, will be hard to fill. The sincere, heartfelt sympathy of the community goes out to him in his affliction, and all unite with us in wishing for him a speedy and complete restoration to health.

High Banks.

Situated on the west bank of the Oswego river, about four miles south of this village is a delightful spot known to Fultonians as High Banks. To pleasure seekers who chance to observe the marvellous beauties of nature surrounding the place, they cannot but experience a feeling of delight and admiration together with a desire to tarry for a time at least. Facing the river is a green bank some twenty feet in height and in the back ground a maple grove, through which the sun sifts in a flood of radiance in patches here and there on the emerald green of the grass, while the song of the bird is heard in the trees above. Everything about the place is in accord with the feelings and ideas of one who is in search of a quiet place for rest. For the past few years a few of our citizens have annually enjoyed several weeks of camp life on this picturesque spot. Each year the place seems to become more and more popular. The daily trip of the steamer Van Doren, makes it very convenient for those who feel compelled to drop down occasionally and look after their business. Again, you have excellent fishing grounds at no great distance from camp. The writer visited High Banks a few days since and found the grove dotted with white canvas. Among the campers are Jessie Morrill and mother, Miss Nellie Royce, Harry Howe, Willard Reynolds, Putnam Allen and friend Mr. Richards of Yale college, and one or two other parties whose names we did not learn.

Trade Picking Up.

NEW YORK, August 7.—Special telegrams to Bradstreet's from leading cities throughout the United States report an increase in the improvement previously noted in various lines of staples. At Boston the gain in the demand for dry goods continues as well as that for boots and shoes. Dry goods in Philadelphia are likewise in better request, though not in excess of sales at corresponding periods in preceding years. It is regarded as a special significance, however, that the general feeling in dry goods circles is more buoyant and that greater confidence exists as to the probable stability of prices. The country demand for dry goods at St. Louis is also heavier and the trade there is characterized as fair. From Cincinnati comes word that there is a marked improvement in almost all staple lines. Cooler weather at the West has had a stimulating effect on business. At Chicago, however, there has been only a slight increase in business. Ocean freights have been dull and low with relatively little offering. The movement of grocery staples is still disappointing and in leading lines is behind last year. Dairy products are still depressed.

Annual School Meeting.

The annual school meeting of the duly qualified voters of Union Free School District No. 2 in the town of Volney, for the purpose of voting taxes and the transaction of any other appropriate business, will be held at the Fourth street school house in said district, at 7 o'clock p. m., Tuesday, August 25, 1885.

The Annual Election in said district will be held at the above named place on Wednesday, August 26, 1885. Polls open at 12 o'clock noon and close at 5 o'clock, p. m.

Dated, Fulton, N. Y., August 11, 1885.

HONORING GRANT'S MEMORY.

The Day Properly Observed in Fulton—Bells Tolled and Guns Fired—Exercises in the Opera House.

At an early hour last Saturday the streets of Fulton assumed a busy, and at the same time a mournful aspect. Flags at half mast were displayed, and a large number of the principal business houses heavily draped in mourning and the general suspension of business, gave an unusually sombre air to the village. At two o'clock the G. A. R. post formed on First street and with muffled drums marched slowly to the opera house, where appropriate ceremonies were held.

The exercises opened with a prayer by the Rev. Mr. Barnes of the Universalist church. This was followed by several addresses interspersed with singing. The address of Prof. Roe, spoken from a personal knowledge of Gen. Grant, was very eloquent and brought tears to the eyes of many in the audience. A very appropriate selection was beautifully rendered by Miss Mary L. Lawrence. The Hon. Chas. N. Bulger of Oswego, was unable to come and Col. T. B. White of the same city came in his place. In spite of the extreme heat, the house was filled to overflowing and the exercises throughout were listened to with close attention.

During the exercises the fire bell was solemnly tolled and over and anon the minute gun in the park boomed forth its voice in memory of the honored dead.

County Politics.

The Oswego Palladium's "Man About Town," speaking of the opposition which Mr. Sloan will meet in the senatorial contest says: "There is also a large element of young republicans who refuse to advance the political fortunes and ambitions of a man who defeated the only young man the party has put forward, the Hon. P. W. Cullinan. Your "Man About Town" hears a great deal of talk regarding the strength of the Sloan managers. To start with, it is said that Volney and Granby are the property of the "Mott-Sloan" combination, and that Mr. H. C. Howe and district attorney Mead will bring the delegates from those towns pledged for Mr. Sloan. To a man up a tree it would appear policy on the part of Mr. Howe if he is as desirous of succeeding himself, as it is rumored, that he keep his hands off. It will be remembered that in a presidential election Mr. Howe had but a small majority, and in such elections a candidate obtains more unanimous support than other years. The most active supporters Mr. Howe had were the present Worts men, and his opponents in his party were Mr. Sloan's friends. It will be exceedingly judicious on the part of Mr. H. C. Howe not to meddle in the sectional fight."

The New Stove Works.

A representative of THE TIMES last Monday visited the buildings of the new stove company, and was greatly surprised at the many changes that had taken place. The roof of the moulding room recently burned, has been rebuilt and other important and necessary changes made. In the other building in what was the old machine shop, a new floor has been laid, partitions built, the walls and ceilings whitewashed and the entire place so thoroughly renovated and changed, that the reporter hardly realized he was in the old Ross foundry. The office occupies the same place it did formerly but has been repainted throughout and greatly improved. A large part of the new machinery has arrived and is being placed in position. Many tons of pig iron has been received and corded up near the furnace. From all indications work will commence some time during the present month. Several photographs of the stoves which are to be manufactured here have been shown us, and they present a handsome appearance, and we predict a large demand for them.

The Street Railroad.

At a special meeting of the Board of Trustees last Friday evening, the right of way was granted to the new street railroad company. During the day a petition had been freely circulated and signed by many citizens, and despite the strenuous efforts made to oppose the construction of the new road the unanimous consent of the Board was obtained. The consent of the Oswego Falls Board has also been obtained at a meeting held last night and when Supt. of Public Works Shanahan gives his permission to cross the canal bridge, which in all probability will readily be granted, the construction of the road will commence at once. D. C. Hadcock and contractor Henry McTighe are in New York buying materials for the new road.

Taken to Oswego.

Chas. Harris, who it will be remembered was arrested recently for burglary and made his escape from the officers, and last week was rearrested at Bay City, Mich., was brought to Fulton Friday by Officer Poole. On the way here the officer found a bottle of chloroform on Harris, given him he says by a fellow prisoner in the jail at Bay City, for the purpose of drugging the officer and making his escape. He was placed in jail and last Saturday night, he, in company with Frank VanValkenburg, who is charged with complicity in the same offence with Harris, was taken to Oswego by Under Sheriff Pousstey, where they will be confined until the meeting of the grand jury.

Last Thursday evening the Fulton band gave an open air concert in the park, playing several splendid selections. Fulton people are to be congratulated in possessing a band second to none in this section of the state. We hope to have more of these concerts.

Ground was broken last Monday for the erection of a new brick block on the vacant lot adjoining Wilcox's meat market on Cayuga street, owned by T. D. Lewis. The new building will be 38x60 feet, two stories high and when finished will be an ornament to the street.

The branch office in this village of Babcock, Andrews & Co., brokers of Syracuse, who recently failed, received notice yesterday that the telegraph instruments in the office must be turned over to the Western Union company. This order is regarded as a permanent closing of the office here.

The Board of Education have already received many applications for the position as principal of No. 2 school which place has been made vacant by the resignation of Prof. Boothby. At this writing the board have taken no action in the matter further than considering the applications.

The thirteenth annual convention of the state firemen's association opened in Syracuse yesterday and will continue through Thursday and Friday. Great preparations have been made and it is likely to prove one of the most successful affairs of the kind ever held. Among the attractions will be a female band of sixteen pieces from Fenton, Mich.

St. Lawrence county farmers are telling big milk stories. B. H. Smith, of Gouverneur, claims to have a cow of the short horned breed, that gave 50 pounds of milk per day during the last three weeks of June. This is slightly beaten by E. H. Davis, of Potsdam, who reports of a native cow at pasture, which is giving 54 pounds per day at two milkings.—[Ex.

John Spencer, formerly of this village who while employed in the post office at Mexico, stole money from registered letters, was arrested the other day in Chicago, on complaint of Carrie Barnes of Mexico, with whom he was intimate while there and from whom he obtained $50. He confessed that he had taken $125 from the post office. He promised to restore this amount through the intercession of his brother, who is a lawyer of Mexico and would not have been arrested but for the complaint of Miss Barnes. He will be taken to Mexico for trial.

[illegible] burned [illegible] years ago. It was [illegible] owned by D. J. Hamburger of Syracuse, and operated by James Grigson. The fire was first discovered by Mr. Grigson's daughter, who immediately aroused the family. When Grigson reached the tannery, which is nearly opposite his house, he found the fire confined to the hair room, in the southeast corner of the building. In this room was a quantity of hose and the fire apparatus belonging to the tannery, but owing to the intense heat it was impossible to get at them. The building was a wooden structure, the main portion being 40x300 feet in size with several large wings. The fire made rapid progress and long before the fire department reached the scene the entire building was in flames. Steamer No. 1 reached the grounds about thirty minutes after the alarm was sounded, soon followed by No. 2, which after a short stay was returned to the engine house. No. 1 was stationed on the bank of the creek and the efforts of the firemen were directed towards saving the huge piles of bark corded up on the west side of the tannery. A new hairing machine valued at $500 which had recently been placed in the building is a total loss. The building was valued at $25,000 and contained an amount of stock worth $50,000. The insurance which at this writing is unknown, is with Syracuse parties. Mr. Grigson succeeded in recovering a portion of the books. For the past few weeks the tannery has been running night and day to fill the orders. It had been customary to employ a night watchman but as it was thought unnecessary, his services were dispensed with about two weeks ago until cold weather. Two valuable dogs were burned. About sixteen men are thrown out of employment. One of the employes said to a TIMES reporter that he had worked in the tannery for the last twenty years and in the past ten years had not lost a day. It is hardly probable that the tannery will be rebuilt owing to the scarcity of hemlock bark hereabouts. An idea of the business done may be formed from the fact that last month this firm paid the D. L. & W. railroad over $1,200 for freight. The cause of the fire is unknown, but is supposed to be incendiary. The loss of this establishment is a severe blow to Lower Oswego Falls.

THE RINK FIRE.

Last Monday night about twelve o'clock, as Officers Poole and Curtis were going their rounds as night-watchmen, a bright light was seen in the southern part of the village. While one of them sounded the alarm, the other ran up First street and soon discovered the skating rink to be in flames. In seventeen minutes No. 1 steamer was on the ground, and in six minutes more had a stream on the fire. No. 2 was also on hand, going up the tow path to a point just below the fire. She got up steam quickly and did good service. By the time a stream was thrown the entire building was a mass of ruins. The extreme heat of the burning building caused several of the large panes of glass in Murphy & Sullivan's grocery to break, and but for the water thrown on in pails serious damage would have resulted to the neighboring buildings. The rink was built a year ago at a cost of about $5,000, and was said to have been insured for $3,000. It is a most fortunate thing that the night was very still and no wind blowing. Had there been a breeze the surrounding property would have been greatly endangered. That the fire was incendiary there is not a doubt, as it is said that just before the fire broke out a man who was passing saw a light moving about the interior of the building. A tricycle belonging to Dr. I. C. Curtis which was in the building at the time was burned. It was valued at about $175.00. The rink was owned by Messrs Harlow, Stevens and Crofoot of Binghamton, and Mr. Alderman of Fish Creek.

The Phœnix Road.

The bridge at Three River Point on the S. P. & O. railway was completed last night and the road is now in running order between this city and Syracuse. As yet the company has built no depots or purchased any stock. No arrangements have been made for the running of trains, but it is believed that this will be attended to early next week. It is generally believed that the road will be leased either to the N. Y., O. & W. or to the R., W. & O.

A gentleman who is more or less familiar with the workings of the new company said to-day that he would not be surprised if the R. W. & O. should operate the road for 60 days, at the end of which time it will probably be leased to that corporation. He was of the opinion that trains would be put on next week to catch the travel to Syracuse during the firemen's convention.—[Oswego Palladium, Saturday evening.

Acquitted of the Charge.

Mrs. Hanna Althouse, who was charged before U. S. Commissioner Getty, with having opened a letter in September 1884, directed to W. W. Wells, with a design to obstruct his correspondence or pry into his business or secrets, was yesterday honorably discharged after a full examination, the commissioner holding that the evidence showed that she opened the letter by mistake, believing it was her own. It appears that upon ascertaining that it was not hers, she immediately went and delivered it to Mr. Wells informing him that it was a mistake.

Palermo.

PALERMO, Aug. 11.—William Gloyd and wife have resided here for some time and recently have had considerable trouble with a young man, Geo. Gardner. Mrs. Gloyd is a good-looking woman and a decided brunette. Gardner imagined himself in love with her and has improved every opportunity [to enjoy her society. He eventually succeeded in inducing her to leave her home and husband and fly with him. Last Monday a ferocious looking revolver in the hands of the husband induced Gardner to relinquish his claims (?) and Mr. and Mrs. Gloyd went to Meridan to live, whither they have been followed by Gardner who insists that he will have the woman or die in the attempt. In all probability the latter will occur.

[illegible] the flavor of beets, turnips or cabbages in milk can be overcome by dissolving half a teaspoonful of saltpetre in a teacup of water and pouring it into the churn with the cream at churning time. Cabbage may be fed at night after milking without flavoring the milk.

Decomposition commences in milk, if allowed to retain its natural heat, soon after being drawn from the cow. Because the nights are cool it does not obviate the necessity of cooling the milk that is to be delivered to the factory the next morning. It should also be well aired, since contact with air removes the animal odor.

As a general rule Professor Ford found the yield of butter grew less the lower the temperature of the milk before setting, says the Philadelphia Record. When milk set in ice water directly after milking gave 100 pounds, milk that had been previously cooled to 68 degrees gave 95.7 pounds, 54 degrees gave 91 pounds and 48 degrees gave 86.3 pounds. A means of restoring the original qualities of such milk was found in warming the milk to about 104 degrees before setting.

If a cow is a deep milker, and not inclined to dry off before milking time, do not seek to shrink the milk suddenly, either by ceasing to milk or by starvation, is the advice of the Philadelphia Record. Neither should she be physiced or her udder bathed with astringent washes; this has the effect to throw the milk back into the blood, causing congestion, inflammation and complications. Give dry food, including plenty of bran and milk her right along, but a month before her calving time feed the milk to the hogs.

Autumn Tree-Planting.

It has been the custom with nurserymen to send out agents to dispose of a part of their stock in Autumn. This plan has many good points, but unfortunately for the buyer, they are all on nurserymen's side, as, through the long summer days agents can drive a better business, when the farmer is taken at his best, and one does not meet with the blinding storms and drifts of snow; also it gives more time and avoids, in part, the general rush if all were done in spring.

But how is it with the farmer? The work of planting, if done in autumn, comes at a time of the year when the farmer is finishing harvest and can ill spare the time; which, if done early in spring before time to start the plow (and this is the cream of time even if it takes a special order and increased cost) he has plenty of spare time. To sum the matter up, time is not all. A tree planted in the spring and gets all summer's growth, gets partially acclimated; trimmed branches and bruised roots heal over and it stands the vigors of a severe winter far better than one planted in autumn, exposed in most cases to a change in climate and soil eight months before nature begins to give it new life.

I have in mind a nurseryman of small means from near Seneca Lake who came through here in autumn, many years ago, and sold largely, warranting them to grow; after replacing those that died (fully one-third with good care) and then some of these next year he concluded it did not pay and quit autumn business.—[J. H. Andre in American Rural Home.

FACTS FOR FARMERS.

Keep all unused tools housed.

Mellow culture lessens the hurt from drouth one-half.

Sow a patch of corn now for a succession of green feed.

Use a wet cloth or some leaves in your hat to prevent sunstroke.

Protect the horses and cattle from flies by using fly nets and covers.

In hot weather give the poultry dry corn, plenty of greens and a little meat.

In stacking hay pitch it on from different sides, to secure evenness in settling, and a stack that will not lean.

An excellent way to kill potato bugs is to cut old potatoes and put paris green on them, and then place them around your potatoes instead of the vines of the new ones. Those who tried this last year say it is a much better way than to put paris green on the vines.

Horse Colic.

The symptoms of colic, one of the most fatal diseases to a horse, are readily detected. The horse invariably scrapes with his fore feet, kicks at the stomach and shifts about, turns around, smells the floor, lies down, rolls, remaining for a time on his back and breathes heavily throughout. At a recent meeting of the London Farmer's club, a relief and sure cure was presented by a gentlemen who has been all his life among horses. When a horse shows symptoms of an attack of colic, apply at once a horse cloth or woolen rug, wrung out of boiling water, to the stomach and to the sides and cover with another couple of cloths to retain the heat. As they are cool, renew as often as needful. A large bran poultice, as hot as can be borne, is equally effective, and retains the heat longer.

TWO YEARS AGO!

[illegible]

[illegible] likely to be so [illegible] business [illegible]. Demand may be increased very largely through cheap good production and closer relation between producers and consumers. The past year in many localities that usually produce full supplies of fruit was not favorable, while in other localities the yield was fully up to the average, or beyond. Apples in some districts were worth $1 a barrel, in others $1.50, and there was a good deal of business done by evaporators, who took apples at fifteen cents a bushel, fair fruit, but not suited to winter keeping. There is not much profit in selling at these prices, but there is more profit than in wheat at eighty cents, or in corn, buckwheat or barley at current rates. Grapes in eastern markets sold all the way from four to fifteen cents a pound, wholesale rates. Quinces sold as high as $10 a barrel, and they have always been high. An illustration of profits to be derived from fruit raising may be seen in the business of a grower who, on the west shore of Seneca Lake, a few years ago, bought a farm at a high price and planted twenty acres with quince trees. In the first bearing year he gathered a crop that sold for enough money to reimburse his outlay for the land and trees, the labor of planting and care, gathering and shipping the fruit. The next year his crop was light; then came another full year of bearing, when he realized a net profit of $500 an acre for the entire orchard. Of course, it will be understood that an experience like this is not likely to be repeated often, and will never occur in the practice of an unskillful person or one unacquainted with the special interest from which such magnificent returns were made. There is in it, however, encouragement to those who would undertake fruit raising on a moderate scale. They have the assurance that, with proper management, they can realize from any of the standard fruits more profits from year to year than from grains.

"Don'ts" for Summer Use.

Don't work as hard as usual during the middle of the day if it can be escaped.

Don't eat as much as usual. It is not necessary, and a little fasting in hot weather always pays.

Don't drink extremely cold ice water. It is always better to eat the ice or let it melt in the mouth.

Don't have any fires going in the house unless absolutely necessary. Use cold foods and do without hot drinks.

Don't wear your clothes tight. It impedes the already depressed circulation and is a great source of discomfort.

Don't eat any meat or butter, if you can do without them. They are heating and anyone is better without them this weather.

Don't fail at meals to give preference to fruits and acids, which are more agreeable now to the stomach than anything else that can be offered.

Don't neglect a chance to get out of the city to the country or seaside even for half a day. Such an excursion will often bridge a person over an entire heated term.

Don't walk faster than is necessary. Strain a point and ride as much as possible, as every street car fare such weather as this is a great saving of physical wear and tear.

Don't drink any strong stimulants, as simplest and plainest beverages, such as lemonade, milk or iced coffee, do more for the tired energies at such a time than the best brandy.

Don't worry and fret. Try to put off the unpleasant things with which you have to deal until cooler weather, and make up your mind not to get mad at anything during July or August.

Don't neglect your feet. Bath them night and morning; pay more attention than usual to corns and wear the oldest and roomiest shoes you have. No one can keep cool with tight shoes on his feet.

Don't miss any opportunity that is offered to bathe or go in the water. If nothing else can be done, dip the hands in a basin of water and rub them all over the person on arising and before retiring.

Don't wear a stiff hat. Compromise on something light or soft—straw, if possible—and ventilated above to let out the hot air. Frequent shampooing and wetting the top of the head is one effective means of keeping cool.

S. B. Durfey, mate of steamer Arizona, had his foot badly jammed. Thomas' Eclectric Oil cured it. Nothing equal to it for a quick pain reliever.

The President's Action Praised.

"I am glad," said Rev. Henry Ward Beecher to a reporter, "to notice the prompt and manly way in which President Cleveland has exerted himself to assure Mrs. Grant of national sympathy and to give government assistance in properly carrying out plans for the dead hero's funeral. I tell you Cleveland is acting beautifully, beautifully!" and Mr. Beecher became enthusiastic in manner and in tone. "He acts beautifully in this delicate thing; he has been acting with the same high-minded spirit in everything else ever since his administration began. They say some of his appointments have been mistakes. Perhaps they have: but his whole deportment shows that if they were mistakes they were mistakes with no malice in them. They can be called nothing more than specks, that can be brushed off, too. In everything essential all of his acts have been admirable. And mark my word, he is going to continue in this same straightforward, patriotic way to the end. If he does, not one president since Washington will have passed into history with greatest honors on his head than belong to Grover Cleveland.

"What do I think of the political future? If the Democratic party manages to rise to the level of Grover Cleveland I will be content to go with it. If it does not, then I go with Grover Cleveland. There is no disappointment in that man.

Better Than Vacation.

This is pre-eminently the vacation month, when thousands seek rest and recreation. But to those who suffer the depressing effects of summer debility, the disagreeable symptoms of scrofula, the tortures of billiousness, dyspepsia or sick headache, there is more pain than pleasure in leaving home. To such we say, give Hood's Sarsaparilla a trial. It will purify your blood, tone up and strengthen your body, expel every trace of scrofula, correct billousness, and positively cure dyspepsia or sick headache. Take it before you go, and you will enjoy your vacation a thousand fold.

A Campaign Secret Given Away.

In the campaign of 1884 the two candidates for governor in a "pivotal" Western State arranged for a series of joint discussions. Both men were popular, both of fine appearance and were so well matched in mental force and as orators that the contest between them promised to be magnificent one. For several weeks the scales balanced evenly.

But one day the brilliant Republican candidate came up ailing. He seemed overcome and spoke laboredly. The next day he was even less effective. Later he was compelled to ask his opponent for a postponement of certain appointments, which was granted. Before the campaign ended he had abandoned the field altogether.

Meantime the Democratic candidate continued his canvass, seeming to grow stronger, cheerier and more effective with each succeeding week. He was elected. One evening in December while entertaining several gentlemen he said:

"I will tell you a campaign secret—which gave me the election. With the opening of my campaign I began caring for my liver. I knew that a disordered or torpid liver meant dullness and possible sickness. I took something every day. When my opponent began failing I knew his trouble to be his liver and felt like prescribing for him, but feared if I did so he might beat me! I grew stronger as the campaign progressed, often making two speeches a day. Even my voice to my surprise, did not fail me once. All because Warner's safe cure kept me in A 1 trim." Ex-Governor Jacob of Kentucky, also made a campaign tour under precisely similar circumstances and says he kept up under the exhausting strain by use of the same means.—[Rochester Union.

The warm weather often has a depressing and debilitating effect. Hood's Sarsaparilla overcomes all languor or lassitude.

Eating Lemons.

A good deal has been said through the papers about the healthfulness of lemons. The latest advice is how to use them so that they will do the most good, as follows: Most people know the benefit of lemonade before breakfast, but few know that it is more than doubled by taking another at night also. The way to get the better of the bilious system without blue pills or quinine, is to take the juice of one, two or three lemons, as appetite craves, in as much ice water as makes it pleasant to drink without sugar before going to bed. In the morning, on rising, at least half an hour before breakfast, take the juice of one lemon in a goblet of water. This will clear the system of humor and bile with efficiency, without any of the weakening effects of calomel or Congress water. People should not irritate the stomach by eating lemons clear; the powerful acid of the juice, which is always most corrosive, invariably produces inflammation after a while, but, properly diluted, so that it does not burn or draw the throat, it does its medical work without harm, and, when the stomach is clear of food, has abundant opportunity to work over the system thoroughly, says a medical authority.

100 Doses One Dollar.

Is inseparably connected with Hoods Sarsaparilla, and is true of no other medicine. It is an unanswerable argument as to strength and economy, while thousands testify to its superior blood-purifying and strengthening qualities. IMPROVED BUTTER COLOR
A NEW DISCOVERY.

☞For several years we have furnished the Dairymen of America with an excellent artificial color for butter; so meritorious that it met with great success everywhere receiving the highest and only prizes at both International Dairy Fairs.

☞But by patient and scientific chemical research we have improved in several points, and now offer this new color as the best in the world.

It Will Not Color the Buttermilk. It Will Not Turn Rancid. It is the Strongest, Brightest and Cheapest Color Made.

☞And, while prepared in oil, is so compounded that it is impossible for it to become rancid.

☞BEWARE of all imitations, and of all other oil colors, for they are liable to become rancid and spoil the butter.

☞If you cannot get the "improved" write us to know where and how to get it without extra expense. (46)

Nobility.

True worth is in being—not seeming;
In doing each day that goes by
Some little good—not in the dreaming
Of great things to do by and by.
For whatever men say in blindness,
And spite of the fancies of youth,
There's nothing so kingly as kindness,
And nothing so royal as truth.

We get back our meet as we measure—
We cannot do wrong and feel right;
Nor can we give pain and gain pleasure,
For justice avenges each slight.
The air for the wing of the sparrow,
The bush for the robin and wren,
But always the path that is narrow
And straigt for the children of men.

We can not make bargains for blisses,
Nor catch them like fish in nets;
And sometimes the thing our life misses
Help more than the thing which it gets.
For good lieth not in pursuing
Nor gaining of great nor of small;
But just in the doing and doing
As we would be done by, is all.

Thro' envy, thro' malice, thro' hating,
Against the world, early and late,
No jot of our courage abating;—
Our part is to work and to wait.
And slight is the sting of his trouble
Whose winnings are less than his worth;
For he who is honest is noble
Whatever his fortunes or birth.

HER ACCOMPLISHMENT.

Old Mr. Brown stood in his private office, with his back to the fire and his coat-tails balanced in either hand. He was a bald headed old gentleman with a ruddy complexion, keen black eyes, and leg-of-mutton whiskers which were white as snow. And Miss Nellie Torrance sat lookingly at him timidly from the depths of the big arm chair in which he had beckoned her to seat herself.

“So you are my cousin Adrian's daughter?” said he after a long pause.

“Yes,” said Nelly, wondering what was in all those mysterious tin boxes and whether the monster iron safe was full of gold and silver pieces.

“And you want something to do?”

“Yes, please!”

“Humph!” said Mr. Brown.

Nelly glanced shyly up into his face.

“But,” she added, with some spirit, “I am not asking for charity. I am willing to work for my bread!”

“You mean you would like to daub canvas, or sew yellow sunflowers on green plush screens,” satirically observed the old gentleman. “I don't call that work.”

“Nor I, either,” retorted Nellie.

“Then what do you mean?” said Mr. Brown.

“I mean that I shall be glad to undertake any sort of honest work by means of which I can earn my own living.”

“Humph!” again interjected Mr. Brown. “Can you cook?”

“Yes,” Nell answered.

“I don't believe it!”

“But I can.”

“Very well,” said Mr. Brown, releasing his coat-tails, and sitting down to his desk as if the question were definitely disposed of. “My cook went away this morning. I haven't engaged any one in her place. You may come this afternoon and see what you can do for me.”

Mr. Brown fully expected that this young cousin would recoil indignantly from this proposal, but she did nothing of the sort. She simply said, “Yes, Cousin John,” and asked him for his private address.

“Mind you're punctual, my dear,” said he, as he handed her the penciled card.

“I am always punctual,” calmly responded Nelly.

Mr. Brown watched her out of the office with a quizzical twinkle in the corner of his eyes.

“She won't come,” he said to himself. “I've seen the last of my fine relation.”

And Nelly Torrance went home to a little second-floor room, the cheapest which the widow and her daughters could possibly find.

Mrs. Adrian Torrance was dressed in black, a fair, delicate piece of human china, who had been like the lilies of the field, in that she toiled not, neither did she spin, and Lucetta, the elder daughter, was trying, unsuccessfully enough, to trim a black crape bonnet, by the window.

They had come up from the country at Lucetta's suggestion to appeal in their poverty, to this rich cousin of the dead father and husband, but none of them anticipated any very satisfactory results from the experiment.

“These rich people are always miserly,” said Miss Lucetta.

“And I've understood,” sighed the gentle little widow, “that he was not pleased when poor dear Adrian married me instead of Miss Goldbags, the rich pawnbrokers daughter's daughter.”

“Well?” cried Mrs. Torrance eagerly, as Nelly entered.

“What does he say?” questioned Lucetta, dropping the fold of crape which she was vainly endeavoring to fashion into what the fashion-plate called “an oblong bow.”

“I have seen him,” said Nelly, untying her bonnet-strings. “And I am going to his house in Grandover Park this afternoon.”

“You don't mean,” cried Mrs. Torrance, with a spasmodic catching of her breath, “that he is going to—adopt you?”

“Not in the least,” said Nelly. “Now mamma, darling, don't jump at conclusions. Just hear my plain, unvarnished tale. I went to Cousin John. I told him I wanted something to do. He asked me if I could cook. Thanks to the course of lessons I once took of [illegible], I was able to [illegible] yes. Then he told me that he [illegible]

“If your cousin Brown intends to insult us—”

“But he doesent mean to insult us,” pleaded Nelly. “He intended the offer all good faith, and I accepted it in the same spirit.”

“You surely do not mean to degrade yourself,” cried Lucetta, “By turning—cook—for any man living!”

“I don't see,” argued Nellie, “that is any more degrading to cook for Cousin John than it would be to embroider slippers for him, or read the newspaper aloud to him of an evening.”

“Eleanor never had any proper pride,” said Mrs Torrance, wringing her hands.

“Never! echoed Lucetta.

“And,” added Nellie, “my cousin would have every right to believe me an imposter if I had told him I wanted work and then refused the first offer he made. It will be useless for you to remonstrate, Lucetta, and I hope mamma will not place any obstacles in my way, for I am quite determined to go Grandover Park this afternoon.”

And she adhered firmly to her resolution.

It was six exactly when Mr. Brown let himself into his house with the latch-key which always depended from his watch chain. The gas jet burned softly behind the rose-colored shade in the hall, the fire clicked cheerfully in the grate of the parlor beyond.

“Humph!” he muttered. “She hasn' come. Thought so! There's no such a thing as a practical woman nowadays.”

At the same moment a light, white-aporned little figure came out of the dinin-groom beyond, and Nelly Torrance's voice uttered the words:

“Dinner is ready, Cousin John.”

The old man smiled. He had a pleasant expression of the face when he smiled, and Nelly wondered that she had not before noticed what a handsome man he was.

“Oh,” said, he “you did come then.”

“Oh, I always keep my engagements,” said Nelly. “Punctuality is the soul of business, isn't it, Cousin John? At least that's what I used to write in my copy books at school.”

Mr. Brown patted her hand as she helped him off with his overcoat.

“You are a good girl, said he.”

And in his secret mind he decided to put up with any deficiencies in the cooking of a girl who had such excellent business principles.

But to his infinite amazement, there were no deficiencies to overlook. The soup was on the table, clear as water, flavored like a dream of Soyer's own!

The first course was baked trout swimming in wine sauce; the second a pigeon on toast. A small and compact roast of beef ribs was flanked by a dainty giblet-pie. and the desert was fruit, peach tarts, and Bavarian cream.

Mr. Brown ate and relished and wondered by turns.

“My dear,” said he at last, when the cloth was removed and the wine and walnuts brought on, “all is very nice. I'll concede that you are a tip-top housekeeper. But, of course, you ordered all this from Monerato's resturant?”

“But, of course, I didn't, Cousin Brown,” said Nelly, decidedly. “I cooked it all myself!”

“What, that soup?”

“Yes. that soup!”

“Did you prepair that trout sauce and broil that pigeon?”

“Yes, Cousin Brown.”

“And the giblet-pie, was that yours?”

“Yes, and the giblet-pie! Don't look so astonished, cousin Brown,” she added, laughing. “I may as well confess that I took a course of cooking lessons last summer. And I like it of all things, especially in a household like this, where one can command the very best materials.”

Mr. Brown closed his eyes and made a hasty calculation. His life had been “worried out of him,” to use a mediocre expression, by capricous housekeepers, inefficient cooks and untrained servants. At last here was a gateway out of all his tribulations!

“My dear,” he said, “I should like to have you come here and live.”

“As cook, Cousin Brown?”

“No—as my adopted daughter and house-keeper. I need some one to take the helm of my affairs. By Jupiter!” he added, as he recollected the flavor of the giblet-pie; “I haven't eaten such a dinner in ten years.”

“But my mother,” hesitated Elnor, “and my sister Lucetta.”

“Let them come, too,” said Mr. Brown. “Bless your heart, my dear, there's plenty of room in the house. Can they cook, too?”

“No, Cousin Brown,” confessed Nelly.

“Well, perhaps it's just as well,” said Mr. Brown. “There can't be more than one head to a household. I hope you have preserved the recipe of that giblet-pie, my dear. It was really something extraordinary.”

So the Torrance family found a comfortable refuge for the soles of their feet, and Nelly's despised accomplishment proved the sword wherewith she opened the world's oyster.

And Lucetta sighed and wondered why she, too had not taken cooking lessons.

“Nelly is the old man's first favorite,” said she. “He'll leave her his money when he dies. And all because she accepted his ridiculous offer of turning cook for a living.”

Mr. Brown, however, looked at this matter in a different light.

“Nelly is a trump,” he said. “Nelly is not like the typical young lady, who is to lazy to work and to proud to beg. She is one who ennobles the humblest task, and does with all her might whatever [illegible] to do.”

Bye-and-Bye.

He was but a child, when one night, after he had been ill for many days, an angel appeared at his bedside and looked so kindly into his face that he held up his thin hands and whispered:

“I am ready—let me go with you.”

“Some time—not now,” whispered the angel, and she soothed him to gentle slumber.

Again, when manhood had come, he fell asleep one day and in his dreams the angel returned. It had been years since he saw her, but her face wore the same radiant smile, and age had passed her by.

“It is time—I will go with you,” he said as he started up, but the angel waived him back and said:

“Wait—it is not time.”

Years passed away. The gray hairs were thicker than the black—the face was furrowed with many lines—man's prime had passed and man's decline had come. The bright dream came once more, and with it the angel.

“Surely you will take me now,” he said as he felt her soft presence. “I have accomplished my work on earth and long for rest.”

“Wait—I will come once more,” she answered.

Other years were numbered with the dead. A feeble old man had wept bitter tears over the loss of wife and sons and daughters. One by one they had been gathered to earth while he waited. One by one the friends of his youth and of his manhood had passed into the dark valley beyond sight and sound of mortal man.

One night when the summer sun sank to rest in a sky of purest gold—when the great world seemed almost noiseless—when the robin sang softly and flew to his nest to quiet the fears of his mate, the ears of the poor old man heard the sounds of sweet music afar off. It came nearer and nearer, and the darkness lighted up with such a glorious light that his old eyes saw a procession marching past him. As he looked and wondered and doubted, his angel turned aside and stood before him.

“Who are they?” he asked.

“Friends who have gone before. Watch closely.”

By and by he saw the faces of the friends of his youth. Then a glad shout reached his ears, and hands were waved from afar off. People broke away from the procession and gathered around him and rejoiced. There was his wife—there were his sons and daughters. He held out his trembling hands to the angel and pleaded:

“You promised me!”

“And the by-and-by has come!” the angel answered.

When the men and women of earth came to look upon him in his coffin they whispered to each other:

“He must have died as a child falls asleep. See the glad smile on his face.”—[Detroit Free Press.

Out After Dark.

Keep the boys at home evenings. Almost invariably lads who have been allowed to roam free at night have come to moral shipwreck and social destruction. The exceptions have been where there was a strong intellect, a wholesome temperament and peculiar social influences. Men and boys, women and girls, whatever may have been their culture, feel that there is something different in the streets at night than that which is in the day—something which excites apprehension or creates alarm or gives license. Boys that are demure by day will say things at night that they would blush to utter in the daylight. The result of our observation is the clear conviction that it is absolutely necessary that parents know exactly where their children are from sundown to sunrise. No boy ought to be allowed to go alone off the pavement of his father's house after sundown. It ought not to be a hard restriction—to a boy thus trained from infancy it will not be. It is unnatural that a child should want to go off to play in the dark with other children. The desire never comes until the child has begun to be corrupt. Sometimes this is allowed through carelessness. We never knew it to fail to end disastrously. We have in our mind one or two striking cases of where mothers have pleaded for this liberty for their children and are now reaping the bitter fruits.

Where Presidents are Buried.

All the Presidents of the United States who have passed away before Grant, sleep their last sleep at their respective homes, and there is general, and there will be lasting regret, that General Grant has been made an exception to the rule. Washington sleeps at his home at Mt. Vernon; the Adamses sleep at their Quincy home; Jefferson rests at Monticello; Madison at Montpelier; Monroe and Tyler at Richmond; Jackson at the Hermitage; VanBuren at Kinderhook; Harrison at North Bend; Polk at Nashville; Taylor at Baton Rouge, although first buried at Washington; Fillmore at Buffalo; Pierce at Concord; Buchanan at Lancaster; Lincoln at Springfield; Johnson at Greenville and Garfield at Cleveland. The same hitherto unbroken rule would make Galena the resting place of Grant. With that the country would have been quite content, although the general desire is to give him a national tomb in the beautiful grounds of the soldiers' home of Washington. [Philadelphia Times.

The End of the World.

Persons disappointed in the non-fulfillment of Mother Shipton's prophecy that the world would come to an end in 1881, are [illegible]

The Epide[illegible] of Crime.

Whence comes this epidemic of suicides and murders? Recent discussions have named several causes. Hon. C. H. Reeve, of Indiana, charges it to infidel teachings—holding that hopelessness of a future state cripples fortitude for bearing life's ills. Another declares suffering from the universal business depression the cause. A third writer attributes it to increasing insanity, a physician thinks much of the tendency is inherited, while temperance advocates lay the responsibility upon strong drink.

Free-thinkers have committed suicide, but so have orthodox churchmen. Financial straits have beset many, but the wealthy have also taken their life.

Insanity and dissipation have preceded suicides and family murders.

One feature common to almost every such crime challenges attention. Well nigh every report of suicide and family murder mentions the perpetrator as having “for some time been subject to melancholy.” Whence comes this? All recognized medical authorities tell us that the fire which consumes the brain is always kindled by derangements of digestion; that good digestion is impossible without pure blood, and pure blood is never known when the liver and kidneys are out of order. Under such circumstances, a preventive should be sought, and for this Warner's safe cure is sovereign—a fact conceded by the best authorities in the land, and it is especially commended by the celebrated Dr. Dio Lewis.—[Rochester Democrat.

THE PROPER THING.

Blue and red is still a popular combination for country wear.

Bathing suits are still made of serge or twilled flannel, trimmed with narrow woolen braid.

High-crowned Mackinaw or Manila braid hats are worn by young ladies in the country, and are suitable for driving and yachting, and should be simply trimmed with canvas, mull or velvet ribbon.

Hats are higher than ever, with towering bunches of flowers. Most of them have the strait crown and narrow brim. Some models of the picturesque Rembrandt and Gainsborough shapes are coming into fashion again.

Open-work cotton tissues are worn over thin silk to match or of a contrasting tint; fine glazed satteen may, however, be used as silk is considered too expensive. The prettiest of these open-work cotton fabrics are etamine and canvas.

Light summer mantles are made of silk gauze, embroidered with small round beads, steel-blue, garnet-red, beige, bronze or lead-colored. This beadee gauze is employed for visite-sleeves, middle back-pieces and the lower part of lapels; all the rest is brocaded silk gauze, without any beads.

Long flowing sashes are more fashionable than ever; their lapels are often ornamented with patterns of flowers embroidered in natural shades of color over either a dark or light colored ground, according to the style of the toilet. Some are embroidered with jet or colored beads, others are simply of striped or watered silk.

A convenient travelling suit is made of light summer beige or mohair, in a plain, straight, tucked skirt with hem, a vest and sacque, which may be worn closed or opened. The back of the vest is formed of a lining, otherwise there is no lining in any part of the costume, except the silk in the standing collar and interior front of the sacque.

The Girl at the Front Gate.

Heaven bless the girl at the front gate with peach bloom on her cheeks and love light in her eyes. Men would shut her out of our literature, but I am not of them. The girl at the front gate can never grow old to those who have been there with her. Years may come and years may go, but the music of the low voice at the front gate will not be stilled and the memory of the cherry lips we kissed at the front gate will hold out faithful to the end. What if the old gate does sag and its hinges rattle and its latch refuse to hold it shut? What if its posts are shaky and some of its pickets gone? We love the dear old relic still. We love it for the sake of the girl who used to stand out there by it with roses on her cheeks and nectar on her lips. We held the old gate up and counted the stars and bid good bye and then counted the stars again. How many times a night was good bye said! How many times did lips meet o'er the dear old gate? The old gate knows, but it will never tell. The old front gate may have counted the kisses, but I never did. And I am sure the girl with peach bloom cheeks never did. And what of the girl with peach bloom cheeks? Ah, me, she married another. She forgot her vows at the old front gate, as some girls will, and married a richer and handsomer man. And I? Well, I went off to another front gate where there were other peach bloom cheeks and other lips as sweet, and just as many stars to count. And now I have a front gate of my own, and a girl of my own with peach bloom cheeks, who counts the stars with the boy of the girl whose vows made with me at the first front gate were broken. But he is a good, true boy, and my girl is a true, good girl, and Heaven bless them both as they stand to-night at the old front gate.

If the subjects of such headaches watch the symptoms of its coming they will notice that it begins with a feeling of weariness or heaviness. That is the time a sleep of an hour or even two, as nature guides, will effectually prevent the headache.

Sore Throat.—Soak a small piece of bread about the size of a hazel nut, and then take a pinch of cayenne pepper, mix and roll up in the form of a pill, which the patient must swallow, and in about three hours will be relieved. In a severe case a second dose may be requisite, which is said to never fail.

The new German mode of treating pneumonia, consisting of six grains of iodide of potassium every two hours, and the application of an ice-bag over the seat of the lesion, is one of the leading topics just now in medical circles, in which, by the way, that disease has earned the appellation of the brain worker's enemy, so deadly have been its ravages among professional men.

AMERICAN FABLES.

THE TURKEY AND THE GRASSHOPPER.

A Young and guileless Turkey was Walking in the Field one day in Search of something to stay his Stomach, when Luck brought him a fine, large Grasshopper. He was about to Swallow the Insect, when the Hopper exclaimed:

“Hold on a Moment, my Friend! What's the use of Picking up a small Insect like me, when there are plenty of Hares in the Weeds just ahead?”

“That's so, and how Foolish I was!” answered the Turkey, as he let the Hopper go and set out to find Hares. At the end of half an Hour he leaned up against a barbed wire fence, Kicked himself fourteen successive Times and remarked:

“In the first place I couldn't catch a Hare, and in the second I couldn't have eaten one if I had.”

THE BARREL AND THE KEG.

On a certain Occasion a Barrel which was half-full of rain-water, found itself beside a Keg of Brandy. There was plenty of room for Both, but the Keg could not repress its Vanity and soon remarked:

“Singular that it takes such a stout Barrel to hold such weak Liquid.”

“And it is singular how much Quarrelling, Murder and General Rascality can be cooped up into such small bulk,” retorted the Barrel.

“I've got the Strength of ten full barrels of Water.”

“Yes, but all good men detest you.”

They Scolded away for half an hour, Taunting each other with having lived in Chicago and St. Louis, and finally agreed to leave it with the Owner of the Store. The Keg stated the Cafe and asked for a decision.

“Why as to that,” he answered, “You contain a very good quality of Fusil Oil, and the Barrel holds about the same quantity of rain water, with certain Chemicals dissolved. Each by yourself you are of very little value, but when I pour the Fusil into the Barrel, as I soon will, Behold the result will be thirty-two gallons of best French Brandy—imported for this House direct from Paris. How to be Brief.

My son, if you want to acquire the ability of making short speeches, let me whisper in your ear: Tell the truth. Just stick to the plain unvarnished truth and you'll never talk longer than fifteen minutes and sometimes you'll get through in one heat, 1:11¼. If a man comes home from the brook and says simply: “I caught a trout that weighs 4½ pounds,” you can believe him. But if he begins by telling where he bought his rod, how much he paid for it, how big a bass he took with it last summer, what kind of a reel he had on, what fly he used, the length of his casting line, and how long he played the trout before he landed it—my boy, that man may begin with the honestest intention in the world, but by the time he gets the trout into the landing net, he will lie from three to five pounds in spite of himself and a Christian mother.—[Bob. Burdette.

Bill Nye and the Waiter.

New York is getting to be very thickly settled, and many people go there to do their trading. People in New York are not easily startled. I stopped at a hotel where it cost me $5 a day for the bare necessites of life, and when I paid my bill it created no surprise whatever. There was a head waiter there who spoke to me frequently and picked out a seat for me at the table, and seemed to take a great interest in me. Once he asked me if my dinner was all right. I told him it was bully and a good deal more than I generally got at home. Even if it hadn't just suited me I should not have told him so, for I could see that if I had been displeased he would shut up the house and make a good deal of trouble. So I told him it was all first-rate, and he seemed to be very much relieved.—[Arkansaw Traveler.

THE feeling in Canada over the conviction of Riel, leader of the half-breed rebellion, continues to increase and threatens dangerous complications. The French Canadians are stoutly resisting the carrying out of the sentence of death, and the Orangemen are as determined that no reprieve shall be granted. A meeting of ten thousand people was held at Montreal on Sunday to consider action to be taken in regard to Riel. Addresses were made arraigning the government for its mismanagement of affairs in the Northwest, and charging that the trial of the half-breed chief at Regina was conducted in an unjust and illegal manner. Strong resolutions were passed declaring Riel's offence a political one, and stating in Great Britain it is not usual to execute persons found guilty of such an offence; also that a petition be sent to the Imperial and Canadian governments to obtain Riel's pardon. Under the circumstances it is not probable that the sentence of death will be executed. The question is a perplexing one for the Canadian government.—[New York Observer.

The outlook for the iron trade has not been more favorable for a number of years. Signs of improvement are coming to the surface every day and orders are increasing rapidly and many mills are running on double time. The worst feature is the existing strike among nailers which from present indications does not look as if any amicable solution of the difficulty is near at hand.

The Hagerstown (Md.) Mail relates that as a fast train stopped at Point of Rocks the engineer was found stunned and almost lifeless, suffering apparently from a blow in the head. A dead chicken was found lying in the cab. The only explanation that could be given was that the chicken attempted to fly across the track while the train was running at a high speed and came in collision with the driver's head. The latest news was that the unfortunate man had recovered consciousness, but that his recovery was by no means assured.

An ingenious burglar's ladder was recently taken from a negro thief in Washington. It was constructed of light but strong rope, and at one end had two sharp hooks fitted to fasten on a window sill. These were attached to an iron rod capable of being extended thirty or forty feet. The whole could be wrapped in a bundle about the size of an ordinary umbrella. As the apparatus had a hooked handle and was enclosed in a case, the owner could carry it along the streets without attracting attention, while in two minutes it could be turned into a rope ladder and securely fastened to an unbolted window, giving a burglar easy means of entrance to a house.

An explosion occurred on the steamer S. M. Felton, off the Chestnut street wharf, Philadelphia. Monday forenoon. It shook the boat from stem to stern, and when the smoke cleared away it was found that the entire forward part of the vessel above the outer line had been badly damaged, and a number of passengers injured, some of them severely. The wrecked upper works took fire and a panic ensued. This was speedily checked by the coolness of a number of men who drove the women and children aft to prevent many frantic women from leaping overboard. There seems little doubt about the explosion being due to dynamite or gun powder, though no one seems to know how it was taken on board.

A miner named Michael Coggins met with a horrible death at the Sloan shaft of the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western company, near Scranton, Pa., Saturday night. The shaft is 520 feet deep. At about 100 feet from the surface there is a narrow landing leading to a short tunnel that is used for storing rails, props and other mine supplies. A number of men were being hoisted from the bottom of the shaft, and when they approached the tunnel Coggins, seeing some men standing there with lights, thought that the mouth of the shaft had been reached and sprang from the carriage, which continued its ascent while he went rushing down the shaft with a wild cry, a depth of 420 feet, and was killed. Coggins had been in the country only a few months.

There are 190 men and women serving life sentences in the prisons of this state. Twenty-one were condemned to be hanged, but their sentences were commuted to imprisonment for life. One hundred and forty-five of the number were convicted of murder in the second degree, twelve for manslaughter in the first degree, and ten for arson in the first degree. Thirteen are women, all for murder in different degrees. Auburn has 61, Sing Sing 50, Kings county penitentiary 6, and Onondaga county penitentiary 3.

Within a year George Davis, a farmer in the western part of the state has lost his wife and three children. Then his house, with its contents, was burned to the ground; his barn was struck by lightning and two valuable horses were killed. His father died a month ago and he received as his share of the property a part of a farm on which were 60 unusually large pine trees. Mr. Davis had sold these for $30 apiece, but an hour before the purchaser appeared to hand over the money a tornado tore the trees to pieces, rendering them valueless.

At a meeting of business men in Syracuse Saturday evening for the purpose of sending delegates to the conference to be held in Utica on August 19, to consider the question of improving the canals of the state, resolutions were adopted favoring the deepening of the canal and the strengthening of its banks and adding to their height, and the introduction of the Lighton lock system where practable. The resolutions also favor an appropriation by the national government to be expended under the supervision of state officers. Twenty-one delegates to the convention were chosen, representing the most prominent business men of Syracuse, with Mayor Ryan as chairman of the delegation.

Oil on the Water.

The steamship Polynesia, which arrived from Hamburg Friday night, reported having encountered a cyclone, during which her companion hatch, ladders and all movable articles had been washed over board. Captain Kuhn said: "On August 10th a terrific cyclone swept down on us, and in a moment the sea ran mountains high. I immediately ordered the engines to stop and decided to lay to until the cyclone had passed. Wave after wave dashed on our starboard bow, but we managed to keep her head in such a position that little harm was done. At 10 o'clock the wind suddenly shifted to the southward and a terrible breaker, looking like a huge mountain of water, broke over our starboard bow. The water fell with a crash on the deck, knocked down the men who were on duty and hurled them against the bulwarks. It swept the deck from stem to stern, carried away a companion hatch, and poured into the cabins, causing a panic among the passengers who were kept below. It knocked down the chief steward and broke his leg, and also carried away the ladder leading to the spar deck. I think if another wave had immediately followed this we should have gone down. We got her head righted again, and continued to receive the breakers on our deck for some time the wind at the same time tearing through our rigging at a fearful rate. By mid-day another huge breaker broke with full force on our bows. It carried away a boat and the [illegible], and all movable articles on deck. [illegible]

The committee on lamps reported in favor of granting the petition of H. C. [illegible] and others for a lamp at the R. R. crossing on [illegible] street near the residence of J. C. Tabor.

On motion of Mr. Bradford, the report was accepted and an oil lamp was ordered placed there under the direction of the lamp committee.

The clerk reported that he examined the vouchers of O. H. Scholz, collector for 1884, for moneys paid the village treasurer, and that the amount was the same as reported by him.

President Waugh reported in reference to contract for gas for street lamps, that no better price would be given to the village than to other consumers, and that he had not made any contract.

The matter of the application of the Fulton and Oswego Falls Street Railway Co. for the consent of the Board of Trustees, to the construction of a street railroad through certain streets of the village, was then considered, pursuant to notice duly published.

Mr. S. B. Mead in behalf of the Company presented a petition that such application be granted.

Mr. D. W. Gardner in behalf of the residents upon the line of the proposed road, presented a remonstrance against the application.

Trustee Kendrick came in.

After hearing argument in favor of and against the application, the following resolution was offered by Mr. Bradford who moved that the same be adopted.

Resolved, That pursuant to the provisions of chapter 252 of the Laws of the State of New York passed in 1884, the Board of Trustees of the Village of Fulton, N. Y., do hereby consent that the Fulton and Oswego Falls Street Railway Company may construct, maintain, operate, use and extend a street railroad or branches, of standard guage, on the surface of the soil, through, upon and along the following streets in said village, towit: From intersection of Second and Oneida streets along Oneida-st. to First-st. Thence along First-st. to Broadway; and thence along Broadway to the Bridge over the Oswego Canal and River; and may also construct such switches, sidings, turnouts and turn-tables and suitable stands as may be necessary for the convenient working of such road; but no turnout, siding or switch to be more than three hundred feet in length. Turnouts not to exceed two in number and not to be laid opposite any street or crossing. This consent being given and granted upon the express condition that the provisions of an act of the Legislature of the State of New York entitled "An act to provide for the construction, extension, maintenance and operation street surface railroads and branches thereof in cities, towns and villages," passed May 6th, 1884, (being chapter 252 of the Laws of 1884) pertinent thereto shall be complied with.

The resolution was adopted by the following vote: Ayes, Messrs. Bradford, Chase, Gage, Hulett and Kendrick—5. Nays, none.

And the President declared the resolution adopted.

The President reported that the note given in settlement of the Dodgson suit, in pursuance of the vote of the special meeting held Sept. 30, 1884, was due, and that the same amounted to $1,688.41.

On motion of Mr. Kendrick, the Clerk was instructed to draw an order on the Treasury in favor of the President for the amount.

The finance committee reported the following bills, and on motion of Mr. Gage the same were audited at their respective amounts, and the Clerk instructed to draw orders on the Treasury therefor, towit:

Mr. Kendrick, as a delegate from G. A. R. Post Schenck, extended an invitation to the Board to participate in the Grant Memorial exercises at the Opera House in Fulton, on Saturday, Aug. 8th inst., at 2 o'clock P.M.

On motion of Mr. Bradford the invitation was accepted.

On motion of Mr. Gage, the action of this Board on May 27, 1885, excmpting members of the Board of Trustees from the payment of Poll tax, was rescinded.

On motion of Mr. Gage, Mr. J. N. Clarke was given the old race bridge on Oneida-st., except the irons thereof, for taking same down, reserving the use of the material, however, till the new bridge is completed.

On motion of Mr. Gage the Board adjourned to Aug. 19, 1885, at 8 o'clock, P.M.

COUNTY COMMENT.

As yet there are no conspicious candidates for county clerkship.

The storm in this town yesterday was very severe. The lightning struck in several places and many of the bridges between here and Ellisburgh are washed away.—[Sandy Creek News,

The Oswego County Fair will be held at Mexico Sept, 9, 10 and 11.

Julius Beauchamp of Oswego, having been arrested Wednesday for non-support of his wife, claimed that she was not his wife, as she had a husband living. to whom she was married before he married her. She admitted having been married but claimed that her first husband had a wife living when she married him and she accordingly left him. Some time last winter Beauchamp became acquainted with a girl named Dolly Legacy, and passed himself off as a single man and paid her marked attention. On Sunday night last he called at the residence of the Legacy girl and presented her with a plain gold ring and wanted her to marry him that night, but the young woman said that she was suffering with a severe toothache and that it would be impossible. She subsequently learned that he already had a wife. He was bailed in the sum of $100.

Work has begun on the two new buildings to be added to the Elmira reformatory, for which an appropriation of $20,000 was granted by the legislature last winter. The main building is also to be enlarged at a cost of $150,000.

The storm which caused the washout on the Central at Hoffman's ferry last week, traversed a section five miles long and three miles wide, and the loss to farmers is estimated at $200,000. Much valuable land is covered with three or four feet of sand, gravel, and rocks. Seventeen road bridges were destroyed.

Mary Gale, aged 38, of Union, Broom county, was taken to the Binghamton jail the other day. For 15 years she has worked for the family of Stephen Carey, a farmer. On Tuesday last, as he alleges, she set fire to one of his hay barns, which, with its contents, 60 tons of hay, a fine horse and carriage, and other personal property, was destroyed. Mr. Carey had refused Mary the loan of the horse and carriage with which she desired to go to the city and see Barnum's show. This is said to have aroused her anger and to have led to the commission of the alleged crime.

John Kelly has lost his newspaper organ, the New York Star, after sinking $100,000 in it, and it is now to become an organ of the administration. William E. Dorsehimer has bought it and will be editor-in-chief. The first number of of the Dorsheimer series is issued to-day.

I saw a close friend of Mr. Manning yesterday and he gave me important news which you can rely upon as absolutely veracious and as absolutely news. Mr. Manning is very ill at ease in Washington. He speaks of himself always as an "exile," and longs to get back to private life, to his fireside and to the companionship of his wife. He may be expected to resign at any moment, tho' in all probability not until after the autumn elections. He tells his friends that this is the case. He says that for private reasons he long ago determined never to hold public office. He was forced to take the position he now holds, but is only the more strongly convinced that he was right in keeping aloof from such trails in the past. Moreover, the private reason still hold good and strong and will force him back to Albany.—[New York Letter to Boston Herald.

Cheese Market.

(FROM THE UTICA HERALD.)

AT UTICA Aug. 17.

It was a very dull market to-day, and as will be seen from our report, one quarter of the offering was sent forward on commission. That means that buyers did not care for the ordinary run of cheese, while apparently they did want the finer class of goods. Buyers all claim extreme depression in the market, and perhaps there is some reason for it. We have already stated that there are 50,000 boxes in New York. The estimate is that Montreal has 70,000 boxes, and that there are 30,000 west of Toronto, in Canada. If these figures are correct, as we believe them to be, it is not to be wondered at that our markets are dull. Liverpool also is full of cheese, and the worst of it is that the retailers in England continue to charge 6d to 7d a ℔ for cheese, when they could cut it at 5d and make a good profit. This prevents cheese from going as largely into consumption as it ought and renders the market dull and uncertain.

Transactions here to-day have been as follows: 5 lots, 470 boxes, at 6¼c; 42 lots, 4,356 boxes, at 6⅜c; 9 lots, 920 boxes, at 6½c; 11 lots, 1,163 boxes, at 6⅝c; 11 lots, 1,767 boxes, at 6¾c; 2 lots, 348 boxes, at 6⅞c. Sales 9,024 boxes; commissions 3,163; total 12,187 boxes. Ruling price 6⅝c. Transactions one year ago 10,887 boxes, ruling price 9⅛c; two years ago 11,743 boxes, ruling price 9c. Cheese is now sold down to July 25th on an average.

LITTLE FALLS, Aug. 17.

CHEESE.—We have had a fairly active market at about the same range of values as last week; the ruling price, however, is one-fourth cent lower. Buyers claim to have lost money on many of their purchases made at the ruling price last week and maintained the rate at 6½c. to-day. As has been the case for several weeks, white cheese commanded a trifle better rate than colored. There is little change to report in the situation. Factorymen are beginning to acquire confidence, and they will hold back stocks to considerable extent if prices should go lower; but this is not expected, and if the cool weather continues a stiffening of values will be confidently looked for. Frequent and abundant rains have caused a fine growth of afterfeed, but in some localities it is quite badly cut by the grasshoppers. Sales to-day are:

Lots.	Boxes.	Price.
3	282	6¼cts
75	4,748	6½ct
30	2,212	6¾ct
9	555	7 ct
1	80	p. t.
11	1,110	Com
129	8,987
Farm Dairy	1,080
Total	10,067

FARM DAIRIES.—There was a larger sale upon the morning market then usual, and 1,080 boxes of farm cheese from the factories sold. Rates paid were 6@7c., the bulk bringing 6½c.

BUTTER.—There were about 50 packages of creamery butter sold at prices ranging at 17@17½c. Twenty eight packages of farm dairy sold at the same rates.

AT FULTON.

Twenty-five factories were represented at this market last Monday night with 2,000 boxes of cheese, of which about 1,584 were sold for 6⅜c., the balance either being held over or sold on commission.

A Great Victory

A Terrible Case of Scrofula Cured by Hood's Sarsaparilla

"In the winter of 1879 I was attacked with Scrofula in one of the most aggravating forms. At one time I had no less than thirteen large abscesses over and around my neck and throat, continually exuding an offensive mass of bloody matter disgusting to behold, and almost intolerable to endure. It is impossible to fully describe my sufferings, as the case was complicated with Chronic Catarrh. After three years of misery, having been treated by three physicians, I was worse than ever. Finally, on the recommendation of W. J. Huntley, druggist, of Lockport, I was induced to try Hood's Sarsaparilla. And now, after having taken twelve bottles, within the last twelve months, the scrofulous eruptions have entirely ceased, and the abscesses have all disappeared, except the unsightly scars, which are daily becoming smaller by degrees, and beautifully less. I do not know what it may have done for others, but I do know that in my case, Hood's Sarsaparilla has proved an effective specific indeed. As an evidence of my gratitude I send these facts unsolicited, and I am ready to verify the authenticity of this cure, by personal correspondence with any one who doubts it." CHARLES A. ROBERTS, East Wilson, N. Y.

This statement is confirmed by W. J. Huntley, druggist, of Lockport, N. Y., who calls the cure a great victory for Hood's Sarsaparilla. Send for book giving statements of many cures.

E. E. SCHENCK,

[illegible]

[illegible] thousands of pleasure seekers, and as every newspaper contains some account of the gay and fashionable routine of these popular resorts, why may we not, in a modest way, speak of the quiet and somewhat obscure haunt of a small but select circle of nature's lovers who have pitched their tents at that beautiful suburb of our town, High Banks. Nature in a kindly mood planned High Banks it would seem for its present uses, and those who go there are wise in utilizing the beauty of the place.

Leaving Fulton, the sail up the Oswego river is a delightful one. The stream is a panorama of choice pictures. Broad fields of green and patches of golden grain ready for the hand of the husbandman, grassy banks and gravelly fore lands, full and over hanging trees, and nooks where shadows lie hid in silence. Islands densely wooded and brambly wildernesses. Indeed nature so turns her kaleidescope that new surprises attend every turn of the beautiful winding river. High Banks is an extended and high bluff with its nearly perpendicular side facing the river, a gravelly shore at its base and a lawn of green upon its level summit; behind this lies a back ground of forest delightful as a camping site as the trees are scattering and no undergrowth exists.

Ascending the bluff a pretty scene is presented. Among the trees white tents are pitched and the appurtenances of camp life are distributed picturesquely. Like true children of the summer the campers in varied attire lounge dreamily or busy themselves in some of the variety of ways incident to the requirements of the commissary management.

The camper's motto might with propriety be inscribed "Big eat, Big sleep." Sometimes, however, the latter is annulled by the industrious mosquito, but the former is like the laws of the Medes and Persians, unchanging. It has been said by some one, that "God made the food and the devil made the cooks." The camp proves the assertion. Methinks I see him bending over the steaming cauldron like one of the witches in Macbeth intent over the "Hell broth," which was to produce dire results. The triumphs of the camp cook are not so dire, but no doubt he gloats over his victims as he sees them, gorged like boa constrictors lying in a lethargy of sleep after the feast. It is a wise decree which ordains that the otherwise sensitive stomach of humanity shall rise superior to the camp cook's villainy and defy the horrors of indigestion.

At High Banks the conventionalities of society are set aside to some degree, but the pleasure and recreation found there is enhanced thereby. No fashionable promenade, no evening balls, no—but stop—The campers bawl nightly around a huge fire of pine stumps, the mouth organ and the guitar send their music through the dark glades of the wood and merry songs resound in distant echoes. The fishing at High Bank is generally good and when that fails, salt pork can be fished from a neighboring farmer's pork barrel. Farm produce is plentiful in the vicinity and fuel awaits a strong arm and a keen ax.

At present there are half a dozen tents on the bluff and though they do not offer all the advantages of a first class hotel, they agreeably combine simplicity with comfort. Perhaps the most sumptuous establishment at present located at High Banks is "Camp Comfort," occupied by Mr. Jesse Morril. Near at hand is a very comfortable tent bearing the name "The Three Twins." Mr. Putnam Allen is its owner. Mr. Allen has spared no expense in making his summer home a pleasant one, while his larder is well supplied always. He has with him a skilled cook from New Haven who has an enviable reputation in turning "flapjacks." Mr. John Foster's tent known as "Camp Luxury" is also deserving of mention. In brief, High Banks should be a popular summer resort for Fulton's denizens as its adjacent situation, its water advantages and its high and beautiful position are positive realities.

Railroad Fares Gone Up.

A despatch from Rochester says that the New York Central and the West Shore ticket agents have been directed to discontinue at once the sale of thirty-day tickets at the rate of one cent a mile. So far as the New York Central is concerned says the New York Sun, the statement is true, but General Passenger Agent Monett of the West Shore said Friday that no such order has been made by his company. It is understood that in view of the fact the holders of more than a majority of the West Shore bonds have assented to the scheme of reorganization of that company and the lease of its property to the Central, orders to restore both passenger and freight rates to the figures that prevailed before the West Shore was completed will be issued within a very short time, probably early next week. The report that the West Shore began Friday to honor New York Central tickets arose from the fact that through passengers via the Central were taken by the West Shore as far as Syracuse pending the repair of the Central's tracks at Hoffman's Ferry.

Cyclone in St. Lawrence County.

A cyclone struck Norwood, St. Lawrence county, at 4:48 p. m., last Wednesday, destroying everything in its path. The reports of loss of life were very conflicting, ranging from three to eight. Telegraphic communication was interrupted. A special from Potsdam says that train men who left Norwood shortly after the storm report that eight persons were killed, among them four men who were working on a new school house. Among those killed were John Martin, a mill owner; Mrs. David Fitzgibbons and Mrs. Armstrong. Several were also fatally injured. The bridge, a quarter of a mile long, owned by the Ogdensburg and Lake Champlain railway, over the Racquet river, was destroyed. Many houses, churches, etc., were wrecked, and the streets filled with limbs, trees, roofs, signs and debris.

Hon. Willard Johnson, of Fulton has been ill for the past week and confined to his house. The trouble seems to be of a malarial type, and has not yielded to treatment. When it first came on, Mr. Johnson, who has never before been ill, refused to remain indoors, but about a week since he was forced to yield. Nothing serious is apprehended, though yesterday and to-day he has been confined to his bed. His physician says that if he will remain quiet—a thing very hard for Willard to do—and take his medicine regularly, he will be about again in a week.—[Oswego Palladium.

Running the rapids of the St. Lawrence river between Alexandria Bay and Lachine in an open skiff is a feast reserved only for adventurious spirits with great nerve and great good luck. Yet two New York boys last week accomplished it. Henry Dun Winman and Harry Taylor, aged seventeen respectively, the sons of Erastus Winman, of Staten Island, and Cortlandt Taylor, of Wall street, New York, arrived in Montreal on Thursday last in an open ten foot Whitehall boat, having rowed and sailed the whole distance from Staten Island, in New York bay, via the Hudson river and the Erie and Oswego canals to Oswego, thence by Lake Ontario and down the whole length of the St. Lawrence to Montreal. They availed themselves of various tows, but the greater part of the journey was done by sail or oar. The distance traversed was between one thousand and one thousand and two hundred miles.—[Brownville Journal.

His Game Blocked.

About three weeks ago Officer Poole of this village received a letter from the Chief of Police of Washington asking if one E. R. Aldrich who was said to be temporarily residing in this vicinity was a married man, as the father of a young lady in that city whom Aldrich was about to marry was very anxious to set at rest a rumor that had been circulated that he was not a single man. Officer Poole answered the letter and asked for fuller particulars and a description of the man. In reply he received the following letter:

Thos. G. Poole, Fulton, N. Y.

My dear Sir:

We know E. R. Aldrich only by name. He was connected with a telegraph company in the city of New York. There are rumors to the effect that he has been married once or twice, and now has a living wife—yet he is endeavoring, it is reported to me, to marry a young lady here, of only fifteen years.

The parents of the young lady are, of course, very much disturbed by the possibilities of their daughter being ruined.

Respectfully,
WM. MCE. DYE.
Supt. Police.

Upon receipt of this letter Poole inquired at the post office and learned that a letter addressed to Aldrich had been called for by a railroad man who upon inquiry stated that Aldrich was a line repairer for the Baltimore & Ohio Telegraph Co., and that he had a wife and child in Oswego.

Old Settler's Re-Union.

The old settler's reunion of Oswego county was held in Demster grove, New Haven, Friday. In the absence of the president Norman Rowe, the vice president, presided. Mr. Rowe, aged 90, was the oldest person present. He is now a justice of the peace and town clerk of New Haven. There was a large number present and the exercises were very interesting. The oldest person living in Oswego county is Mrs. Clark of Oswego town, aged 112. Herman Everts of Granby has lived in the county the longest period. He was there previous to the year 1800. Following are the officers for the ensuing year: President, Lyman Coats of Oswego town; vice presidents, Norman Rowe of New Haven, George Gurley of Pulaski, W. P. Dickinson of Constantia, A. Coan of Parish J. A. Place of Oswego city; executive committee, Schuyler Rhodes of Scriba, E. H. Reed of New Haven, Sterling Newell of Mexico, J. C. Wells of Granby, W. H. Gray of Pulaski, secretary and treasures, F. W. Squires of New York.

Dairymen's Picnic.

Dairymen from all the Central New York dairy region will picnic at North Bay on Oneida lake Friday. Cheap excursions trains will be run from Syracuse Little Falls, Oswego and Norwich. A leading feature of the sports at the picnic will be a foot race of one hundred yards, best two in three, for a purse of $100. Four contestants have entered for the race, James Malone of Rochester William Boyd of Montreal, W. T. Case of Chittenango and Fred C. Herman of Oneida. It will probably be the greatest foot race ever contested in this State. Professor Morse of Chittenango will also dive from a derrick about fifty feet high built in the water a short distance from the shore.

The dairymen's and hop-grower's picnics are great events at the head of Oneida lake.

His many friends in Fulton will be pleased to hear that he has returned much improved in health.

"There are men in this very town," said Sam Jones recently in Murfreesboro, "who meet a neighbor's wife on the street and take off their hats and bow and smile as sweet and tenderly and say, 'How are you, madam?' and then go home and wound their own wives with their tongues. Clever to all wives but their own. And so it is with some wives; they are all smiles and kind words in company, and cut their husbands to the heart with their tongues. God pity the man who has such a wife as that."

In a letter from Dr. I. C. Curtis who is spending a few days in Dakota, the doctor says:

"I have always desired to see one of Dakota's electrical storms and I have just passed through one and don't care for any more. For over two hours the air was just one blaze of lightning sufficient to read without the aid of a lamp. There were ten persons killed in this county and it is not thickly settled, either. I am not afraid of lightning but I never expected to see daylight again." The doctor expects to return and attend to business Saturday, Sep. 3.

The "Lucile" a steam yacht of twenty-four tons, passed through this village Monday on her way to Cayuaga lake where she will remain a few days before going to New York. Few of those who admired the beautiful craft were aware of the fact that it was modelled and built by Hershall, the famous blind navy steam-launch builder, of New London, who also built the "Stiletta," the fastest steam yacht in the world. The Lucile was built this season for Mr. Kellogg of Athens, Pa., is ninety feet in length, eleven foot beam and draws three feet of water. The boiler and engine are of the latest and most improved workmanship. The tubing of the former is somewhat similar in principle to the spiral tubing of the "Stiletta." The engines are compound, the cylinders being eight and a half and fourteen inches square, and are capable of running the boat at the rate of seventeen miles an hour. The "Lucile" has just returned from a trip to the Thousand Islands and Lake Ontario.

This will only be done in case of emergencies. The top of the hill on which the tank is to be located is about 60 feet high and the tank itself will be 80 feet. Some idea of the head of water can be formed from the fact that the bottom of the tank will be about level with the top of the Seminary. The pipe to be laid from the tank to the engine house and most of the way to the village is ten inches in diameter. A large quantity of six and eight inch pipe has been distributed around town and also different sizes of cut off valves. A five foot trench has been dug for a long distance on First street above Broadway, but no pipes as yet have been laid. It is expected that about two months will complete the work. The hydrants arrived on the N. Y. O. & W. railroad yesterday.

Spiritualist's Meeting.

The annual meeting of the Spiri[illegible] was held last [illegible], on the Oswego Falls fair ground. A temporary stage was erected for the speakers and the music in the hickory grove and seats that must have seated ten to fifteen hundred persons. John Peck of Oswego, was the chairman of the meeting. The speakers were Mrs. Downy of Baldwinsville, Mrs. Nanderzee of Gouverneur, N. Y., Mrs. Knight of Oswego. Mrs. Dwyer a medium, also spoke a short time and gave a short speech in rhyme. There were many interesting incidents during the day; the communication through mediums of spirits of friends from the spirit world. Spiritualism, said one speaker is a fact and we can prove it. A fee of ten cents was taken at the gate which would probably pay all necessary expense. The meeting adjourned to meet next year at the same place.

They Are Too Bashful.

There are two young men in Fulton who have concluded that their earthly happiness will not be complete until they can wear plug hats. These they recently purchased, or have obtained by some means, and owing to their extreme bashfulness, have not courage enough to wear them boldly on the street. Last Monday evening about eleven o'clock a TIMES reporter met these young men on a quiet street in the village, with their new high hats on, grandly sailing along with a thousand-dollar-in-the-pocket-air and was filled with amazement when he noticed them stooping as they crossed the street under the telephone wires. We hope that ere long this feeling of bashfulness will have worn off and the young men will not be compelled to stay up nights to indulge themselves in the harmless amusement of wearing high hats.

[illegible]

[illegible] is sometimes made in [illegible] cellars and milk houses. [illegible] object of ventilation is to keep the [illegible] cool and dry, but the object [illegible] of being accomplished by a [illegible], and instead, the cellar [illegible] both warm and damp. A cool place should never be ventilated, unless the air admitted is cooler than the air within, or is at least as cool as that, or a very little warmer. The warmer the air the more moisture it holds in suspension. Necessarily, the cooler the air the more this moisture is condensed and precipitated. When a cool cellar is aired on a warm day, the entering air being in motion appears cool; but as it fills the cellar, the cooler air with which it becomes mixed chills it, the moisture is condensed, and dew is deposited on the cold walls, and may often be seen running down them in streams. Then the cellar is damp, and soon becomes moldy. To avoid this the windows should only be opened late at night—the last thing before retiring. There is no need to fear that the night air is unhealthful; it is as pure as the air of midday, and is really drier. The cool air enters the apartment during the night and circulates through it. The windows should be closed before sunrise in the morning and kept closed and shaded through the day. If the air of a cellar is damp it may be thoroughly dried by placing in it a peck of fresh lime in an open box. A peck of lime will absorb about seven pounds, or more than three quarts of water, and in this way a cellar or milk room may soon be dried, even in the hottest weather. A bushel of lime absorbs twenty-seven pounds of water, and still appears as a dry powder. In this condition it will be very useful to spread over the garden or lawn, or around fruit trees, or it may be used for whitewash. This precaution is often necessary in the dairy, because of the prevalence, where air is damp, of mildews and the various forms of mold. The orange and red kinds of mold especially, which sometimes form upon the cream, have a most injurious effect upon the butter.

Keeping Qualities of State Cheese.

The cheese trade of the Produce Exchange has issued a circular in regard to keeping qualities of New York State cheese, of which the following is the substance: "The committee believe that the make of June cheese this year has been for superior to that of several years past, and possesses excellent keeping qualities. It is hoped that the same quality will be shown in the make of the balance of the year, particularly that of the fall months, in order that the general complaint of the keeping quality of New York State cheese, which was so commonly heard last winter, both here and in Great Britain, may not be repeated the coming season. Shipments of cheese from competeting ports show a large increase year by year, and there is no feature of the business that would serve to turn the tide of trade away from New York as quickly as a lack of keeping qualities in our cheese. The trade believe the factorymen of New York State know the corrections in the make that are necessary, and have the ability and skill as a class to make the finest cheese in the world. The law providing for the branding of cheese meets with our unqualified approval, and we hope that the branding of all full-cream cheese will be universally carried out, in order that those who have practiced light skimming, in the hope of passing their goods as full-cream, will be compelled to market their product strictly upon its merits."

Ventilation of Stables.

There is a great deal of cheap talk about ventilating cow houses and stock barns, but the great trouble with such buildings is an excess of ventilation. It is only making a bad matter worse to put a ventilator on a barn in which every gust of wind is felt in the stables and manure freezes fast to the floor. If the stable is in fact made so tight that its occupants cannot get enough air to breathe, more air should, by all means, be admitted in front of them, so that they can breathe it while fresh and pure, and not let in behind them by opening a window in their rear, as is most frequently done, to become loaded with the effluvia from their droppings before reaching their nostrils. A stable in which the air circulates so freely as to keep the temperature down is already too much ventilated. It is a good plan in days of cold and high winds to look carefully round the stable to see how the automatic ventilation is carried on, with a view of applying a remedy with more boards and battens. Loss is inevitable when stock suffers with cold. It pays to keep it warm at any cost. There is nothing more economical than comfort, especially for milch cows.—[National Live Stock Journal.

Extensive Fruit Raising.

One of the most extensive fruit farmers of England is Lord Sudeley, who has 700 acres devoted to general fruit growing. On this tract he has 8,000 assorted apple trees, 800 pear trees, 32,000 plum trees, 50 acres of black currants, of the variety known as English black, the leaves of which are dried and used as tea by the peasants, 100 acres of strawberries, 90 acres of raspberries, and 130,000 gooseberry bushes. He has 44 varieties of plums and 45 of gooseberries. He shelters the plantation by rows of quick growing poplars and Scotch firs, and on ten acres of wet margin land he grows enough willow to supply all the [illegible] needed on the estate. There is [illegible] no other plantation of the kind on so large a scale in the world.—[Ex.

Higher Prices for Butter.

[illegible] who use Wells, Richardson [illegible] Improved Butter Color, agree [illegible]

[illegible] Take no one's word for it. Your eye is your [illegible]. Don't buy a horse in harness. Unhitch him and take everything off but the halter and lead him around. If he has a corn, or a stiff knee, or has any other failing you can see it. Let him go by himself, a way, and if he staves right into anything you know he is blind. No matter how clear and bright his eyes are he can't see more than a bat. Back him, too. Some horses show their weakness at tricks in that way when they don't at any other. But, be as smart as you can, you'll get caught sometimes. Even an expert gets stuck. A horse may look ever so nice and go a great ways and yet have fits. There isn't a man could tell it till something happens. Or he may have a weak back. Give him the whip and off he goes for a mile or two; then all of a sudden he stops in the road. After a rest he starts again, but he soon stops for good, and nothing but a derrick could move him.

The weak points of a horse can be better discovered while standing than while moving. If he is sound he will stand firmly and squarely on his limbs without moving them, feet flatly upon the ground, with legs plump and naturally poised; or, if the foot is lifted off the ground and the weight taken from it, disease may be suspected, or at least tenderness, which is a precursor of disease. If the horse stands with his feet spread apart or straddles with his hind legs there is a weakness in the loins and the kidneys are disordered. Heavy pulling bends the knees. Bluish, milky cast of eyes in horses indicates moon-blindness or something else. A bad tempered one keeps his ears thrown back. A kicking horse is apt to have scarred legs. A stumbling horse has blemished knees. When the skin is rough and harsh and does not move to the touch the horse is a heavy eater and digestion is bad. Never buy a horse whose breathing organs are at all impaired. Place your ear at the heart and if a wheezing sound is heard it is an indication of trouble.

Preparing Fruits for Canning.

Boil tomatoes twenty minutes, add a little salt; can hot.

Boil ripe currants six minutes; amount of sugar to a quart, eight ounces.

Boil Siberians, or crab-apples, whole, twenty-five minutes; eight ounces of sugar to a quart.

Boil peaches whole fifteen minutes, using six ounces of sugar to a quart.

Boil pears from twenty to thirty minutes—twenty for halves and thirty for whole pears—using six ounces of sugar to a quart can of fruit.

Boil whortleberries five minutes; the amount of sugar to a quart jar should be four ounces.

Boil plums ten minutes; eight ounces of sugar to a quart is needed.

Boil blackberries six minutes with six ounces of sugar to the quart.

Boil raspberries six minutes with four ounces of sugar to the quart.

Boil cherries five minutes; the amount of sugar to a quart is six ounces.

Fruit cans ought to be tightened both before and after the fruit cools. Never use poor rubbers if you want your fruit to keep well. The best cans have porcelain tops. Keep canned fruit in a dark, cool place in the cellar. A plain board cupboard (in the cellar) with doors is just the thing to keep fruit in. Swing shelves in the cellar is no place for fruit. Fruit gets too much light and sometimes takes a fall, and, great the fall thereof, as well as great waste of fruit and time. Avoid all such calamities. Have a cupboard for your fruit. Any man or boy that is handy with tools can make one good enough to put in a dark corner of your cellar. I can assure you it will pay well for the trouble. Fruit kept in the dark retains its flavor better. Try it and judge for yourself.—[Detroit Free Press "Household."

How a Farmer Boy Makes Pickles.

A boy whom we know of makes quite a nice sum of money every year by raising a patch of cucumbers for pickles. The month of July is not too late to plant them. He is a hard-working ambitious boy, who will be sure to make his way in the world. Besides the cucumbers, he has a chicken house, which he built himself. We told you about that once before. He has since got some full-blooded brown Leghorn fowls which he is very proud of. They have given a large number of eggs.

Here is how this industrious boy makes his pickles. The cucumbers should not be larger than the finger. In salting them, put a layer of salt in the bottom of the cask; upon this put cucumbers and salt in alternate layers at the rate of three quarts of salt to a bushel of cucumbers; add a little water to make brine, and weight the whole; the cucumbers should be covered with brine within twenty-four hours. In freshening, place in a tub and cover with boiling water once a day for three days, or until fresh. Then place in tubs and cover with vinegar. Add one teaspoonful of mixed spices to the gallon, and a little alum. They are worth from orty to sixty cents per hundred, according to the season.

A farmer of long experience says: I owe my success by adhering firmly to the principle of selling my produce when it is ready for market, and doing well and thoroughly what I had to do in the farming way. My observations in these matters is that those farmers who have held on to their produce after getting it ready for market, and thereby becoming speculators instead of producers, have as a rule come to grief and lost money in the end.

A Toothless Generation.

It is rather an alarming thing to be told that the American people is promising to develop into a toothless generation, and yet this is what a dentist of high repute says. Bad teeth are hereditary, and the only thing that will save us is to live chiefly on grain foods and good beef. The large amount of [illegible] eaten by children of the poor is a [illegible] cause of bad teeth, and in this [illegible]

Admiral Farragut.

Admiral Farragut gave the following account of his start in life: "My father was sent down to New Orleans, with the little navy we then had, to look after the treasurer of Burr. I accompanied him as a cabin-boy, and was ten years of age. I had some qualities which I thought made a man of me. I could swear like an old-salt; could drink a stiff glass of grog as if I had doubled Cape Horn, and could smoke like a locomotive. I was great at cards, and fond of gaming in every shape. At the close of the dinner, one day, my father turned everybody out of the cabin, locked the door, and said to me: 'David, what do you mean to be?' 'I mean to follow the sea.' 'Follow the sea! Yes, be a poor, miserable, drunken sailor before the mass, kicked and cuffed about the world, and die in some fever hospital in a foreign clime.' 'No,' I said, 'I'll tread the quarter-deck and command, as you do.' 'No, David; no boy ever trod the quarter-deck with such habits as you exhibit. You'll have to change your whole course of life if you ever become a man.' My father left me and went on deck. I was stunned by the rebuke, and overwhelmed with mortification. 'A poor, miserable, drunken sailor before the mast, kicked and cuffed about the world, and die in some fever hospital! That's my fate, is it? I'll change my life, and change it at once. I will never utter another oath; I will never drink another drop of intoxicating liquor; I will never gamble.' And as God is my witness, I have kept those three vows to this hour. Shortly after I became a Christian. That act settled my destiny for time and eternity.

Bill Nye in a Solemn Mood.

A young wife having written to Bill Nye that she does not have as much money and is not as happy now as she was when she was a school teacher and supported herself, he gives this piece of excellent advice: "Of course I want to do what is right in the solemn warning business, so I will give notice to all simple young women who are now self-supporting and happy, that there is no statute requiring them to assume the burdens of wifehood and motherhood unless they prefer to do so. If they now have abundance of pin-money and new clothes they may remain single if they wish without violating the laws of the land. This rule is also good when applied to self-supporting young men who wear good clothes and have funds in their pockets. No young man who is free, happy and independent, need invest his money in a family or carry a colicky child twenty-seven miles and two laps in the night unless he prefers it."

JOHN STANTON'S MISTAKE.

Rose Villa had been without a tenant for several months, and it was with a considerable degree of interest that John Stanton looked from his window just across the street one afternoon and saw a furniture van being unloaded on the sidewalk and its contents carried into the pretty little vine-wreathed cottage.

He had sprained his ankle several days before, and had been an unwilling prisoner in his room ever since, so even as small an event as the arrival of a tenant in the opposite house was a welcome break in the monotony of his days.

He amused himself by idly wondering what sort of people the new occupants would prove to be, and he tried to picture them to himself. They were evidently people of culture and refinement, for a handsome piano was one of their possessions, and several bookcases indicated a well-filled library.

Two loads of furniture came before the new occupants of the cottage made their appearance. Just as the van was going away after depositing its second load, two ladies came up the street, whom John surmised at once were his new neighbors, as one was burdened with a clock and the other was carrying a bird cage.

"What a little beauty!" exclaimed John enthusiastically as his eyes fell on the face of the younger of the two ladies.

Just as she reached the gate a mischievous puff of wind caught her hat, and before she could hastily disengage one hand from her burden her head gear went whirling down the street under the horse's feet, a small arab who had witnessed the catastrophe in hot pursuit.

John did not regret this accident, for it gave him such an excellent opportunity to admire his pretty neighbor at his leisure.

The wind blew her golden hair around her flushed face and he only caught a glimpse of her features, but that one glance was sufficent to assure him that his first impression of her beauty was correct.

She had a slender, graceful figure, "just an armful," thought John to himself, and her foot was as small and shapely as her little white hands.

John envied the ragged little urchin the bright smile which accompanied her thanks for the recoveryof the hat, and as she vanished through the open door he set his wits to work to contrive some plan by which he might become acquainted with this little enchantress.

When his landlady brought up his dinner and seated herself for a little chat he asked, with as great a show of unconcern as he could assume, if she knew who had rented Rose Villa.

"Mrs. and Miss Vaughan, I believe their names are," answered the landlady. "The husband is coming after a time. He has business in the city just now that keeps him there. It will be nice to have neighbors over there again, it's so lonely like to have the house shut up all the time."

"Yes," assented John indifferently, as if the newcomers were not of the slightests consequence to him.

The next day passed far more pleasantly for him than any of the previous days of his imprisonment had done, for from behind his lace curtain he watched every movement of his new neighbors.

He could see into Rose Villa through uncurtained windows without the least difficulty, and all day long he watched the younger lady as she toiled industriously trying to restore order out of the confusion of packing boxes and barrels of books.

"How I would like to go over there and help her," thought John, as he saw her mount on a step-ladder, and with sleeves rolled up and a coquettish sweeping cap covering her pretty hair, drive picture nails with a precision and energy that were astonishing in a woman.

"She doesn't look much like her mother," thought John, as the elder lady came out to shake a rug, and he had a good view of her sharp featured face and corkscrew ringlets that bobbed up and down with every motion she made.

At last, after days of hard work, everything was in its place, and lace curtains, much to John's regret, obstructed his view. He caught many glimpses of his [illegible] however, for she had [illegible] to the neglected [illegible] her [illegible] and [illegible] with the words [illegible]

"I must know her," said John to himself. "But how can I possibly get a chance to become acquainted with her?"

He thought of confiding in his landlady and begging her to get acquainted with her new neighbors that she might then introduce him, but he knew well how garrulous she was and he shrank from letting her know how much he was interested in them. No, he must think of some other way.

At last a thought struck him. Hobbling over to his writing-dest as well as he could with the aid of a cane, he drew out his writing materials and began to indite an epistle. It proved to be a long afternoon's work, for it seemed to him that he had never before known how utterly inadequate the vast resources of the English language are to express the thoughts of a lover, or rather conceal them, for his aim was to make his note merely courteous and grateful.

He had determined to write and thank her for the pleasure her music afforded him, as he was at present an invalid.

"That will touch her heart," thought John. "I guess I won't tell her what's the matter with me. There isn't much romance in a banana skin and a sprained ankle."

At the end of the epistle he intimated his great desire to make her acquaintance and begged that she would pardon him for his seeming presumption, as he knew of no other way to become acquainted with her.

"I hope she won't be offended,' thought John, as he directed the envelope.

"I will get the doctor to post this note for me and then no one here will be the wiser for it."

After his letter had been dispatched he watched anxiously until he saw the postman deliver it at the cottage; then he sank back in his lounge in a perfect fever of suspense.

Suppose she should be angry for his presumption in writing to her! How should he ever make his peace with her? He fancied that he was so desperately in love with her that life would scarcely be worth living without her, and he longed to offer himself to her and learn his fate.

He had not very long to wait for an answer to his note. In somewhat less then an hour the trim little maid crossed the street and left at the door a letter directed to "Mr. John Stanton," in a pretty angular handwriting.

With trembling fingers John tore open the envelope. What were the contents of the letter. He soon knew, for it ran thus:

"DEAR MR. STANTON: I am very much flattered at your kind commendation of my poor attempts, and I am glad you enjoy them. I shall be very happy to make your acquaintance when you are able to be out again. I have often noticed you at the window and felt sorry for you, you looked so pale and thin. I shall be glad to hear from you again. Yours, very sincerely.

"AMANDA VAUGHAN."

John read this note again and again in a perfect transport of delight. Could anything have been kinder and more frendly? She had noticed him and been sorry for him. What angelic pity!

Every afternoon the elder lady practiced for an hour very sedulously upon "Maiden's Prayer" and "Whisperings of Love," and the next day it seemed to John as if she would never stop.

His head fairly ached, despite his happiness, with the monotonous sound, varied only by occasional mistakes. He was impatient to hear his fair charmer play and sing again, for he knew that she would be thinking of him this evening.

When at last she took her seat at the piano he enjoyed her music with a keener pleasure than he had ever felt before; it was for him she was singing and playing now.

Two or three more notes passed between them, and at last John could not restrain his love. He poured it all out in a long letter and begged her to end his suspense speedily, assuring her of his unalterable devotion to the end of his life.

It did not take Miss Vaughan long to make up her mind apparently. The little maid soon brought her answer, and John read:

"DEAR DARLING JOHN—I will be yours since you wish it. Can't you possibly come over this evening about 7 o'clock, that we may hold sweet converse together? Yours till death.

AMANDA."

It was only a short note, but it raised John to the seventh heaven of happiness. Of course he would go over, and he painfully hobbled around the room for an hour, making as elaborate a toilet as he could and consulting his glass with an anxiety he had never known before.

At last 7 o'clock came, and, leaning heavily on his cane, he limped across the street and rang the door bell.

The trim little maid admitted him with something that was very like a sternly suppressed smile on her round, rosy face, and ushered him into the parlor.

It was dimly lighted, and John sank into the nearest seat, trying to control his agitation and delight.

Presently the door opened and a figure glided toward him.

"My darling!" exclaimed John rapturously, with outstretched arms, and in another instant he was pressing loving kisses upon the upturned face.

Suddenly his blood seemed to congeal with horrified astonishment. They were at the further end of the room from the dim light and he could not distinguish the features of the woman he had in his arms until a kindly flash from the fire in the grate showed him the corkscrew curls and sharp features of the [illegible] he had supposed to be [illegible]

[illegible] mean?" [illegible]

"I—I made a mistake!" he stammered feebly, and grasping his hat he beat a hasty retreat.

He moved all his belongings early the next morning before the inhabitants of Rose Villa were astir, and he soon banished the image of his fair enchantress from his heart, as whenever he thought of her he could not but remember the ridiculous mistake of which he had been the victim.—[Phila. Call.

My Curious Friend.

There is a weirdness, a feeling of awe and utter loneliness, as I push slowly through the swamp. It is in Mississippi and a swamp in that region means a spot on God's green earth which God Himself has seemingly cast out of His mind. Such utter desolation lurks nowhere else. Such loneliness was never called up before.

I was lost. I had realized that fact an hour ago. It had clouded up till I could no longer see the sun, and in making a detour to avoid a pond I had become hopelessly confused. On all sides of me grew the canes. Ahead—behind—right or left was rank grass, sloughs of dark and filthy water, and no ground on which the foot could rest long in safety.

And there was worse. As I stood for a moment wondering what I could do, a hideous black snake glided away from under my feet and plunged into the water ahead. His passage across was disputed by a huge cotton-mouth, and as the two fought and writhed and twisted the noise of combat called out other denizens. A water moccasin ran hissing past me. A great lizard flashed his fiery eyes at me and disappeared under the roots of a dead cypress. The odor of musk floated through the swamp, and presently an alligator uttered his horrible "sniff! sniff!" and I heard him plunging about not far off.

Which way? I stood and turned slowly until I had made a circuit. It was the same on every side—cypress, cane, reeds, water and here and there a hummock. I could not stand still, knowing that I was lost, and yet, realizing the same fact, one route was as good as another. It was no use to shout. I was miles from the nearest cabin, and there was no hope that any other hunter was in the swamp. Shout? If life depended on it I would not dare to break that awful silence. A scream might collect the serpents about me—might tell the alligators where to look for a victim.

I crept carefully forward, but had not progressed a hundred feet when the ground began to give under me. I let go of the heavy rifle, made a wild leap and a scramble, as my feet touched firm ground again I was defenseless. The weapon had sunk out of sight in the black waters. Then I shouted. Aye, I raised my voice and shouted, "Help! Help!" with all the fierceness of a man who sees death before him. It was unmanly, but I was unnerved. The serpents were gliding about me, and that utter desolation—that awful loneliness was breaking me down.

I could look back over my trail for about 300 feet. As I stood there after the loss of the rifle, a voice called to me. With my heart almost in my mouth I answered it. The voice called again.

"I am here, right ahead of you—thank God!" I answered.

I could see no one, but now and then the reeds waved in a manner to prove that a body was being forced through them. By and by the bushes parted and a gaunt, wild-eyed beast paused to look at me from a distance of only ten feet. It was a panther and he had been stalking me.

"Nr-r-r-r!" he growled as flattened his ears and parted his lips to show his long yellow fangs.

How sleek he was! Such eyes! How those cruel teeth would rend and tear! What power in those short limbs!

I laughed and beckoned to him.

"Nr-r-r-r!" he growled.

"Ah! I know you! You were sent out from the house to show me the way out of this awful spot. Come, I am ready."

With no more effort than a cat makes to spring over a stool, he leaped the space and alighted beside me.

"And how did you find me?" I asked as I rubbed the soft fur on his back.

"Nr-r-r-r—meow!"

"Tracked me by scent, I suppose, though you must have had a hard time of it. Say, let's be going. I'm all unnerved by this terrible loneliness."

"Meow! Meow!"

"They talk about the horrors of solitary confinement for murderers, but what is the dungeon cell compared to this? No man would live here half a day. He would end his life by a plunge into one of these pools."

"Pur-r-r-r!"

"Well, we'll go. Keep that big cypress in line to prevent going in a circuit. Isn't it curious that people who are lost invariably travel in a circle?"

"Purr! Purr!"

"Look out for the snakes! It seems as if all the serpents in America had congregated here to-day. The bite of the moccasin or the cotton-mouth means death within the hour. On these dryer hummocks there must be rattle-snakes. Oh! It makes the blood chill to think of being struck by the poisoned fangs."

"Nr-r-r-r!"

"Did I pull your ear too hard? I am getting terribly fagged out. Let me sit down for a few minutes on this old tree. Do you know that it isn't the horrible snakes and lizards and alligators which unnerve me so much as the fact that I am lost. It brings such a feeling of helplessness that I want to cry like a woman. To think that one might wander through this awful swamp for days and days and finally die here! And the [illegible] of night [illegible] [illegible] when I take hold of your ear. I need something to hold me up. Such horrible walking I never saw. Is it coming night or is it the clouds thickening up?"

* * * * * * *

"Well, boy, I'm glad on it!" said the Colonel in his hearty voice.

"What?"

"To see you yourself again. We found you on the second day, raving and wandering and nearly naked, and you've been here in bed exactly fourteen days. Hush, now, and don't do any talking. With care you'll soon be all right again. How on earth you escaped death I can't make out, but here you are, and the doctor says you'll come out as tidy as a new half-dollar."—[M. Quad, in Detroit Free Press.

The Girl that Everybody Likes.

She is not beautiful—O no! Nobody thinks of calling her that. Not one of a dozen can tell whether her eyes are black or blue. If you should ask them to describe her they would say, "She is just right," and there it would end. She is a merry-hearted, fun-loving, bewitching maiden, without a spark of envy or malice in her whole composition. She enjoys herself and wants everybody else to do the same. She has always a kind word and a pleasant smile for the oldest man or woman; in fact I can think of nothing she resembles more than a sunbeam, which brightens everything it comes in contact with. All pay her marked attention, from rich Mr. Watts who lives in a mansion on the hill to Sam, the sweep. All look after her with an admiring eye, and say to themselves: "She is just the right sort of a girl!" The young men of the town vie with one another as to who can show her the most attention; but she never encourages them beyond being simply kind and jolly; so no one can call her a flirt; no indeed, the young men all deny such an assertion as quickly as she. Girls—wonderful to relate—like her, too, for she never delights in hurting their feelings, or saying spiteful things behind their backs. She is willing to join in their little plans and assist them in any way. They go to her with their love affairs, and she manages adroitly to see Willie or Peter, and drop a good word for Ida or Jennie, until their little difficulties are all patched up, and everything goes smoothly again—thanks to her. Old ladies say she is "delightful." The sly witch—she knows how to manage them. She listens patiently to complaints of rheumatism or neuralgia, and then sympathizes with them so heartily that they are more than half cured. But she can not always remain with us. A young man comes from a neighboring town, after a time, and marries her. The vilagers crowd around to tell him what a prize he has won, but he seems to know it pretty well without any telling, to judge from his face. So she leaves us, and it is not long before we hear from that place. She is a woman that everybody likes.—[Christian Advocate.

What Sporting Men Rely On.

When Lewis R. Redmond, the South Carolina moonshiner, cornered, after for eight years eluding the government officials, was asked to surrender, he exclaimed:

"Never, to men who fire at my back!"

Before he was taken, five bullets had gone clear through him, but strange to relate, he got well, in the hands of a rude backwoods nurse."

By the way, if Garfield had been in he hands of a backwoods nurse, he might have lived. A heap of volunteer testimony against the infallability of the physicians has been accumulating of late, and people are encouraged to do their own doctoring more and more. It is cheaper and quite as certain.

Before Detective Curtin of Buffalo caught Tom Ballard he "covered" him with his revolver. Tom saw the point and tumbled!

Joe Goss was "covered" a few weeks ago and he tumbled, and so did Dan Mace. Death "fetched em" with that dreaded weapon—kidney disease. But they should have been lively and drawn first. They could easily have disarmed the monster had they covered him with that dead shot—Warner's safe cure, which, drawn promptly, always takes the prey. It is doubtless true that sporting men dread this enemy more than any mishap of the profession, and presumably this explains why they as a rule are so partial to that celebrated "dead shot."

Redmond was right. No man should surrender when attacked in the back. He should "draw," face about and proceed to the defence, for such attacks, so common among all classes, will fetch a man every time unless "covered" by that wonderfully successful "dead shot."—[Sportsman's News.

Three Peculiarities

Hood's Sarsaparilla, the great blood purifier and regulating medicine, is characterized by three peculiarities, namely:

1st: The combination of the various remedial agents used.

2d: The proportion in which the roots, herbs, barks, etc., are mixed.

3d: The process by which the active medicinal properties are secured.

The result is a medicine of unusual strength and curative power, which effects cures heretofore unequaled. These peculiarities belong exclusively to Hood's Sarsaparilla, and are Unknown to Others.

Hood's Sarsaparilla is prepared with the greatest skill and care, by pharmacists of education and long experience. Hence it is a medicine worthy of entire confidence. If you suffer from scrofula, salt rheum, or any disease of the blood, dyspepsia, biliousness, sick headache, or kidney and liver complaints, catarrh or rheumatism, do not fail to try

Hood's Sarsaparilla

"I recommend Hood's Sarsaparilla to all my friends as the best blood purifier on earth." WM. GAFF, druggist, Hamilton, O.

"Hood's Sarsaparilla has cured me of scrofulous humor, and done me worlds of good otherwise." C. A. ARNOLD, Arnold, Me.

A book containing many additional statements of cures will be sent to all who desire.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Sold by all druggists. $1; six for $5. Made only by C. I. HOOD & CO., Lowell, Mass.

OSWEGO COUNTY TO HAVE SENATOR.

As this senatorial district, composed of the counties of Oswego and Jefferson, is conceded to the Republicans, but little effort is made by the opposition to elect their nominee. It is therefore the more necessary that the Republicans nominate a good candidate. For six years past the district has been represented by Jefferson county, and as far as our knowledge extends, during all this time the district has had no occasion to be ashamed of its representative. Now it is agreed by this county that the candidate shall be named by Oswego county and they in turn will heartily second the action of the convention. Among the names which will come before the convention from Oswego county are those of Geo. B. Sloan and Minister Worts of Oswego. Both men are of unquestionable integrity and party fealty. It is therefore expedient for the Republicans of Oswego county to unite upon one of the above named gentlemen in order that factional feeling may no arise and thus give the nomination to Jefferson. Republicans settle your differences at home and when you enter the senatorial convention, present a solid front.

FRANZ JOSEF PETMUCKY was hung at Auburn last Friday for the murder of Mrs.Frotshein of Auburn on June 1 1883. Petnucky met his death on the gallowe very cooly.

ALREADY the number of deaths from cholera in Spain this year is 70,000, and there is but little doubt from the present rate of progress of the disease but that 100,000 of her people will die before the dreadful plague is suppressed. This is more than five times the number of deaths in France last year. The sanitary conditions of Spain are in the most deplorable condition of any civilized country in the world.

THE British Government has appointed a Commission to inquire into and report upon the condition and education of the blind in England. Mr. Campbell, one of the members of the Commission, is to visit the United States for the purpose of examining the methods used here to enable sightless persons to acquire literary and mechanical knowledge. The idea upon which the appointment of this Commission is based was first suggested by the late Mr. Fawcett, the blind Postmaster General of Great Britain.

THE New York Sun declares that the hostility of the Kings county democrats to the New York Custom House machine will involve the defeat of Edward Cooper, if nominated for governor. The New York Times and Post say that the opposition of the Independents would produce the same contingency, for Governor Hill. Thus the two leading candidates have been disposed of, and a dark horse would appear to be a neccessity, unless Mr. Flower's feeble canvass should suddenly revive. Is Mr. Corning aware of the opportunities which this situation presents?—[Albany Express.

THE people of Spain have been too much engrossed lately in trying to escape the plague of cholera to engage in their favorite diversion of bull-fighting, but the population of Nimes, a city of France, are improving the occasion by introducing the brutal and disgusting sport. An exhibition was recently given on Sunday in the presence of 25,000 spectators. Ten horses and numerous bulls were killed, and one of the human brutes,a famous toreador,was shockingly wounded. There is some satisfaction in knowing that the prefect who had authorized the fight was sickened by the disgusting sight, and was obliged to leave the scene in the middle of the performance.

LIEUTENANT DANENHOWER, who will be remembered as having once lectured in Fulton,in a paper to be read before the United States institute in Annapolis in October, will express himself as follows regarding Arctic expeditions:

"After having served with one expedition, and having devoted seven years to the study of the objects,as well as to the watchful observation of the numerous efforts and a comparatively insignificant result attending sacrifice of human life and treasure, I unhesitatingly record myself as opposed to further exploration of the central polar basin with our present resources. The gradual extension of observatory stations in the interest of meteorology, magnetism and other scientific branches should be made, but national support should not be given to another Arctic expedition."

EX-GOVERNOR REUBEN E. FENTON died suddenly yesterday while seated in his chair in the directors' room of the First National bank of Jamestown N. Y., of which he is president. Reuben E. A hermit with beard and hair of enormous growth living in the Adirondacks, ten miles from Stony Creek, Warren county, has been identified as Philip O'Neil, a brushmaker of Lansingburg, who disappeared in 1871, leaving a wife and four children.

Tuesday, the bondsmen of Orrin Sperry, the treasurer of Chautauqua county, who defaulted last year to the amount of $80,000, settled with the county by paying $35,000 in cash. The taxpayers will make up the remainder. Sperry lost heavily in oil speculations, and is supposed to be in Canada.

The New York state fair is to be held at Albany this year and promises to be one of the most successful of a long series. The Albany Express states that the list of enteries exceed that of last year—which was exceptionall large—by over 200.

A gentleman in New York is the possessor of an antique back comb of elaborate design from Nicaragua, the intrinsic value of which is not far from $250. It is gold, set with pearls, garnets and fine specimens of topaz, and was probably made during the Spanish occupation of Central America to adorn the head of a figure of the Virgin in one of the early churches.

Jesse Taylor, an old and respected citizen who lived near McGrawville, Cortland county, went to the barn to feed his chickens Wednesday morning, and while in the basement the walls gave way. The barn fell with a crash, burying Taylor in the ruins and killing him instantly. It is supposed the recent rains had weakened the walls and caused them to fall.

The president of the Brooklyn Bridge company receives a salary of $5,000; the secretary, $4,000; chief engineer and superintendent, $6,000, first assistant engineer, $4,000; second assistant engineer, $3,000; captain of police, $1,500; superintendent of tolls, $1,500; superintendent of transportation, $1,500; chief mechanical engineer, $2,000; electric light superintendent, $1,300; master machinist, $1,872; master carpenter, $1,560. The car conductors are paid 20 cents an hour and the policemen 25 cents.

Personal and Political.

Patti was married and divorced in the same room.

Arthur is said to have saved $75,000 out of his Presidential salary.

The widow of General Custer has become the New York correspondent of a leading Chicago daily.

The youngest son of Gen Fitzhugh Lee, the Democratic candidate for governor of Virginia, died on Tuesday.

President Cleveland, it is said, contemplates a visit to Ohio before the October election. The President has relatives in Cleveland and Toledo.

Ex-Senator Powell Clayton is now out of politics, and is devoting himself to building up Eureka Springs, one of the most promising watering-places in Arkansas.

Dr. G. B. Farnum of New Haven has received back the bathchair used by General Grant at Mt. McGregor. He had made it a personal and friendly loan to the illustrious patient.

Governor Hill has signified his intention of being present at the seventh annual reunion of the Washington county Veterans, to be held at Greenwich, August 26. The Governor will be met on his arrival at Greenwich and escorted to the scene of the reunion.

Referring to the reports that Mr.Cleveland and Mr Hendricks will visit Ohio to help Hoadly, the New York World says: "It strikes us that it would not be wise for the administration to place all its eggs in the Ohio basket this year."

Lieutenant Greely of Arctic fame, is deriving much benefit from his sojourn in Pittsfield, Mass. He was nearly worn out when he went thither from Washington, but now he can sleep well, is strong, and in good spirits for his work upon his report to Congress, upon which he is busily engaged.

The Grant family will leave Mount McGregor the first part of September, Col. Fred will go to Chicago to attend the union of the Tennessee army, September 9th, and then return to his father's work. Mrs. Grant and daughter will go to West Point ten days,then join Jesse at his farm in Westchester county. Mrs. Sartoris expects to sail for England about October 1st. The family will all join Mrs. Grant at New York in the fall with the exception of Mrs. Sartoris who will remain in England.

THE expulsion of M. Rothan from Alsace Lorraine by Prince Bismarck has caused quite a flutter of excitement among the French.

THE State Democratic convention will be held at Saratoga, Thursday, September 24th. The Republican convention will be held at the same place September 23d.

THE national conference for the protection of young girls at a meeting in London last week, resolved to form vigilance societies everywhere throughout the country to enforce the existing laws against immorality and to labor for the improvement of all legislation designed to repress criminal vice.

John Leslie, who for more than a quarter of a century was a member of one of the leading grocery houses in Central New York, died Monday at his residence in Syracuse. He was 58 years old.

The late firm of Steele & Titus, Traverse City, Mich., having been dissolved by the death of Clarence O. Titus, formerly of this village, will be succeeded by his late partner Geo. R. Steele and Mrs. Francis A. Titus, being assisted by Mr. Dow B. Titus, brother of [illegible]

The third trial race of the American yachts which are to compete with the English yacht Genesta, was sailed on Monday and won by the Puritan. She finished twenty seconds ahead of the Priscilla.

Hops will be a bad failure this year. The crop is small and poor. There are over 7,000 acres in Kent blighted. The continental yield is much below the average.—[London dispatch New York Times.

The city authorities have rented a garden attached to the small pox hospital at Montreal to a market gardener, and cabbages and other products from it are brought to the city market and sold.

Before they were able to penetrate to the treasure vaults the conspirators had to forge the signatures of forty high officers of the bank. The chief criminal has fled, and there is no probability of recovering much of the stolen money.

A terrible collisson occurred Sunday on the Metropolitan district and underground railroad at Earl's Court, London. The signals had broken and became unmanageable and two trains collided. One engineer was killed, and a stoker and five other persons were fatally injured.

In 1881 Abeline, Tex., had a population of 500. Now it has 5,500 inhabitants, fifty stores, two national banks, two hotels, a $60,000 Court House and a $30,000 opera house, and its annual wool shipments will foot up very nearly 6,000,000 pounds.

Last week the infant child of Charles Sullivan of Detroit apparently died and was prepared for burial. Fifteen hours after the supposed death, the whole family and friends were gathered about the coffin, the baby began to cry, frightening nearly everyone from the house. The father retained his senses, and took the child from the coffin, and it has been since in better health than for some time.

The body of the beautiful young woman found in the Ohio river just above Louisville has been identified as Miss Laura H. Nourse, who went to Louisville a short time ago from Cincinnati, where she had engaged in missionary work. She deliberately tied a towel over mouth and walked into the river, leaving her clothes on the bank. Miss Nourse had been staying at the Young Ladies' Home, and was searching for employment. She was highly educated and refined, and had a brother in New Orleans. She left a letter in her trunk saying that she was tired of life's struggles, and denounced God as a fraud in whom she had trusted all her life, but who would not help her in trouble and distress. Miss Nourse has been in Washington and is the daughter of an army officer.

An astounding bank robbery has just been reported from St. Petersburg. The plundered institution is the State Bank of Russia, and the amount of robbery is 220,000 roubles, or $143,000. This amount was taken bodily out of the vaults of the bank between two days, but the vaults were found securely locked on the morning of the discovery, and there was no evidence of violence or of burglary. It was plainly not a case of defalcation, for the books showed no false entries. A careful inquiry has shown that the robbery was committed by a party of minor employees of the bank who had no right of access to the vaults, but who had become thoroughly familiar with the routine of the institution, and were thus enabled to concoct a plan by which one of their number was locked in the vault at the close of the business hours and released during the night by his confederates.

COUNTY COMMENT.

The old settlers of the town of Oswego are holding their annual meeting at agricultural hall to-day.

Burglars entered the residence of Joseph Hover, at Oswego, Saturday night. Jewelry to the value of $200 was taken.

The appeal brought against the formation of school districts Nos. 1 and 5 into a union free school district, has been dismissed by the superintendent of public instruction. The building of the new school house will be commenced immediately.

Last Saturday morning a girl named Lake, who is employed at Conde's works was badly hurt through the carelessness of a companion who threw a pair of large sheers at her in sport,as she says. The point of the weapon penetrated near Miss Lake's thigh, severing one of the main arteries from which the blood flowed so rapidly that before a surgeon could be secured she was nearly exhausted from loss of blood.

September Magazines.

Henry James begins a new story in the Atlantic, unique in style and which bids fair to eclipse his former efforts. Mrs. Oliphant's serial is strikingly interesting in this number. Mr. Warner and Dr. Holmes give very entertaining installments of "On Horseback" and "The New Portfolio." Mr. Howells and Mr. Scudder contribute articles which greatly entertain, Among the other writers, are W. O. Lawton, S. J. Barrows, James Lane Allen, Edith M. Thomas and Angelina Teal. What will command general attention is "General Gordon at Kartoum" from the journals of General Gordon while there. The story of his sacrifice places the English government in a bad light, which grows blacker as the facts are more fully revealed; the picture is a striking one, and shows the pure love of country the hero of Kartoum possessed. A number of poems, and important book reviews, with the usual editorial departments, close the number.

HARPER.

September Harper opens with a first paper on "Labrador"; it is fully illustrated and written in an interesting style. It is followed by "The House of Murray" giving good likenesses of many of the best read English poets. "Impressions of the South" by Chas. Dudley Warner is a pleasant recital of a recent visit to the Gulf States. Striking portraits of the early settlers in Ohio who went from Connecticut just 100 years ago with an interesting story of the settlemend is given. Theodore Child contributes an historical article upon the noted sculptor and painter Antoine Louis Barze. The illustrations include many of the most notable works of this great artist, and are here reproduced in the unequaled style of Harper. Howell's "Indian Summer" commenced last month is continued, and is among his best efforts and will be read by millions. The Editor's Easy Chair, gives a pleasing [illegible]

[illegible] Aug. [illegible] would be [illegible] the way [illegible] carriage drive from the Oswego river. At this season the road beds are smooth and hardened by the frequent showers, and entirely free from dust. The harvesting of wheat, barley and oats, is in progress and the immense stacks indicate a large yield of grain. Through Cayuga county there was also fine fields of tobacco much of it looking thrifty with good stand and color. Every where the growing crops look well, and the season must prove an exceptionable good one, although the price of all cerials is felt to be low,yet when it is remembered that the purchasing power—from the extremely low price of all manufactured goods—is fully equal to that at any time during the last quarter of a century, there ought not to be much complaint. Particularly fine lands which have yielded fully thirty bushels of wheat to the acre were seen along the ridge bordering on the noted Montezuma marshes. Crossing the outlet, some three miles below the village of Cayuga, the wide extent of marsh land is thickly covered by a rank growth of flag, which was being gathered for market. We could but think if the value was in any manner commensurate with the yield it must prove a mine of wealth to the owners; as far as eye could reach is one vast sea of waving flag. The thrifty town of Seneca Falls and Waterloo were passed, each filled with large flourishing manufactories. The water power is exceptionally fine at these points so great is the fall of Seneca river and being fed by the numerous lakes with subterreanean springs, is also durable. Nowhere else in the country are made so many steam fire engines as Seneca Falls, their beauty and power of execution is seen in every city and village in the land. We reached the village of Geneva in the afternoon having passed through some of the finest farming land in the state. Nearing the town the country is almost a garden. Nowhere else has nature made so handsome surroundings. Of all the chain of lakes Seneca is the finest, with the beautiful village of Geneva nestling at its foot. A drive through the main street laying paralel with the lake shore reveals at once the fine taste and opulence of its citizens. For miles this pleasant avenue is bordered on either side by elegant houses where luxuriant shrubbery and well kept lawns bespeak the culture and affluence of the owners. Far up this street overlooking the placid lake stands the old yet stately Hobart college, the seat of learning under the charge of the Episcopal denomination. It has a wide reputation as being a center of learning, but now a new library building is fast rearing its handsome front of grey stone, and must prove a fine ornament to the Campus.

The massive pillars of the old Folger mansion were noticed, and a drive to the north end carried us past the large and beautiful residence of Hon.W. W. Wright, ex-state superintendent of canals. Geneva may well be proud of its old well preserved homes and of its new, tasty, and expensive Queen Ann residences. Its hotels are numerous and well kept, if not very grand or modern in style their capacity will be fully tested next Tuesday, when the thousands gather to witness the regatta wherein nearly a dozen of the noted professional oarsmen compete for a large purse and the mastery. Upon the table of the Mansion house, an unpretentious but well kept hotel, was noticed a number of village papers, newsy and well edited. The old Geneva Gazette has the best appointed office, publishing three different newspapers of more than two thousand circulation each. This office was formerly owned by Fred Bennett, proprietor of the Fulton Patriot.

The next day a number of the nurseries lying just outside the village limits were visited. The climate and rich soil make their productions of most excellent quality and noted the world over.

A few years ago when representatives of the state were in search of the best site whereon to establish an experimental farm, after much travel and careful enquiry Geneva was decided to offer the most favorable location. A farm of some 125 acres was selected one and one-half miles from the village and is called the N. Y. Agricultural Experiment Station. The object as is doubtless generally known to your readers is to disseminate among farmers, knowledge of more thorough tillage, better protection for farm animals, improved seeds, better drainage, artificial fertilizer, and the numberless perplexing problems closely effecting the welfare of agricultural industry. Here is determined what crops can best be raised on certain kinds of soil, when we shall best plant, cultivate, fertilize and harvest, what fertilizers are best and why, the value of all seeds and how best to choose them, all facts concerning the growing of fruits, the ravages of insects and how to destroy or avoid a recurrence; in short the best knowledke of the ten thousand things essential to practiced and scientific farming, and here all this and much more is learned, and the next great object is to disseminate it among the farmers. It repays one to visit this model farm; the faculty are each and all thorough farmers, and practical men, some of them more learned than others, but each fitted to his particular place and everyone a polite and talkative gentleman. The following is the present faculty—for want of a better word: Director, E. L. Sturtevant A.M. M. D.; Ass't., C. S. Plumb; Horticulturist, E. S. Goff; Ass't. S. D. Anderson; Botanist, J. C. Arthur; Chemist, S. M. Babcock, A. M. Ph. D.; Ass't. E. F. Ladd; Ass't. Naturalist, M. N. Bickwith; Stenographer C. E. Newton.

Board of Trustees' Proceedings.

[illegible] Aug. [illegible]

[illegible] To-day's sales will clean up the July cheese, and in a few cases includes from one to three days of August. No one professes to have any idea what the future may bring forth, although it is now hoped that we have seen the lowest prices. With July cheese out of the way, it is possible that the prejudice existing against it will not be carried over into August. It is evident from the resolutions adopted by the board to-day that the intention is to make clean full milk goods this fall, so that no complaint can arise from skimming. Factorymen say, however, that if these low prices continue through the season, it will drive milk away from the factories. Transactions to-day were as follows: 6 lots, 590 boxes, at 6¼c.; 54 lots, 4,890 boxes, at 6⅜c.; 9 lots, 1,340 boxes, at 6½c.; 17 lots, 2,134 boxes, at 6⅜c.; 4 lots, 579 boxes, at 6¼c.; 179 at 7c.; 200 at 7⅛c. Sales 11,246 boxes; commissions, 1,360; total 12,606 boxes. Ruling price, 6⅜c. Transactions one year ago, 9,735 boxes, ruling price 9¼c.; two years ago, 12,203 boxes, ruling price 9½c.

LITTLE FALLS, Aug. 24.

CHEESE.—This has been a most discouraging market for dairymen. Prices have taken another tumble when all were looking for something better. The decline is about ½c. on all grades; white cheese still holds the lead over colored stock by about ¼c. A very few salesmen were disposed to hold, and either concluded to sell very light amounts or none. But the majority let their usual amounts go forward at the best rates they could get. The market dragged till later than usual, and it was impossible to learn much about prices till the close. The transactions are:

Lots.	Boxes.	Price.
66	4,047	6 cts
37	2,229	6¼cts
6	475	6½cts
6	595	p. t.
12	1,032	Com.
127	8,308
Farm Dairy	850
Total	9,158

FARM DAIRIES.—Sales of 850 boxes farm chees were made at 4@7c, the most at 6¼c. tho' there were quite a number of lots at 6½c.

BUTTER.—About 40 packages of butter sold at 19@20½c.; most of it was creamery, which sold at 19½c.

AT FULTON.

The market was not fully represented Monday evening. About twenty-two factories offered two thousand boxes, of which about fifteen hundred were sold mostly on commission, at Utica ruling, 6⅜c.

[illegible] Dr. Van Dusen [illegible] introducing the late Graphic's funny editor, Jim Hunter. We remembered him as a fellow-passenger on a Washington excursion, the company also including Dr. Mary Walker, who at the earnest solicitation of our mutual friend, stood on a car seat and made a withering speech against the use of tobacco, and smoking in particular. Mr. Hunter when asked the cause of the early demise of the Graphic, replied that its mission was complete in the election of the distinguished statesman, Grover Cleveland, to the Presidency. His cup of joy he said, was running over, and he cared not for gold or honor. There was at no time an overflowing treasury, though the paper had a large circulation among those to whom it was sent free. Mr. Hunter was asked if he would accept an office. He had thought of it; at least the "boys" had suggested it; but he had heard not a word from the President. Republics, he argued, are ungrateful.

A Palatial Yacht.

Upon the invitation of Switz Conde a number of our citizens had the pleasure of boarding his palatial steam yacht "Ruth" which made a short stop while passing through this village last Tuesday en route for New York, where she will join several other pleasure boats and make an extended cruise along the Atlantic coast. Mr. Conde left the boat at this point but expects to join her at Albany with his family. Everything about the craft is of the most elaborate description. The cabins and state rooms are elegantly trimmed and decorated with plush, velvet, hand painted silks and satins, while in the corners, hid by French mirrors, are the lockers filled with rare and costly china, glass and silver ware. Electric bells in all parts of the boat summon the servants or the crew. Refreshments, both liquid and solid were aboard in endless variety, and in fact, everything that heart could wish, has been obtained regardless of expense.

Cold, rainy weather.

School commences Monday.

A hail storm visited us this morning.

Large numbers of hop pickers are leaving on every south bound train.

There are a number of sheds and stables being erected on the Oswego Falls fair grounds for the comfort and safety of horses and cattle.

H. B. Rorke formerly of this village, now a resident of Erie, Pa., is said to have recently received a back pension of over eleven hundred dollars.

The Fulton band will give another open air concert to-morrow evening in the park, weather permitting. The band is very grateful to the ladies for the refreshments served at their last concert, and desire us to thank the donors.

Never go where you are not wanted. If a man wants you to go to his room he will invite you to do so, and if a merchant wants you to visit his place of business he will invite you through the columns of your local paper. It is wrong to intrude upon privacy; don't do it.—[Ex.

We are glad to be able to state that the large tannery owned by D. J. Hamburger of Syracuse which was recently burned in Lower Oswego Falls, will be rebuilt at once. William Daun has been awarded the contract for building. Work was commenced yesterday morning.

The Baldwinsville correspondent to the Standard says: The Standard Opera company had hard luck here. The audiences were small and parties from Fulton came to collect pay for board which necessitated the company's leaving some baggage as security for part of board bills here. The company went to Syracuse Sunday morning.

The window of C. R. Nichols' jewelry store has been attracting considerable attention the past few days. It contains the finest arranged and most elaborate display of watches, jewelry, etc. we have ever seen in Fulton. The artistic arrangement of the goods, which adds very largely to the beauty of the window, was the work of Mr. Will Hoff, who has done himself much credit.

At twenty minutes after three this afternoon the alarm of fire was sounded. The fire proved to be a dwelling house on the cornor of Utica and Fifth streets belonging to George Patterson of Syracuse and occupied by N. Patterson. The fire department was promptly on hand but their services was not needed the fire being extinguished before they arrived.

Last Monday as Mrs. W. J. Pentelow and her sister Mrs. Osborne, accompanied by two children, were driving down the river road, their horse became frightened at a pile of stones, and shied quickly to one side turning the carriage over and throwing the occupants out, but fortunately injuring none of them seriously. The horse returned to Fulton, where it was captured. The carriage was sadly wrecked.

Mr. H. N. Gilbert and wife, of Fulton, Oswego county, were in Geneva this week. They drove from Fulton to Geneva. Mr. Gilbert is special correspondent of the Syracuse Standard. They came here to visit Geneva and the famous Watkins Glen, for the purpose of writing up interesting sketches of the glen and this section of country. From Geneva they are to visit Clifton Springs, Sodus Bay and other places of note. They will be on the road about ten days, writing up the country before they return.—[Geneva Courier.

THE N. Y. O. & W. RAILROAD.

Denials that the Road has been Gobbled Up by Vanderbilt.

New York World: While the officers of the Ontario and Western deny that Vanderbilt has obtained control of the road, it is believed on the street that he has, and that negotiations for the control of the road have been carried on for some time. The plan by which Vanderbilt is to acquire control of the Ontario and Western is said to be as follows:

Edward D. Adams, of Winslow, Lanier & Co., acting as agents for the Vanderbilt interest, has bought from individual holders a "call" on a majority of Ontario and Western preferred stock, the price being 82½, and the call expiring August 26, 1885. The stock when called is to be turned over to the Vanderbilt-Morgan syndicate.

New York Morning Journal—"No, sir, Mr. Vanderbilt aint got our road and what's more, he hasn't enough money to buy it," said General Winslow, president of the Ontario & Western Railroad Company, yesterday.

"There is no consolidation, and what's more, there won't be any, not if this court knows herself, and she thinks she does."

"But the rumors are that the Czar has about got possession of it and that the transfer is only a question of a few days."

"Ah, there you go with your rumors," said the General, smiling. "Now see here; the only imaginable way for Vanderbilt or any body else to get possession of our road is to go into the market and buy a majority of the shares."

"Well, now I tell you that they ain't for sale. We are going to remain a distinct and separate organization. As for a traffic arrangement, that's a horse of an entirely different color."

Chauncey Depew, president of the Central railroad, admitted that so far nothing had been accomplished.

Notwithstanding all of which it is stated as a positive fact on the street that Edward D. Adams, of Winslow, [illegible]

Excursion to Long Branch.

Next Sunday occurs the excursion of the Fulton Cornet Band to Long Branch. This place, located on Onondaga lake, is one of the finest pleasure resorts in Central New York. The excursion is given for the benefit of the band, to enable them to obtain new uniforms, which they are greatly in need of. Those of our citizens who have been entertained by the free open air concerts in the park for the past two weeks, have an opportunity now to help the boys in a practical way. The steamer Van Doren leaves Fulton at 8:30 sharp. Fare for the round trip only 50 cents. It is hoped that a generous encouragement will be extended to the band in their laudable efforts to procure new uniforms.

The New Stove Company.

The Howe Ventilating Stove company have commenced operations and take off their first heat to-day. Mr. Messenger is in town and is making all arrangements for carrying on an extensive business after getting fairly under way. Already large numbers of orders are pouring in from all quarters. The patterns have all arrived and are being finished up. Mr. Howe, the patentee of the new stove, said to a Times reporter this morning that he had been upon the road two weeks and had met with unexpected success in taking orders. He further stated the only thing he was afraid of was that they would not be able to meet the demand for the new stoves.

Palermo.

Palermo, Aug. 25.—Our newly appointed postmaster at this place weighs 175 pounds which is a gain since last Thursday of 45 pounds.

Mr. Oliphant of Oswego, Republican candidate for County Clerk, was in town on Friday last looking after his friends. He is quite sure that he is going to get the nomination for that office.

Sylvester Keen has just erected a monument for his father-in-law Homer Butts at the cemetery at Palermo Centre, which is a fine peace of marble and an ornament to the cemetery. If each one who was able would take pattern after Mr. Keen and would do likewise for their friends, Palermo would have a cemetery that they might feel proud of. The work was done by George Fassel of Fulton.

North Volney.

North Volney, Aug. 25.—Misses Floy and Anna Dunsmore have returned home from South Granby, where they have been spending a week with their grandparents.

Mr. Syrus Howard's picnic last week was a success. Some went with horses and some with ox teams. The day was pleasant and they had a good time. They had what was called a daubing match which consists of daubing each other with berry pie and in which Mr. Lewis Sharp and Mrs. George Taylor took the most active part.

The oats are nearly harvested except Mr. William Howard. He has a large field out.

South Hannibal.

South Hannibal, Aug. 25.—The funeral of Mr. J. Dennick's infant child was held on Sunday at the White school house, the Rev. Franklin of Lysander officiating.

A temperance camp meeting is being held on the camp ground at Hannibal Centre this week.

It was astonishing the amount of business the people of South Hannibal had ta do in Oswego last Monday, Aug. 24.

Mr. James Madison and wife of Vermont are visiting their friends here.

The Fulton correspondent to the Standard who is in a position to know, writes; "People who are inquiring after the street railway will be pleased to know that there is no doubt as to its final completion. There it merely a delay of but small importance, and when once commenced it is hoped that with an extra large force the road may be in readiness for traffic by fair time."

The largest excursion of the season passed through here this morning en route for Oswego. There were ten cars filled with people from Cortland, Homer, and other villages. Over 1500 tickets were sold. A more orderly crowd we have never seen. They were accompanied by the Cortland and Mechanic's band. An exhibition by the Life Saving crew was given this afternoon for the entertainment of the visitors.

We take the following interesting article from the Lima, (Ohio) Daily Republican:

On the 10th of August a stranger called at the Merchants' National Bank and handed the collector, [illegible], a draft drawn by the First National Bank of Fulton, N. Y., on the Mercantile National Bank of New York city and in favor of Howard Wood. The draft was left for collection, and the stranger asked the rate, at the same time saying that he was buying stock in the vicinity, but had to go to Toledo on the train which left in a few minutes. The collector told him that the cashier was at dinner and would not return until after train time, but that he could leave the draft which called for $2,500, and it would be attended to. When cashier Thrift came back he took the draft and examined it, and saw that it had the appearance of being all right, and began preparations for its collection.

The following day a letter came from Toledo, dated at the Oliver House asking what rates the Merchants' National charged for collecting. Cashier Thrift answered by return mail, and told him what they were. Before Wood received the letter he wrote again, and wanted to know what they would do about it, stating that he had written once, and if the Merchants' was not going to collect it, to let him know at once. Cashier Thrift answered that he could have the money at once if he could identity as Howard Wood. This was August 12th, and nothing more was heard until the 18th.

In the meantime the draft had been paid by the Mercantile Bank, of New York, and it began to get around towards the close of the month, when the draft would be returned to the First National Bank of Fulton, N. Y., and Howard Wood wrote a letter dated at Pinconning, Bay county, Michigan, saying that his time was occupiod and enclosed a check for $2,498.12 less the commission for collecting, and asked that the money be forwarded to the point named above. Cashier Thrift took the money to the Adams Express office, and placing it in the hands of Mr. Gordon, the agent, told him to send it to Pinconning, but with the instructions that Howard Wood must positively be identified when he received the package and that the identity must be made sure. This was about five o'clock on Tuesday evening, and the money was to have left on the train for Toledo.

It seems that agent Gordon was a little suspicious of the matter, and although against the rules of the company, he kept the package over until he could see cashier Thrift, and get a writen order for the requirement made of him. He could not find the cashier, and stored the money in a vault until the following morning, when cashier Thrift, who had likewise not slept well over the matter, came up and told him to hold the money until further orders. This was what agent Gordon wanted him to do, and steps were then taken to trace the draft and see if it was good.

Cashier Thrift telegraphed to the National Bank at Fulton, N. Y., and asked if they had issued a draft payable to the order of Howard Wood, for $2,500, August 4th. He also telegraphed to the Chemical National Bank at New York and asked if the draft on Mercantile National Bank drawn in their favor for $2,500, August 10th, was paid, and he received an answer that it was. The First National Bank at Fulton, N. Y., telegraphed back that no draft had been drawn on them for $2,500, as indicated in Thrift's dispatch. Cashier Thrift telegraphed back the number and asked if it had been issued July 14th, but was answered that it had not, but that the number had been issued August 4th for $5, in favor of Ezra Taylor. The telegram closed with the following: "Hold money by all means."

The whole case was up then. The draft had been raised July 14th, $5, to August 4th, $2,500, and was a base swindle. After some consultation, cashier Thrift wrote a letter to Howard Wood telling him that his money would be sent to him at once. A decoy package was put up and started yesterday morning, accompanied by John Franks who will make the arrest if Wood calls for the package.

The plan is a deep laid one, and there is no telling how many banks have suffered from Wood's rascality. He evidently knew the cashier was out when he left the draft for collection. He knew Pinconning was not an express station but a lonely little place on the lake, where the packages are entrusted to a messenger and, if it was necessary, where in a few minutes he could take a boat and reach Canada.

The forgery shows that Wood was a slick fellow, and the banks here would give a nice little Christmas gift to see the draft. The signature of the cashier is perfect, of course, but the amount and date have been erased and changed, and it must be a pretty good "raise" for the Mercantile National Bank to pay the amount called for.

At a late hour no word had been received from Franks, and it is not known whether Wood has been arrested or not. He had worked his plans well, but the delay may cause him to "smell a mouse," and the package may never be called for; if it is not, the case will then be put in the hands of detectives.

Rheumatism

It is an established fact that Hood's Sarsaparilla has proven an invaluable remedy in many severe cases of rheumatism, effecting remarkable cures by its powerful action in correcting the acidity of the blood, which is the cause of the disease, and purifying and enriching the vital fluid.

It is certainly fair to assume that what Hood's Sarsaparilla has done for others it will do for you. Therefore, if you suffer the pains and aches of rheumatism, give this potent remedy a fair trial.

A Positive Cure.

"I was troubled very much with rheumatism in my hips, ankles, and wrists. I could hardly walk, and was confined to my bed a good deal of the time. Being recommended to try Hood's Sarsaparilla, I took four bottles and am perfectly well. I cheerfully recommend Hood's Sarsaparilla as one of the best blood purifiers in the world." W. F. Wood, Bloomington, Ill.

For Twenty Years

I have been afflicted with rheumatism. Before 1883 I found no relief, but grew worse. I then began taking Hood's Sarsaparilla, and it did me more good than all the other medicine I ever had." H. T. Balcom, Shirley, Mass.

"I suffered from what the doctors called muscular rheumatism. I took Hood's Sarsaparilla and am entirely cured." J. V. A. Proudfoot, letter carrier, Chicago, Ill.

Hogs differ as much as other animals do in their ability to take on flesh and fat. Thrifty young hogs of the improved breeds will [illegible] much faster on the same kind of food than old and unthrifty animals that do not belong to any of the recognized breeds. The time in which the corn is fed will exert a great influence on the amount of pork it will make.

Hogs kept in uncomfortable quarters may eat a large amount of corn and increase in weight very little. The hog will show the money value of comfort better than most any animal kept on the farm. Again, the feeding of corn differs very greatly. Many farmers sell their best corn and keep that which is not merchantable to feed to their hogs. This soft corn does not contain the fattening qualities of that which is sound and dry. The condition of the corn when fed will exert a great influence on the amount of pork produced. To obtain the best possible results, the corn should not only be ground, but thoroughly cooked. Whether it will pay to grind and cook food for hogs, will depend on several circumstances, such as the price of fuel, the cost of grinding, and the expense of labor.

That many farmers do succeed in making 100 lbs. of pork from 500 lbs. of cooked corn meal, appears to be well established by undoubted testimony.

That many western farmers do not obtain a pound of pork from every ten pounds of corn they feed their hogs, or allow their hogs to eat in the field, is probably equally certain. As a rule, seven pounds of corn are required to produce a pound of pork.

FACTS FOR FARMERS.

Whitewash the hen's nest inside and out, adding a little carbolic acid to the wash.

The young cattle will be benefited by a change of pasture occasionally, even if it is only changing fields with other cattle.

Asparagus, if give annual manuring, with careful and clean culture, will last for twenty-five years, and pays a handsome profit.

Beets, as a feed for cows giving milk, have the advantage over other roots that they do not taint the milk, but impart richness and quality.

The hay crop in the west bids fair to be above the average this season. In some of the Atlantic coast states the drought has seriously shortened the growth of the crop.

After trying different methods for growing cheap food for swine, a prominent breeder concludes that sweet corn and peas are best for summer use, and corn bran and roots most suitable for the winter.

A perfect remedy for the striped bug which does so much damage to cucumber, squash and melon vines, is said to be sulphur, which is used by mixing one part sulphur with six parts of pure, sifted coal ashes, and dusting the mixture upon the vines.

A Michigan farmer tells how he managed to conquer Canadian thistles by the help of 200 sheep. He puts a small handfull of salt on each thistle at the root. The sheep eat the thistle down close to the ground. The salting is repeated as often as necessary, and the thistle seldom appears the second year.

A correspondent of the Michigan Farmer believes that he has prevented his dwarf pears from blighting by painting them thoroughly with linseed oil and red lead, filling up every crack and giving two coats. One tree so coated has remained healthy, and is every year loaded with fruit, while all the rest in the neighborhood are blighted.

About Milking Cows.

It is a very bad plan to change milkers often. When you get good ones, keep them if you possibly can, even though you have to do some watching. Some milkers will dry up a cow in a very short time. Some one has written, "Milkers are born, not made." There is some truth in this. Some milkers will always get more milk from a cow from day to day, and from month to month, than others. They seem to have a natural [illegible] for the business; while some parties can never, even with the most extended experience, learn the art satisfactorily. [illegible] milker is always the best. Slow milkers are an abomination and should not be tolerated. However, we have [illegible] that were very slow at almost any other work that were expert milkers.

The same person should always if possible milk the same cows. The cows become accustomed to the same person, and will not readily give down their milk to new hands for several days. [illegible] good cows, feed high, and employ the best milkers that can be had.—[illegible] Live Stock Journal.

[illegible] Mode of Preserving Milk.

[illegible]

[illegible] is the [illegible] about. Well, it is a matter of taste. But travelers from Europe have the greatest difficulty in becoming accustomed to our strong, old, briney butter. They cannot eat it at first any more than the American can endure the pretty, tiny pellets of fresh butter that meet him at every hotel in Europe. But again, so accomodating is human nature, that once forced to accustom himself to the unsalted article in Europe, he, too, finds the American butter briney and flavorless.

The truth is that the most delicious butter is that which is left unsalted. For market, of course, it will not keep many days in the fresh state, but even then twice as much salt as is neccessary is often put into it. The salt makes it acrid, and destroys wholly the exquisite cream and grass flavor. For use in æsthetic homes, sets of tiny separate moulds, in the shape of a strawberry or something else pretty, should be had. Take the butter unsalted, work the milk out, mould it in rich-colored little gems in these, and put it upon the table in that shape. It is as attractive to the eyes as flowers or fruit, and the taste of of it upon warm biscuit or snowflake lightbread—well, try it, that is all.—[Canadian Breeder.

The Medical Use of Eggs.

For burns and scalds there is nothing more soothing than the white of an egg, which may be poured over the wound. It is softer as a varnish for a burn than collodion, and being always on hand can be applied immediately. It is also more cooling than the "sweet oil and cotton," which was formerly supposed to be the surest application to allay the smarting pain. It is the contact with the air which gives the extreme discomfort experienced from ordinary accidents of this kind; and anything which excludes air and prevents inflammation is the best thing to be applied. The egg is also considered one of the very best remedies for dysentery. Beaten up lightly, with or without sugar, and swallowed at one gulp, it tends by its emolient qualities to lessen the inflammation of the stomach and intestines and forming a transient coating for these organs to enable nature to assume her healthful sway over the diseased body. Two, or, at the most, three eggs per day would be all that would be required in ordinary cases; and since the egg is not merely a medicine, but food as well, the lighter the diet otherwise, and the quieter the patient is kept, the more certain and rapid is their recovery.

THE BEST FOR BUTTER.

There is but one pest color for butter, and that is Wells Richardson & Co's. Improved Butter Color, no candid investigator doubts. It is the best butter color in the world; is free from sediment or impurity, always ready for instant use, and it imparts to butter that rich dandelion yellow, without a tinge of red, which is the acme of desirability in any butter color.

Things Worth Knowing.

Oil of lavender will drive away flies.

Copperas mixed with the whitewash put upon the cellar walls will keep vermin away.

Ceilings that have been smoked by a kerosene lamp should be washed off with soda water.

Drain pipes and all places that are sour or impure may be cleansed with lime water or carbolic acid.

Strong brine may be used to advantage in washing bedsteads. Hot alum water is also good for this purpose.

Cayenne pepper blown into the cracks where ants congregate will drive them away. The same remedy is also good for mice.

If gilt frames, when new, are covered with a coat of white varnish, all specks can then be washed off with water without harm.

If a bedstead creaks at each movement of the sleeper, remove the slats and wrap the end of each in old newspaper. This will prove a complete silencer.

If the wall about the stove has been smoked by the stove, cover the black patches with gum shellac, and they will not strike through either paint or calcimine.—[Phil. Press.

He Talked Out Loud.

"Mamma," inquired Tommy Tuff of his mother, last Sunday, after service, "is it very bad to talk out loud in church?"

"Of course it is, Tommy," she answered severely, "have you been guilty of such misconduct?"

"Yesum, I reckon I was, to-day."

"Well, you bad boy if I'd known you didn't know how to behave yourself, I should have gone with you to watch you. What have you been doing?"

"Why, you see the preacher was telling the children if they didn't do better, the earth would open and swallow them up, like it did to the wicked people in the Bible, and he said he could even at that time see the mountains splitting open and the valleys lickin' out their tongues."

Tommy stopped at this point, as if uncertain about further progress.

"Well," said his mother, anxiously, "did you say anything?"

"Yesum."

"What?"

"'Rats! An' I said it so loud they fired me right out."—[Merchant Traveler.

A Simple Cure for Insomnia.

A simple cure of sleeplessness has been advised by a Parisian physician for an American traveling through Europe who suffered from wakeful nights. The remedy was complete cessation of mental exertion in the evening, and the formation of a habit of retiring at the same time each evening. No letter writing, no reading of [illegible] books was allowed, and the mind was placed [illegible] a state of [illegible]. The American, who had been a victim of sleeplessness for years, returned home cured.

THE PROPER THING.

Shoulder capes are made larger.

Narrow bracelets of rolled gold are most fashionable.

Sleeveless velvet jackets are worn over striped lace corsages.

Buff lawn trimmed with white embroidery makes a dainty gown.

Hats are multiform, but turbans and walking hats predominate.

Cashmere in delicate shades is made into pretty house sacques.

Jackets are in great favor, and are in various shapes and styles.

The gold engagement bracelet is becoming as popular as the engagement ring.

Sweet-pea blossoms are the favorite flower for the corsage. Clover is also worn.

Alpaca is in great favor for traveling dresses. Blue and faun are the most popular colors.

Long flowing sashes are more fashionable than ever. Many of these are richly embroidered.

White and pale pink velvet corsages with white lace skirts are elegant toilets for watering places.

Light woolen and canvas dresses are most popular toilets for midsummer at the seaside resorts.

Sashes painted in water colors and signed by well-known artists are the extravagance of the summer with fashionable Parisiennes.

Fancy brooches may be worn at the waist or throat, as an ornament for the hair, or as a finish to the velvet necklet around the throat.

A superb fabric is woven to imitate precious stones, the design being wrought with threads of pure metal which glitter in colors to resemble the gem they are designed to imitate.

Lace boas, made from insertion gathered into plaits about the throat with the plain ends fastened at the belt and drooping on the skirt are very pretty, and anybody can make one for herself.

A new traveling wrap for cool days in autumn is a long coat of blue or brown, covering the wearer from throat to foot. It has a plastron and collar of light fawn and is trimmed with frogs of metal braid.

A word to the economical: If you have any half-worn silks by you, take a good look at them, and see if, by the admixture of canvas draperies, you can not transform them into new garments, or the semblance of new.

A very pretty and novel dress for a child is made of blue and white zephyr cloth. Down the front and perpendicularly at intervals on the skirt are very wide button holes. Through these button holes are run strips of blue. These strips are separated by wide box plaits or clusters of narrow kilt plaits. The cuffs are trimmed in the same manner. White linen frocks may be made in the same way and run with any color. Black strips are used for mourning.

[illegible] IMPROVED BUTTER COLOR

A NEW DISCOVERY.

☞ For several years we have furnished the Dairymen of America with an excellent artificial color for butter; so meritorious that it met with great success everywhere receiving the highest and only prizes at both International Dairy Fairs.

☞ But by patient and scientific chemical research we have improved in several points, and now offer this new color as the best in the world.

It Will Not Color the Buttermilk. It Will Not Turn Rancid. It is the Strongest, Brightest and Cheapest Color Made,

☞ And, while prepared in oil, is so compounded that it is impossible for it to become rancid.

☞ BEWARE of all imitations, and of all other oil colors, for they are liable to become rancid and spoil the butter.

☞ If you cannot get the "improved" write us to know where and how to get it without extra expense. (46)

Money Matters.

'Tis not a joke
To be dead broke.

Nor is it sport
When you are short.

Life's joy is snapped
If you are strapped.

You're disgusted
When you're busted.

Fun is barred up
When you're hard up.

There's no delight
When coin is tight.

But you can win
If you have tin.

And buy up stocks
If you've got the rocks.

And get much trust
If you've the dust.

And play at euchre
With filthy lucre.

And cut up tricks
With spondulix.

And never mope
With lots of soap.

And live quite fine, O,
If you've the rhino.

And feed the tramps
If you've got the stamps.

And gaily rush
When you are flush.

THE OLD BROWN CLOAK.

"I don't know as I've got anything to give," said Farmer Foxglove, looking dubiously around the kitchen. "Philena she don't believe in givin' much, unless it's through the 'Church Benevolent Guild,' and Seraphina isn't at home."

The widow Waterman gave a little sniff of mingled deprecation and humility.

"Times is very bad with me, Mr. Foxglove," said she. "I hain't had work since August, and there ain't nothin' to eat in the house."

"You don't tell me!" said the farmer, who was the softest-hearted of men. "Here give me your basket. Philena'll say I'm an old fool, but I don't care."

"There's them as has entertained angels unawares," whined the widow Waterman as she sidled into the room and held out her talon-like fingers to the fire of good pine logs which were crackling and sputtering on the hearth.

Anything less akin to the angelic tribe than Mrs. Waterman could scarcely be imagined as she sat there, bedraggled gown, bonnet bent in a one-sided fashion over her eyes and a gauzy rag of a shawl pulled across her gaunt shoulders.

But Mr. Foxglove, honest man, saw only her poverty and destitution.

With a trepidation not unlike the sensation of a school-boy who robs an orchard for the first time, he went into the buttery and helped himself to half a cold roast fowl, a loaf of rye-bread, a goodly wedge of yellow butter out of a covered stone jar, and three-quarters of a juicy apple-pie.

"It'll keep her for twenty-four hours, at least," he thought.

And then he opened Mrs. Foxglove's especial tin tea-caddy and filched a handful of the fragrant dried leaves, which he wrapped up in brown paper and put beside the other viands.

"I dunno what Philena will say," he thought; "but, there, I ain't stun nor yet of cast iron and steel fil'n's; and I can't stand by and see a fellow-creature starve, no matter how shiftless and good-for-nothin' she is.

And, chancing to notice how thin and inadequate the poor old woman's shawl was, he recklessly took down an old bombazine cloak, originally a bright brown, but now faded in as many streaks as a zebra's hide, which had hung from time immemorial in the back entry.

"There ain't no more use in that old dud," he thought, "and it'll keep the cold out. And if Philena makes a fuss, I'll give her a new blanket shawl!"

Mrs. Waterman went off rejoicing.

And when the first glow of satisfaction had faded out of Farmer Foxglove's soul, a dreadful fear took possession of him.

"What will Philena think?" said he, "I guess upon the whole that I won't say nothin' about it."

Presently Mrs. Foxglove and Serephina came home from the weekly meeting of the Society for the Helpers of the Heathen in jubilant spirits.

"George Patterson was there," said Mrs. Foxglove. "He said he came after his aunt, but it was my belief he wanted to walk home with Seraphina. Just as if our gal was goin' to keep company with a feller like that, as hasn't got a penny in the world and works at the saw-mill for a dollar a day! Not if I know it!"

"Certainly not," said the farmer in a conciliatory tone.

But Seraphina only hung her head and said nothing.

"La me!" said Mrs. Foxglove from the kitchen. "What has come of things? Here's the old chicken and the apple-pie gone! And cover off the butter-jar, too!"

"Y—yes," said the farmer, coughing, "I—I got sort o' hungry, so I thought I'd just take a snack."

"Couldn't you have waited till supper-time?" said Mrs. Foxglove, severely.

Her husband was silent. Was it not just possible, he thought, that the recording angel might balance that ready falsehood against his recent act of charity, so that his soul should be none the worse for the compound transaction? It was so hard always to tell what was [illegible]

[illegible]

"With your rheumatism? No, indeed" said Seraphina. "What can have become of the cloak? I'm sure I left it here this morning."

"If I had a pair of eyes, I'd use them," said Mrs. Foxglove, coming to the rescue and viewing the row of empty pegs with an eagle glance. "Well, I declare! Nehemiah," turning to her husband, "that comes of leaving you too keep house. You must have gone off and left the door open, and some tramp has got in and robbed us."

"I did just step out to the wood-pile for some more logs," said the farmer, thankful for the avenue of escape that was opened to him; "but I wasn't gone long."

"That's it," said Mrs. Foxglove, with a tone of conviction; "that's it! I do wonder at you, Nehemiah! Any four-year-old child would have known better. I shall count all my silver spoons at once."

The farmer wriggled uneasily in his cushioned rocking-chair.

"I wish old Mrs. Waterman had been in Jericho before she came here!" he said to himself; "I wish Philena would stay at home and look after things herself. It will be the last time I ever get caught in this trap!"

Meanwhile pretty Seraphina, singing softly to herself, folded an old striped shawl around her taper shoulders and went out to the pastures after the truant company of cows.

Old Tulip's bell was jangling among the silver-stemmed birches on the bleak hill. They were already on the homeward path, but Seraphina loitered unnecessarily on the bars and paused a minute at the foot bridge that spanned a brawling brook.

All was still and dusk; a certain frosty sweetness was in the autumn air, and the only visible person was a woman farther down the brook, who was dipping out water.

Suddenly there was another step—strong, swift and full purpose—grinding down the brittle branches and dead leaves in its progress.

Serephina's eyes brightened; a vivid color rose into her cheeks.

"There he comes now," she murmured. "There comes George."

To her surprise and dismay, however, the cavalier did not come up the hill, but stayed his steps beside the other woman below.

"He is throwing his arms around her neck," thought indignant Seraphina. "He is—yes, he is actually kissing her! Are men absolutely without truth and faithfulness in this age of the world? But I don't care. Why should I care? I'm sure it don't matter to me."

No more meditation or pausing for the cows. Serephina hurried them home and finished the milking in less time than it had ever taken her before.

She was just carrying in the foaming pail when a tall figure approached.

"Seraphina!"

"Pray, don't trouble yourself to speak to me, sir," said Seraphina, with a toss of the head. "Or, if you do, please call me 'Miss Foxglove!' "

And Seraphina vanished through the kitchen door.

"What's the matter, Phiny?" said her mother, noticing the girl's quick movements and heightened color.

"Nothing, ma," said Seraphina.

It was getting towards nine o'clock and Mr. Foxglove had already indulged in one or two surrepitious naps as his wife read the newspaper aloud in monotonous accents, and Seraphina darned stockings, when there came a knock at the door.

Mrs. Foxglove opened it. There stood the Widow Waterman with her limp bonnet and inevitable sniff.

"I hope I'm not intruding," said Mrs. Waterman, "but here's the brown bombazine cloak, Mr. Foxglove, and, humbly thanking you all the same, I'd rather not wear it."

"Eh?" said Mr. Foxglove in amazement.

"It was very kind of you to give it to me," went on Mrs. Waterman to the utter and total discomfiture of the poor farmer, "but there's some things as human flesh and blood can't bear, and to have Deacon Pullaby's son asking if he could not see me home when I came out of the store, and Mr. Ferdinand Pluff saying was I to be at the dance at Melinda Edwards' on Tuesday night, and might he call for me at eight o'clock—well, it's rather upsetting. But the worst of it all was when I went to get a little water at the brook—for my hogshead dropped all to pieces that last hot weather we had in September—and, as true as you live, a young fellow seized hold of me and was going to kiss me if I hadn't up and give him a box on the ear. And I believe it's the brown cloak as done it all," whith a meaning glance at Seraphina Foxglove. "So if you please to take it back I'll try and get along with my old shawl a spell longer. And the roast chicken was very good, sir," with a curtsy in the direction of the luckless farmer, "and that apple-pie couldn't be beat."

There was a moment's dreadful silence and then Mrs. Waterman, seeing no probability of being invited to sit down, sidled out of the room and betook herself once more to the mysterious silence of the night.

"Well, I declare!" said Mrs. Foxglove.

"Ma, don't scold pa!" said Seraphina, halfway between laughing and crying.

The farmer feebly rubbed his hands.

"I think I'll go to bed," said he.

And he went; while Seraphina, running out to the well for a pitcher of water, the last thing before shutting the house for the night, had nearly encountered young George Patterson.

"Seraphina! and what are you doing [illegible]

[illegible] that you can't blame me for being jealous when I see you hugging and kissing the Widow Waterman!"

"It was the cloak, Seraphina—the brown cloak—that misled me," pleaded George. "I thought, of course, that it was you."

"Oh, it's all very well to talk!" said Seraphina.

And she began to wind up the well-chain with great energy.

And Mrs. Foxglove thought that Seraphina had never before been so long in bringing a pitcher of water.

To George Patterson, however, the moments seemed winged, but, nevertheless, he went home rejoicing.

Seraphina had forgiven him.

There was a happy wedding at Farmer Foxglove's the following spring, and a large basketful of delicacies found their way to Widow Waterman, but the donor was the bride.

Farmer Foxglove has never since indulged in charity without consulting Philena.

THE PROPER THING.

Polonaises are to be revived the coming season.

Ladies of taste do not exaggerate the size of the tournure.

Black and seal brown are to be the colors for velvet cloaks.

Neck ruchings are in greater favor than any other style of throat dress.

Scotch tweeds in light weights are brought out for autumn wear.

The tendency is toward straight back draperies in all woolen costumes.

Tulle with velvet in dark colors, forms combinations for autumn dress hats.

Both single and double breasted basques will be worn during the fall and winter.

The sleeves of new costumes are longer, and more trimming in seen upon them.

Felt, velvet and tinsel embroideries are the leading features of the earliest autumn millinery.

Serviceable and pretty dresses are made of the French cheviot in pinhead checks of any color.

Velvet belts beginning at the side seams are fastened in front by buckles of hammered silver.

A new Jersey cloak is as coarsely ribbed as the cardigan jacket, and requires no cloth jacket.

Woolen stuffs woven in stripes, palms and other figures will be made into dresses for autumn wear.

Crepe imperial is a new woolen fabric for mourning, closely resembling crape, but far more durable.

Plomb, or lead color, dark green, marine blue and russet brown, are the leading colors for early autumn dresses.

The novelty in ribbons is the revival of picot edges or tiny scallops formed of graduated loops of the silk or ribbon, or else of tinsel threads.

Another Great Exposition.

Visitors at the great World's Exposition during its closing days could not realize that it was so soon to end and be but a memory. It was an exhibition of such great magnitude, of such unparalled granduer, so representative of the world's richness and progress, so indicative of continued great commercial and industrial possibilities, gathered together after so many months of incessant labor and at such great expense, and finally having reached completeness and perfection; and having through unfortunate and unavoidable circumstances been attended by so comparatively a small proportion of the people of this country, it seemed a sacrilege that it should now cease and pass from existence.

Prominent citizens of New Orleans and of the Mississippi Valley feeling that its destiny had not been accomplished, that the great work it had inaugurated was not sufficiently advanced, determined that the great exposition should again be opened.

A new organization, for the formation of which steps were taken long before the closing of the World's Exposition, under the name of the North, Central and South American Exposition, has purchased the buildings and property of the World's Exposition, and will open November 10 and continue open until April 1, 1886.

A large number of the finest exhibits, not only of private exhibitors, but State, Territorial and inter-National exhibits, like those of Mexico, were suffered to remain in anticipation of a re-opening. Already since the announcement hundreds of applications for space from old and new exhibitors have been received and it is said that the complete filling with exhibits of seventy-two acres of space covered by the buildings is certain.

Capt. Samuel H. Buck, who so satisfactorily filled the position of Director-General after Major Burke's retirement, is the new Director-General, and Col. John W. Glenn, late U. S. Supervising Architect, is the new Chief of Installation.

Railway Etiquette.

Many people have traveled all their lives, and yet do not know how to behave themselves when on the road. For the benefit and guidance of such, these few crisp, plain, horse-sense rules of etiquette have been framed.

In traveling by rail on foot, turn to the right on discovering an approaching train. If you wish the train to turn out, give two loud toots and get in between the rails, so that you will not muss up the right of way. Many a nice, new right of way has been ruined by getting a pedestrian tourist spattered all over its first mortgage.

On retiring at night on board the train, do not leave your teeth in the ice-water tank. If every one should so, it would occasion great confusion in case of wreck. It would also cause much annoyance and delay during the resurrection. Experienced tourists tie a string to their teeth and retain them during the night.

If you have been reared in extreme poverty, and your mother supported you until you grew up and married, so that your wife could support you, you will probably sit in four s s at the same time, with your feet extended into the aisles so that you can wipe them off on other people, while you snore with your mouth open clear to your shoulder-blades.

If you are prone to drop to sleep and breathe with a low, death rattle, like the exhaust of a bath tub, it would be a good plan to tie up your head in a feather bed, and then insert the whole thing in the linen-closet, or if you cannot secure that, you might stick it out of the window, and get it knocked off against a tunnel. The stockholders of the road might get mad about it, but you could do it in such a way that they wouldn't know whose head it was.

Ladies and gentlemen should guard against traveling by rail while in a beastly state of intoxication.

In the dining-car, while eating, do not comb your moustache with your fork. By all means do not comb your moustache with the fork of another. It is better to refrain altogether from combing the moustache with a fork while traveling, for the motion of the car might jab the fork in your eye and irritate it.

If your dessert is very hot and you do not discover it until you have burned the rafters out of the roof of your mouth, do not utter a wild yell of agony and spill your coffee all over a total stranger, but control yourself, hoping to know more next time.

In the morning is a good time to find out how many people have succeeded in getting on the passenger train who ought to be in the stock car.

Generally, you will find one male and one female. The male goes into the wash room, bathes his worthless carcass from daylight until breakfast time, walking on the feet of any man who tries to wash his face during that time. He wipes himself on nine different towels, because when he gets home he knows he will have to wipe his face on an old door mat. People who have been reared on hay all their lives, generally want to fill themselves full of pie and colic when they travel.

The female of this same mammal goes into the ladies' department and remains there till starvation drives her out. Then the real ladies have about 13 seconds apiece in which to dress.

If you never rode in a varnished car before and never expect to again, you will probably roam up and down the car, meandering over the feet of the porter while he is making up the berths. This is a good way to let people know just how little sense you had left after your brain began to sotten.

In traveling, do not take along a lot of old clothes that you know you will never wear.

Never walk through a car staring everybody out of countenenance, like a Jim Crow detective hunting for the James boys, but mind your own business, be quiet, polite and patient, and then you will feel as though you were among friends all the time, and you will leave the train with a pang of genuine regret. —[Bill Nye.

A Tax on Bachelors.

A bill has been introduced in the Georgia Legislature providing that, from and after the passage of the act, all male inhabitants of that State who have arrived at the age of 30 years and who have never married shall be taxed $2.50 per annum for the enjoyment of this unmarried state, and each year so long as they shall enjoy the enviable position in life of single blessedness. The measure further provides that any bachelor who marries shall at once be exempt from the tax, while, to quote the language of the bill, "the good ladies of our good and grand old Commonwealth are hereby earnestly requested to join the reformers and moralists of the country in order to correct this most monstrous and ruinous evil which now stalks abroad in our Sunny South and would be virtuous land."

ITS DELICACY OF FLAVOR

And the efficacy of its action have rendered the famous liquid fruit remedy Syrup of Figs immensely popular. It cleanses and tones up the clogged and feverish system, and dispels Headaches, Colds and Fevers. Sample bottles free and large bottles for sale by H. C. Giesler. 17m3

English manufacturers now turn out 20,000 incandescent lamps per week.

The Boy on the Chain-Gang.

They were working right in front of the hotel at a little hamlet in Alabama—the chain-gang. There were nine villainous-looking men, each wearing shackles and having no shame as they looked into the faces of the strangers on the veranda. A chain-gang is an every-day sight in the South, and few people waste sympathy upon the justly-punished wretches, but all of a sudden something happened in this gang never to be forgotten. A boy not yet 14 years old came up with a pail of water, and we saw that he belonged to the chain-gang. Larceny had sent him to associate with those villains for three long years. He looked pale and broken down, and his shame compelled him to avert his face as he came up. It was a sad sight to see a tot of a boy like him brought out and degraded and disgraced, and he felt the situation so keenly that at the first kind word from the platform the tears welled up and blinded his eyes.

There was a woman there from Indiana who walked straight down to the boy and put her hand on his head and shed tears with him. There must have been something in his look to remind her of some one—perhaps a son at home or one under the sod. Her heart was full of sorrow and sympathy and her words broke the lad down. This lasted four or five minutes, to the great astonishment and annoyance of the armed guard in charge. The lightning-express coming down the road had just whistled, and the iron rails quivering under the approaching thunder, when the guard called out: "Come, you young thief, get back after more water!"

The woman started back at the words, dragging the child with her, but in an instant he broke away, wheeled and clasped her hand and kissed it, and then —what! Not a hand could have been lifted to prevent. The express was thundering up at forty miles an hour, not intending to make a stop here, and the lad turned from the woman whose kind words had opened the well-springs of his heart, and at the same time horrified him at his situation, and with one spring he alighted in front of the locomotive. Next instant his crushed and mangled body was flung into the road-side ditch, and he had served his sentence. We picked him up tenderly, and the women wept over him as they washed the pale face and folded the boy-hands over the crushed and broken breast, but the lad was beyond the need of earthly friends.

A Popular Water Test.

To test the purity of water there has been found no better or simpler way than to fill a half-pint flask one-eighth full of water to be tested; dissolve in the water four tablespoonfuls of the purest sugar (loaf or granulated will do), shake well, then squeeze in the juice of half a lemon and shake again. Then fill the remaining seven-eighths of the bottle with Old Crow or Mount Zion Bourbon, or sourmash will do very well; shake again, then insert a cork and slip the compound, bottle and all, in your pocket, and go fishing. If you don't want to fish, drink off all but the water and throw the bottle at a mud-turtle.—[Beatrice Democrat.

"How's Your Liver?"

In the comic opera of "The Mikado," his imperial highness says:

"To make to some extent,
Each evil Liver
A running river
Of harmless merriment."

A nobler task than making evil livers, rivers of harmless merriment no person, king or layman, could take upon himself. The liver among the ancients was considered the source of all a man's evil impulses, and the chances are ten to one to-day that if one's liver is in an ugly condition of discontent, someone's head will be mashed before night!

"How's your liver?" is equivalent to the inquiry: are you a bear or an angel to-day?

Nine-tenths of the "pure-cussedness," the actions for divorce, the curtain lectures, the family rows, not to speak of murders, crimes and other calamities are prompted by the irritating effect of the inactivity of the liver upon the brain. Fothergill, the great specialist, says this and he knows. He also knows that to prevent scuh catastrophies nothing equals Warner's safe cure renowned throughout the world, as a maker of Exercise For Girls.

There is no fear but that American young women will always be beautiful enough. What they most need now is increased bodily vigor. In this respect there has been a notable improvement within the last fifteen or twenty years. The girls of the present day take more exercise and endure it better than the girls of the previous generation did. But there are still those who would hate to confess that they turn the scales at 140 lbs., and many more who persist in compressing their waists to an extraordinary degree, under the mistaken impression that to be admired a woman must weigh little and wear a belt. Such girls may be angels in somebody's eyes, but not in those of sensible men.—[New York Ledger.

Three Peculiarities

Hood's Sarsaparilla, the great blood purifier and regulating medicine, is characterized by three peculiarities, namely:

1st: The combination of the various remedial agents used.

2d: The proportion in which the roots, herbs, barks, etc., are mixed.

3d: The process by which the active medicinal properties are secured.

The result is a medicine of unusual strength and curative power, which effects cures heretofore unequalled. These peculiarities belong exclusively to Hood's Sarsaparilla, and are

JOHN A. McKAY - - EDITOR

THE PROSPECTS IN OHIO.

The Democrats of Ohio have renominated Governor Hoadly, and Warwick has received the renomination for Lieutenant-Governor. The election will occur in about six weeks and will be watched throughout the canvass with unusual interest. Judge Foraker is again the Republican nominee. The Utica Observer in summing up the prospects, says: "In off years, the voters of Ohio are swayed more powerfully than those of any other State, excepting perhaps California, by issues of a local character. The liquor traffic and the wool industry have obtruded themselves on the attention of the people to the exclusion of abstract questions of party administration. For this reason it is absurd to maintain, as some newspapers do, that the outcome of the Ohio election will disadvantageously affect the standing of the Administration, should the Republicans carry the State.

To learn how mercurial are the politics of Ohio in consequence of the intrusion of local issues, we have only to glance over the figures of the last three elections. In 1882 Newman received for Secretary of State 316,874 votes to his opponent's 297,759, a plurality of 19,115. One year later Hoadley received 359,793 votes to Foraker's 347,164, a plurality of 12,629. But last fall Blaine swept the State by a plurality of 31,802, receiving a total of 400,082, to Cleveland's 368,280. On this showing, it is useless to deny that Ohio is a radically Republican State. We would be, therefore, inclined to concede it in advance to the Republicans this fall, were it not for one conspicuous element of uncertainty that enters into the problem, and that is the liquor issue.

In 1882 the Prohibitionists cast 12,202; in 1883, 8,362; and in 1884, 11,069. Last fall many Prohibitionists supported Blaine instead of St. John, because they believed that it was for the State and not the National Government to correct the evils they are fighting. It may safely be predicted, then, that the Prohibition vote of 1884 will be largely increased in October, as the leaders of that party are working more determinedly than ever. On the other hand, Blaine received the solid vote of the German Republicans, a large number of whom may be trusted to vote for Hoadly, on account of his out spoken attitude against prohibition. Thus the phase of the campaign of 1883 are, in a measure, reproduced, and a fighting chance exists of Hoadly's reelection over his old competitor.

We would not advise Democrats to hang any bright hopes on the Ohio canvass. The prospects, notwithstanding the reservations we have made, are against us. If we anticipate defeat, victory will be all the more welcome.'

WOMEN AS VOTERS.

Reports from many parts of this state show that not a few women are exercising their rights to vote at school elections, and it is also predicted that they will take part more or less in the Fall elections. We can see no harm in women voting at school elections, for in so doing they can help advance and improve educational matters which in part is relative to the best interests of their children, and is therefore a part of their duty. But when it comes to their voting and dabbling in local and general politics, we say, if men have power to suppress it let them by all means exercise that power. A woman is out of place at the polls. We believe that it would have a demoralizing effect upon their sex, to say nothing of the strife and quarrel it would breed in the household. A modest, affectionate and loving wife or mother has no desire to thrust her way to the ballot box through crowds of boisterous men.

The Democrats of Pennsylvania have nominated Conrad B. Day for Governor.

Governor Hill seems to be growing in strength each day as the Democratic candidate for Governor.

The small-pox epidemic in Montreal is rapidly abating. Every precaution is being taken to confine the contagion to Montreal limits.

The Republican state committee paid no attention to Senator Warner Miller's State scheme for electing delegates to state conventions. Mr. Miller must have been greatly disappointed, for it was his last chance to gain political prominence.

Judge Andrews, through the columns of the Syracuse Journal has emphatically declined to accept the Republican nomination for Governor. This is a great clearing in the pathway of Senator McCarthy, whose ambition it is to receive the nomination for Lieutenant Governor.

President Cleveland has at last been discovered by newspaper men in the solitude of the woods. He spends most of his time in fishing. His vacation will last about a fortnight longer.

The first edition of the "Personal Memoirs of U. S. Grant" is 150,000 copies. The publishers say they may add 50,000 to it. A second edition is already made necessary by the subscriptions received and the presses will be set to work upon it as soon as they have struck off the last page of the second volume of the first edition.

The Scientific American says that the use of beer is found to produce a species of degeneration of all the organs; profound and deceptive fatty deposits, diminished circulation, conditions of congestion and perversion of functional activities, local inflammation of both the liver and the kidneys are constantly present. A slight injury, a severe cold, or a shock to the body or mind, will commonly provoke acute disease ending fatally in a beer drinker.

Edward Hanlon has issued a challenge to Charles E. Courtney to row three miles, with a turn, for not less than $1,000 a side. Also to row Conley on the following day for not less than $1,000 a side. Also to row double against Conley and Courtney for one to two thousand dollars. He posted three hundred dollars as a forfeit, to remain open until Sept. 5th. He concludes by saying if the forfeit is not covered he will pay no more attention to newspaper talk about the "Union Springs duffer."

Pension Commissioner Black recently directed that all of the pension rolls be carefully scrutinized to discover the extent of the frauds which many newspapers claimed were being perpetrated, especially in the Philadelphia pension office, in carrying the names of dead pensioners and remarried widows. The special examination division of the bureau at Chicago and elsewhere which do this work, disclosed at the Chicago office no less than 560 such names. Is it this reform work of Gen. Black's that calls forth unsavory comments upon his head by many Republican journals?

James Shanahan, Superintendent of Public Works, believes in doubling the length of the locks in the Erie canal. The first step in the work of improvement, he believes, should be to remove the silt on the towpath side, and the next to clear out the obstructions on the berme side. This would restore the canal to the form of a prism. This work, he says, would necessitate the lowering of all the lock walls, culverts, drains and waterways a foot. He also points out that to raise the banks two feet would not disturb the under passages nor require the locks to be torn up.

At the meeting in Schenectady of the grand lodge of good templars, after a long discussion the report of the committee on political action, declaring that the good templar organization is nonpartisan, and that the grand lodge does not favor a third party, was adopted. The resolution was carried by over a three-fourths vote. The sentiment of the resolution and the discussion showed that a great majority of delegates were in favor of voting for the best temperance candidate, republican or democrat, and for the submission of a constitutional amendment prohibiting the sale of alcoholic liquors as a beverage.

Much is said of over-work nowadays and much that is nonsensical. "Gentlemen come to consult me almost daily," says Dio Lewis, "full of the notion that overwork is killing them. Nineteen times in twenty it is bad food, bad hours, cigars and other abuses." With good food properly eaten, plenty of sleep, a clean skin, and exercise in the open air, not one in ten would break down from "overwork." It is not the legitimate work in the daytime that breaks a man down; the late night hours, card parties, champagne suppers, and midnight balls account for the "nervous prostration."

A correspondent of the New York Herald after studying the gossip and movements at the late Saratoga convention deduces the following: "The Republican situation in the State may be summed up from observations on the ground that the party simply has at least a chance of electing its Governor, and that it will be difficult to find the candidate willing to tap a large sized barrel to pay the expenses of so doubtful a campaign." From this it is apparent that Levi P. Morton, who was not good for the Republicans to elect as Senator may be just the man to run for Governor Indeed, it may be said that Morton is one of the most formidable aspirants for the nomination, in view of the wild yearning for a candidate with a barrel.

GENERAL NEWS.

Three thousand pounds of nitro-glycerine exploded at Roberts & Sons' factory Bradford, Pa., on Thursday, completely wrecking the building and shaking houses for miles around. Two employes were thrown some distance but escaped with a few bruises. The loss is heavy.

The Russian government is taking severe measures to suppress the German languages in the Baltic provinces. This action meets with great resentment. The Berlin press denounce it as illegal and unjust.

Colonel Robert Bruce, inspector general of the Irish constabulary, has retired from that office, and has been created a companion of the order of the Bath. Andrew Reed, one of the assistant inspectors, has been promoted to the office.

A strange disease is raging about Clay Court House, W. Va. A score of those attacked have died in the greatest agony within a few hours after seizure. It is very much like cholera. The epidemic is confined chiefly to children.

The White House was reopened to the public on Monday. The building has been cleaned and renovated during the President's absence, and is now in condition for his return.

The office of the State Agricultural society took possession of the fair grounds at Albany yesterday and will immediately finish the preparations for the State fair, which will open September 10.

Auburn prison expenses for August were $9,100; earnings, $1,212.20; deficit, $7,886.83. Thirty-six men were discharged, two escaped, and one was sent to an asylum. No receipts. Present population, 888.

Thomas Davis, a noted sportsman was shot and killed in his office at New York on Monday by one James T. Holland, a Texan. Holland claims that Davis was trying to rob him by passing off counterfeit money in exchange for genuine greenbacks. The affair causes no little excitement.

The control of the preferred stock of the New York, Ontario & Western railway has been acquired in the New York Central interest for the purpose of readjusting amicably its relations with the West Shore railway. It is probably that several months will be required to disentangle the two roads. The purchase of the control was a part of the general plan for the settlement of the railroad war, under which the New York Central will lease the reconstructed West Shore.

The storm Sunday night undermined the West Shore track at Rightmeir's fill, two miles south of Catskill. The train which left New York at 8:10 in the evening was flagged four miles below that point and warned to run very slowly, as heavy rain was falling and the track might be damaged. As the engineer struck the fill, the rails suddenly sank, participating the engine, tender and baggage car down an embankment about fifty feet into the water. Engineer H. T. Cole was buried under the cab and killed. The fireman and passengers escaped. Trains were delayed several hours.

Reports from Erie, Chautauqua, Cattaraugus, Niagara, Orleans and Genesee counties to the Buffalo Express on the condition of the crops state that the damage caused by heavy rains is much less than was believed. There will be a large yield of wheat, but barley has been damaged by wet weather. Corn is generally good but late. There is a large crop of potatoes but rot is feared. In Cattaraugus county the bug has made unprecedented ravages. The hay crop was large and of good quality. The grape, apple, bean and plum crop, will be excellent. The Niagara county peach crop, however, will but little more than supply the local demand.

COUNTY COMMENT.

The Mexico fair begins next Tuesday.

The Sandy Creek fair begins to-day and will continue through Friday.

The body of an unknown man, evidently that of a sailor or fisherman, was found on the beach at Oswego, Thursday, It was badly decomposed and had probably been in the water for a month.

A man whose name could not be learned, fell off the R. W. & O. trestle on West Erie street Monday evening, in Oswego, and was badly cut about the head and face. He claimed to belong in Hannibal and was under the influence of liquor.

The dwelling house of James Jackson at Hannibal, was destroyed by fire Thursday night. The cause of the fire is supposed to be from the explosion of a lamp on the dining room table. The house was valued at $800 and insured for $400. There was an insurance of but $200 on the household goods.

Supervisor Sparrow of Schroeppel has accomplished the necessary steps to convene the board of supervisors of this county to take action in regard to the rebuilding of Schroeppel's bridge, and it now remains for the board of Onondaga county to signify their readiness when the meeting will be called.

Mr. George Blossom, formerly of Scriba and now proprietor of the Blossom and Union Depot hotels at Kansas City, died at that place last Thursday. Mr. Blossom went west in 1857, but has visited here often since then, the last time being one year ago. His wife was a sister of supervisor Amos Allport of Scriba, and he has other relations in this vicinity. The deceased was about sixty years of age, and had been quite successful in business. He had been ill but a short time.

County Politics.

The Prohibition county convention is being held in Oswego to-day.

Oswego county is entitled to 12 delegates in the coming republican state convention—six from each district. The republican vote for Blaine was as follows: First district, 6 241, second, 4,7[illegible]. The county [illegible] has had but four delegates [illegible] each district.

A project is on foot for bringing lake water to the factories to be used in washing wool. It is said to be much softer than the river water. Those living along the south side of Broadway have been asked the privilege of laying a water pipe in front of their residences.

Mr. Bassett, representing the Fulton Water Works Co., has been spending a little time in town for the past day or two obtaining signatures to a petition to the village board, asking them to enter into a contract with the water works company to furnish water for twenty first class non-freezing fire hydrants for this village. It is hoped that our citizens will attend to this and not wait for such a lesson as Carthage and Sandy Creek have had.

The West Side Baptist church of Oswego held their annual picnic on the fair grounds yesterday.

A row occurred at Hennesey's saloon Saturday night shortly after midnight. Several large stones were thrown through the lower windows, completely demolishing them, arousing the whole neighborhood.

Rev. Mr. Olmstead will not return until next week, and the Rev. Mr. Nimes of Walton, N. Y., will occupy the pulpit next Sunday.

South Granby.

South Granby, Sep. 1.—Sunday after noon between three and four o'clock there visited us a hail storm unequaled in this town in a number of years. The path of the storm was along the south part of the town, reaching into Lysander a short distance, and our very choice tobacco that has been the pride of the farmers this season is ruined. We cannot estimate the amount of damage done but should say over 100 acres of tobacco is ruined and the best and heavest crop that has been grown here in a number of years.

The latest attraction is a nine pound boy at F. E. Lewis's yesterday morning.

Trustees' Proceedings.

Fulton, August 26, 1885.

Board met pursuant to adjournment.

Present, President Waugh and Trustees Bradford, Chase and Kendrick.

Minutes of meetings of August 7th and 19th, insts., were read and adopted.

The village collector reported that he had collected and paid over to the Treasurer $6,100, and asked that his warrant be extended.

On motion of Mr. Kendrick his request was granted, and the warrant extended 30 days.

The lamp lighter reported that some of the lamp posts needed to be replaced with new ones. On motion of Mr. Bradford the matter was referred to the lamp committee.

The street committee reported that they had examined the matter of lumber piled on Broadway, and that they do not recommend any action being taken in regard thereto at present.

Trustee Gage came in.

Mrs. H. L. Bullock came before the Board, and made statement in regard to sluice across Fifth street on Buffalo street; and asked that the same be relaid.

On motion of Mr. Kendrick, the street commissioner was ordered to relay it.

The following bills were reported favorably from the finance committee, and on motion of Mr. Gage the same were audited at the several amounts claimed, and the Clerk instructed to draw orders on the Treasurer therefor:

John Cavanaugh, Lamp-lighter,	$38.25
A. Bradford, repairs on Engine House,	3.40
D. H. Stringham, Seal Press,	4.00
Bartlett Street Lamp m'f'g Co., Globes for Street Lamps	22.85
	$68.50

The Clerk reported that he had procured a Seal, suitable for the official seal of the village.

On motion of Mr. Gage the same was adopted as the official seal of the village.

On motion of Mr. Gage, the Treasurer of the Fire Department was given an order on the village Treasurer for $150.

Mr. Gage, special committee to procure a place to store the road Scrapers, etc. reported that the barn of Mrs. Hornibrook could be had for that purpose, and also for such other purposes as the village might need it for, for $25 per year.

On motion of Mr. Kendrick, the report was accepted, and the street committee was directed to engage the same for one year from September 1 next.

On motion of Mr. Kendrick the Board adjourned to Sept. 2d, 1885, at 8 o'clock p. m.

Arvin Rice, Clerk.

Cheese Market.

(From the Utica Herald.)

AT UTICA Aug. 31.

All through the early part of the afternoon it was difficult to hear of any actual prices bid. The effort seemed to be to get as much stock as possible at the ruling price, whatever that might be. But after 5 p. m. bids of 7¾ and 8c. began to be whispered about, and it soon became certain that the ruling could not be less than 7½c. Many salesmen considered this a good day to let their cheese go, and they sold one or two extra day's. The bulk of the stock was August make, but there was also a little of late July. Factorymen claim that it is very fortunate this advance has come just at this time. If it had not, it is pretty certain that a good many dairymen would have withdrawn from the factories and gone to feeding the milk instead. They believe there is more money in it than selling it to the factory at 50 to 55c. a hundred pounds. Transactions to-day were as follows: Four lots, 400 boxes, at, 7¼c.; 8 lots 740 boxes, at 7⅜c.; 65 lots, 6,539 boxes, at 7½c.; 4 lots, 228 boxes, at 7⅝c.; 19 lots, 1,623 boxes, at 7¾ 6 lots, 527 boxes. at 7⅞c.; 12 lots, 1,735 boxes, at 8c.: 3 lots, 259 boxes, at 8⅛c.; 3 lots, 775 boxes at 8¼c. Sales 12,826 boxes; consignments, 1,020 boxes; total, 13,846 boxes. Ruling price, 7½c Transactions one year ago 11,131 boxes, ruling 10½c. The market was active, but excited and somewhat feverish.

LITTLE FALLS, Aug. 31.

Cheese.—This market responds promptly to the boom in New York last week. Prices here are 1¼c. higher than a week ago, and a lively trade was realized. It was reported about the middle of the afternoon that 8¾c. would be paid, and it was firmly believed that it would, but at a later hour matters appeared to change a little, and at the close nothing above 8¼c. could be found. It was also believed that a large sale would be made, but only about the same amount changed hands as last week. There are fears expressed that the boom has been carried too far and that a reaction may follow next week; but there is a stronger belief that it is all right—the August cheese made in cool weather and the weather still continuing cool, are brought forward as points to sustain the position of the latter. At any rate, all are feeling good over the advance and hope for the best.

Lots.	Boxes.	Price.
3	173	7¼cts
39	3,473	7⅞cts
5	2,858	8cts
6	569	8¼
13	900	Com.
116	9,773
Farm Dairy	950
Total	8,923

Farm Dairies.—An outside buyer stirred up trade upon the morning market and pushed prices up some. The range was 7 and 8¼, the bulk at 8¼c.

Butter.—Forty packages of creamery sold at 20½c., and 15 packages of farm d[illegible]y at 20 a 21c.

AT FULTON.

Salesmen wore brighter countenances Monday night than for some time past. The advance in the price of cheese during the week made them feel very hopeful. About 2,500 boxes were offered and readily sold. [illegible] bought about 700 boxes at 7½c, a [illegible] above ruling. [illegible]

[illegible] of the Camper.

In a recent issue of THE TIMES we wrote, in a somewhat hasty and desultory manner of the camps at High Banks, and its occupants. It may be interesting to readers of THE TIMES to know more of the "true inwardness" of camp life there, and to understand better the somewhat enigmatical ical character of the camper.

As to the beauty and advantages of High Banks as a camping locality a reiterated account is unnecessary, a mere allusion at this point being sufficient to emphasize the fact. As to the camper in general, (as a real institution, having a fixed character and modified only by certain conditions which do not affect his characteristic reality,) he must be of a free and easy nature. He must be content to degenerate for a time into semi-barbarism and count it as infinitely superior to the most approved civilization. Fastidiousness he must cast aside and with a barbarian dignity defy dirt and general uncleanliness. It is necessary that he should have nerve enough to meet the natural elements in their native haunts of wood and stream, nerve to face and outlive the rigors of a mosquito raid, a hard, (oh, so hard) bed, and the cook's diabolical art. With these qualities and a never failing fund of good nature, which can arise persistently superior to any and all combinations of adverse circumstances, a good time is assured. As a rule, the camper sees the sun rise, and so is able to verify a geographical truth which he learned at school. At the early dawn, he hears the birds awakening among the trees, walks from his tent and looks upon a new earth as it were, so fresh, so beautiful, so still and sublime is nature, awakening. If his bed has been a hard one he does not hold the memory in his present mind, (his bones, however, preserve a faithful record) but with a bouyant heart he walks forth in the fresh exhilerating morning air and when he attends to his simple toilet on the bank of the river, he is ready for a new day of delightful, dreamy, indolent existence. The office and ware-room are forgotten and the cares of everyday life are far away. He lifts his eyes and seeing naught but nature in repose seems to be a part of the peaceful and harmonious scene. Aside from the sports of boating and fishing which claim the camper's attention, very numerous and varied are the pleasures that arise incidentally from day to day. The natural impulse of the camper is for fun of a practical kind, and he seldom fails to have his joke at the expense of a fellow camper. To creep upon an innocent sleeper who is recuperating after the rigors of a night of fishing, and to startle him into a horrible fright with the sudden din of clanging pans, the blaring of horns and the vociferating of demoniacal yells is the acme of the campers privileges and pleasures. To dance and sing, to orate and reproduce the sounds and sights of the circus generally is his hourly pastime. To put salt in the sugar box or laugh at some untoward plight of a helpless fellow camper is what the camper enjoys hugely. But of all the pleasures of camp life perhaps the crowning event of each day's sport is the concert which attends the nightly camp fire. A huge pine stump, weighing several hundred pounds is carried by willing hands to the desired spot. It is lighted and when its blaze sheds a lurid light upon the scene it shows the campers in a circle gathered around. The picture is a beautiful and weird one. The great volume of fire and the leaping flames, a dozen oddly attired campers seated in its glowing light, the surrounding woods illuminated and the shadows moving in fantastic shapes and starting out of the impenetrable darkness of the forest as the flames leap and start in fitful flashes. It seems that the campers feel the influence of some vague superstition for they are invariably awed by the scene and for a time there is a hush of voices. Then softly comes the sweet notes of the guitar stealing upon the scene, the violin and the mouth organ swell the melody and musical voices arise in song and go out echoing and dying in the gloom of the adjacent wood. The funny man of the camp, who, by the way, is the merriest, most sunny-hearted fellow who ever sat at a camp fire, essays a rollicking song with side-splitting antics, the woods re-echo with laughter and our merry friend makes his bow. Then comes the jest and buffoonery born of light spirits and good feeling. The waltz is played, and here upon the green sward the campers whirl about in graceful circles and imitate the gaiety of the ball room. What with song and jest, laughter and dance, chat and antic the hours wear away and with the embers of the camp fire still glowing, the campers steal off in the darkness to their several tents. It usually takes the camper a night or two to become familiar with his somewhat hard and uncomfortable bed but the open air and the exercise of camp life will eventually reconcile him to what at first seems discomfort, and he will sleep soundly and awake refreshed for the pleasures of the day. Camping is an economical pleasure and those who try it will realize from it a profit which is manifest in a visibly increased fund of health. The Oswego river in its natural beauty, offers many advantages in the choice of camping sites and to Fulton people there are adjacent situations which are unsurpassed. Going down the river VanBuren's Island offers a retreat for the camper while Indian Point, Reynold's Woods and Battle Island are favorite and pleasant localities. South from Fulton there are many pleasant spots, but perhaps the best located, most picturesque and withal the finest camping situation upon the river north or south, is High Banks, about four miles south of Fulton, upon the farm of Mr. Kelly, who, by the way, is a pleasant mannered man, obliging and generous in giving the use of his beautiful grove free of expense. He also furnishes camping necessities in the matter of provisions at a very liberal figure. During the present summer, High Banks has been growing in popularity, quite a number of tents having been pitched there, and it is probable that another year will make it a standard resort for many who in the life of a camp, find a pleasure which in its freedom, healthfulness and economy is unequalled by any other.

Last Monday E. C. Whitaker of this village, brought to this office a basket containing 7 pounds of the handsomest potatoes we have ever seen. They were grown from a potatoe weighing but two ounces and were of the kind known as "Stray Beauties." He procured the seed in Philadelphia.

An extra session of the board of supervisors has been called to meet in Oswego Sep. 4, for the purpose of considering the building of a bridge over the Oswego river between the town of Schroeppel and Onondaga county. The Onondaga supervisors will also consider the matter.

The Grand View, South Dakota Tribune of the 21st, says: Dr. Curtis has about finished his chicken hunt, and will return to his home in New York the first of next week. He has enjoyed a goodly amount of shooting, and been obliged to empty his game bag a number of times.

The Oswego Falls fair which occurs September 15th, 16th and 17th promises to be one of the most successful ones ever held. Already a large number of the heaviest exhibitors have engaged space for their displays. Half fare trains will be run on all roads and it is probable that larger crowds than usual will be in attendance.

A petition is being circulated in Oswego Falls asking the village board to make an appropriation for the laying of pipes and hydrants for water works. The petition is being quite extensively signed and it is understood that the factory company encourage the project. It is thought that with a system of 20 hydrants and sufficient hose ample protection can be secured.

Prof. F. K. Jones, organist of the Catholic church in this village, fully sustained his enviable reputation as organist on Sunday last. He executed the mass in the finest manner possible, and in that which could not but please the most profound critic. He is taking steps to improve the choir—a work much needed. Rehearsals are given every Thursday evening, and all the members of the choir are expected to be present.—[Fulton Correspondent to Syracuse Journal.

A. Rosenbloom went to New York Sunday evening to make extensive purchases for the different departments of their mammoth stores for the Fall and winter trade. This firm promise to place some excellent bargains on the shelves of their new dry goods department the coming season. Choice selections will also be made for the clothing department. They are well aware of the wants and tastes of this community which enables them to buy closely and sell at low prices. Watch THE TIMES for their announcement of bargains shortly.

Annual Review.

The annual parade and review of the Fulton Fire Department will occur Thursday Sept. 10th. Chief Darrow has announced the line of march, as follows:

The Department will form in line in front of the engine house at 2 o'clock sharp, and preceded by the Fulton band, will march down First street to Oneida, up Oneida to Fourth, up Fourth to Cayuga, Cayuga to Third, Third to Utica, Utica to Fourth, Fourth to Rochester, Rochester to Third, Third to Buffalo, Buffalo to Fourth, Fourth to Broadway, thence down Broadway and First to engine house, where they will be inspected by the Board of Trustees.

Immediately after inspection trials of the steamers will take place, and an exhibition by the Hook & Ladder company.

The department urgently request the Board in full to be present at the engine house for the purpose of inspecting the companies.

Mr. Aldrich's Story.

FULTON, Sept. 1st, 1885.

To the Editor of THE TIMES:

DEAR SIR:—The article published in the issue of THE TIMES on Aug. 19th, under the heading "His Game Blocked" does me great injustice. I am not a married man, nor have I a living wife. I once had a wife, but through my attorney and counsel, George W. Harman, of Oswego, I obtained in the supreme court of the state of New York an absolute divorce. Said divorce was granted upon the report of Hon. Alfred B. Getty, referee of Oswego, who was duly appointed by Justice Kennedy of the supreme court to take testimony and report the same with his opinion thereon. The lady referred to in the letter published is 24 years of age, and was fully advised by me as to my former wife. She also was furnished with a certified copy of the decree of divorce granted to me as aforesaid. Please publish this letter as prominently as you did the letter dated Aug. 19.

Respectfully, E. R. ALDRICH.

Freaks of Lightning.

During the severe storm which visited this section last Monday morning, a cow belonging to John Kernan was struck by lightning and killed. The cow was a blooded one and considered quite valuable.

A house on Buffalo street, belonging to Orin Steele was also struck. Several feet of the ridge board was carried away and a large piece of plastering torn off, but no damage was done to the occupants.

The Chaffee Reunion.

The annual reunion of the Chaffees, who were among the first settlers in Volney, was held this year at the Eagle cheese factory, the home of H. Bailey on the 27th inst. There were present one hundred and one who were related in one way or another. The oldest one present was in his 80th year and in good health. He settled in Volney in 1820. The reunion was one of the pleasantest ever held. The tables were bountifully spread with choice eatables and fruits of the season. The next gathering will be held at the home of Wm. Church in Central Square, August next.

Rev. Dr. Bruce Injured.

The Syracuse Standard of Monday, gives the following account of an accident which befell Rev. Mr. Bruce, a former pastor of the M. E. church of this village:

"While Rev. E. C. Bruce, pastor of the Furman street Methodist church, Danforth, was cutting down a tree last Friday, a limb which he was sawing swung around and knocked down the ladder on which he was standing. In falling to the ground, Mr. Bruce's right foot caught in the ladder, causing the leg to be very severely wrenched. He will probably be confined to his house for some time. Dr. Head attends him."

OBITUARY.

J. Wallace VanVorst, one of the oldest and most respected citizens in this community died at his home in this village yesterday morning, aged 76 years. Mr. VanVorst came to this section about twenty years ago. He has been an earnest, devoted member of the Presbyterian church for many years, and was loved and respected by all who knew him. He was a kind-hearted man, an exemplary citizen, and an appeal to him was always responded to cheerfully and willingly. He leaves a wife and three children, Mrs. D. A. Waterman and Warren VanVorst of this village, and Mrs. Angell, who resides near Schenectady. The funeral will probably be held Friday from the house.

We take from the Rome Sentinel the following, which will be read with sorrow by many in Fulton who well remember the deceased, for it was in this village that her childhood days were spent with her parents:

Mrs. Florence M., wife of Wayne D. VanValkenburg of Albany, died at 7:15 a. m. to-day of consumption, at the residence of her uncle, P. R. Putnam, No. 160 Dominick street, in her 28th year. She was the only child of Mr. and Mrs. Bela H. Putnam, who for many years resided in Rome, but whose home has been in Albany for three years past. She was married to Wayne D. VanValkenburg about thirteen years ago. About four years ago she was attacked by consumption, which, but for her buoyant and cheerful disposition and her determination to live, would have brought her life to a close long since. She was very patient and uncomplaining and met her fate with cheerful resignation, surrounded by her family and friends whom she urged not to weep for her, because, as she said, when death came she would be rid of all the pain she had borne so long. For some time she had been patiently waiting for the dread visitant, and about four weeks ago picked out her burial place and bearers. She came from Albany to Rome with her mother last Thursday. She bore the journey very well and was about the house every day till Sunday, when she began failing and sank away till death came to her as peacefully and as quietly as sleep to a tired child, and she passed away without a struggle. Many who knew the deceased as Florence Putnam and later as Mrs. VanValkenburg will [illegible]

The West Baptist sunday school of Oswego, picniced on the Oswego Falls fair grounds yesterday.

The Rev. Mr. Smith of the Presbyterian church resumed his pastoral labors last Sunday, after an enjoyable vacation of several weeks.

The Oswego street railway is having some difficulty with the R. W. & O. railroad which refuses to allow the street railway to be laid across its tracks.

James McCarthy, the enterprising merchant of Oswego, has purchased the balance of B. J. Dyer's dry goods stock and removed it to his bargain rooms in that city.

Hiram Lodge, No. 144, F. & A. M., will resume labor next Monday evening. Members of other lodges sojourning among us are cordially invited to participate.

S. PARMALEE, W. M.

The new store on Oneida street being built by Dr. Bacon, when finished will be occupied by Geo. Johnston, the hardware merchant, who finds his present quarters much too small for his increasing business.

The street railway of Oneida for the first 50 days, ending with Aug. 23, carried 16,886 passengers, making the average daily receipts $17, net $7, which is equal to an annual dividend of 16 per cent. on the $15,000 capital.

J. R. Pierce, District Superintendent for the Empire State Telephone Company, was in town last week in the interests of the telephone business. Mr. Pierce is very desirous of increasing Fulton's list of subscribers, and called on a number of our merchants and business men.

Now that the skating rink is no more, it is to be hoped that our pleasure going people will liberally patronize all good entertainments which may visit us the coming season. We have a pleasant and convenient opera house in our village and there is no good reason why we cannot be entertained by first-class companies.

"Lieutenant Roy" one of the Salvation army passed through the city Saturday night on his way to Fulton. Roy is something of a dude and edified the passengers on the D. L. & W., by proclaiming his mission on earth. The army has so far given Oswego the go by and on the whole we are just as well pleased.—[Oswego Times-Express.

The employes of THE TIMES enjoyed a rare experience one day last week, when Mrs. Elder sent in a bountiful supply of ice cream and cake. The way it was pounced upon and devoured showed that printers, as a rule, were strangers to such delicacies. After the feast a vote of thanks that could only be weighed on a pair of hay scales was tendered Mrs. Elder for her generosity.

A large number of people went to Long Branch last Sunday on the excursion given by the Fulton band. The only accident of the day occurred at Phœnix while returning home, where one of the passengers in his anxiety to reach his hat, which had fallen in the canal, seemed to forget the intervening space between the boat and the shore and fell in the water. He was fished out in a sadly demoralized condition. Financially, the excursion was a very profitable one, the receipts aggregating about $80.00. This sum will be invested in new uniforms.

Damages of the Storm.

The damage from Sunday's hail and wind storm in the neighborhood of Baldwinsville is much larger than anticipated. Mr. Greenspect, a dealer in tobacco, has made a tour of the farms and says that more than 2,000 acres of tobacco were entirely destroyed in the northern part of the town of Lysander, Onondaga county, and the southern part of the town of Granby, Oswego county. The storm was about one and a quarter miles wide. The loss of the crop causes great excitement among dealers in tobacco, many of whome have been at Baldwinsville for some time, watching its growth, preparatory to buying. What remains of the crop will be harvested this week. Many farmers also lost their corn crop and will feel the loss severely.

Orphan Picnic.

The orphans, about 150, from the Syracuse Orphan Asylum will spend the day on the fair grounds, on Friday, Sept. 4. The managers ask the ladies of Fulton and Oswego Falls to donate them some refreshments for their dinner. Bread, biscuit, sandwiches, cold meats &c. as they may deem best. The Fulton ladies will please send their donations to Miller & Whitaker's grocery before 10 a. m., Friday, and they will be sent to the fair ground. The ladies of Oswego Falls and vicinity will please send to the fair ground their donations by 11 o'clock a. m., and greatly oblige the little ones who are to have a day of amusement and pleasure.

[illegible] Oswego. The trouble is a misunderstanding concerning the right of way over the Ontario & Western track. The Ontario folks will not consent to any arrangement for running trains over the Phoenix road where they are compelled to use the R. W. & O. tracks in entering Syracuse. The two companies are at loggerheads. They will not join hands in any enterprise, and the Ontario company, which was meanly treated by the R. W. & O. some time ago in Oswego, will not grant any privileges to parties who are bound to supplement such privileges from any grant to the latter company. The president of the Phœnix road, Judge Low, is now in New York trying to settle the difficulty, and the lessees hope to be able to run trains by the last of the week.

LATER—A conference was held in Oswego Monday evening between general superintendent Britton of the R. W. & O., general superintendant Childs of the N. Y. O. & W., and Judge Low of the Syracuse & Phœnix road, at which satisfactory arrangements were made by the R. W. & O. for the use of the N. Y. O. & W. tracks from Fulton to Oswego. A copy of the agreement has been forwarded to headquarters in New York city, and the first train over the road will leave Oswego next Monday morning unless something unforseen happens. Superintendents Childs, Britton, Lamphere and Judge Low left this morning for a trip over the road.

Camp Meeting

Last evening closed the Free Methodist camp meeting which has been in session for a week past in Wilber's grove, a pleasant spot on the outskirts of Fulton. A large tent, capable of holding several hundred people had been erected in the center of the grove. This was surrounded by about fifteen smaller tents, each occupied by one or more families. Services each day were commenced at 5:30 a. m., and continued with but three interruptions for meals until 10 o'clock at night. Rev. Mr. O'Dell, pastor of the Free Methodist church in this village, told a TIMES reporter who who visited the grounds yesterday that the meetings had been very successful nearly 40 conversions having been made. The best of order had been maintained, and all visitors were welcome. Among the visiting clergymen were Rev. A. F. Curry of Almond, N. Y., Rev. L. Kelly, Chittenango, Rev. J. Fulford, Syracuse, Rev. O. S. Baker, North Manlius, Rev. O. Frink, Oswego, Rev. Mr. Flemming of Minetto and others. The grounds have been visitited each day by large numbers of people, and it was said that on Sunday about 1,000 persons were in attendance at the meetings.

NOTES.

Several backsliders were received into the fold.

The rain last Sunday did not seem to dampen the ardor of the worshipers in the least.

Captain Fisher of the Salvation Army attended last Sunday and took an active part in the services.

Rev. Mr. O'Dell will preach his farewell sermon next Sunday. He has officiated here for two years.

It is said that one young lady became convicted last Sunday and had the "power" to such an extent that she laid on the damp ground for several hours in an unconscious state.

Police Court News.

Arthur Edmunds, a ten year old boy was arrested by Officer Poole last week on complaint of C. S. Eggleston who had missed some money from his drawer. The boy when arrested was in a bakery spending some of the stolen money. He was taken to Eggleston's store and when searched, five dollars was found on his person. When he was asked how he robbed the drawer he said that he sneaked around the corner of the counter when no one was looking and opened the drawer. He was taken to the House of Correction in Rochester Monday.

The Street Railway.

That Fulton is to have a street railway is an assured fact. We have been informed from a reliable source that the construction of the new road will be commenced within the next thirty days. An unfortunate delay has made it impossible to complete the road by fair time.

To the Afflicted.

Dr. Galt came to Oswego Falls and commenced the practice of medicine last November and during the time up to March 1st, 1885, treated successfully some fifty females who were afflicted with difficulties peculiar to their sex.

The Doctor has during his entire practice treated over eight thousand and out of that number hundreds that had been confined to their beds from 1 to 20 years, and not one but was raised to comparative health, after they had been given up by the physicians that attended them. If necessary will give positive proof of validity of the above statement. Dr. Galt also claims that in his medical researches he has made as remarkable a discovery as has ever been made in medicine, that is, in a remedy that positively will cure a fever sore or any ill conditioned ulcers, abscesses or or sores on the body of any name or nature. It removes the poison from the blood and circulation, and destroys all impurities. The Doctor has cured some 14 cases while at Oswego Falls, entirely sound, as bad cases as could be found. Any person wishing to ascertain the validity of the above statement is requested to write to the editor of the Oswego Falls Observer or the postmaster or both. The Doctor is assisted by his wife, who is a thorough physician and who understands the treatment of female diseases the same as the Doctor, and ladies feeling delicate in being treated by the Doctor can be treated by Mrs. Dr. Galt. Fever sores cured according to contract or no charges made. Charges moderate and the [illegible] time for money considered. Professor Sheldon found that in eight months a crib of corn containing 200 bushels shrunk to 187¾ bushels, losing about six per cent. by evaporation. He thinks that with such shrinking, together with the loss by depredations of rats, mice, etc., it does not pay farmers to hold corn too long for a rise in prices.

A New York farmer observed that some of his apple trees that had been dressed with unleached wood ashes bore apples which kept all winter without rotting, while the rest of the fruit rotted badly. His trees were infested with apple tree blight. He finally applied wood-ashes, at the rate of 200 bushels to the acre, to his orchard, and washed the bodies of the trees with lye. The orchard recovered from the blight, and the apples would then keep well in an ordinary cellar all winter.

A Michigan strawberry grower practices straw mulching of the vines to keep the berries clean, and when the season is ended burns the straw as it lies. The heat clears off the leaves and creepers from the stands, besides destroying the seeds of weeds that lie on the surface, as well as insects and larvæ. After several years' trial it has been found that when rains come new leaves start out from the crown of the plant which is uninjured by the fiery ordeal through which it has passed. The vines are then cultivated as usual. The first burning over the vines was an accident, but the result proved so good the practice has been continued.

Most Profitable Horses to Breed.

This is undoubtedly the large farm, the carriage, the express and dray horse, particularly the latter, as our towns and cities are in great want of them, and the supply is not near equal to the demand, nor will it be for many years to come. The average profit in rearing this special class of horses is much greater and much more certain than on any other in the present time. One reason of this is that the colts are large and strong enough to be put to work on the farm at 2 to 2½ years old, and then can earn all, or perhaps more, than their cost to five years old, when they become sufficiently matured and hardy for heavy cart and truck work. They may now be sold at $200 to $500 each, according to power, style, action and quality.

Next in average profit is the express horse of good size and fine action After these we may name superior matched carriage horses, of extra size, but, as it requires more costly stallions to get suitable colts, and as they cannot be safely worked on the farm until three years old or past, they are not so cheaply reared as the dray horse. Then comes the added trouble in matching them, and the extra expense of training and preparing for market. Matching might be more easily and cheaply done if the farmers of a large district would unite in keeping mares of the same color, size and action, and breed them to a single stallion of the same color. He, of course, should be a large, well-bred trotter, or very stout, complete thoroughbred, perfectly sound, and superior in every respect, except in speed; and for this last quality a third, or even fourth-rate stallion would be more proper than faster ones; for horses got by these would most likely develop a natural gait in harness of seven to nine miles per hour over a moderately level road, and easily keep this up for hours. This is as fast as gentlemen ever want their horses to travel double in harness, and especially when ladies and children are in the carriage.—[Wallace's Monthly.

Autumn Tree-Planting.

It has been the custom of nurserymen to send out agents to dispose of a part of their stock in autumn. This plan has many good points, but unfortunately for the buyer, they are all on the nurserymen's side, as, through the long summer days agents can drive a better business when the farmer is taken at his best, and one not meet with the blinding storms and drifts of snow; also it gives more time, and avoids in part, the general rush if all were done in spring.

But how is it with the farmer? The work of planting, if done in autumn, comes at a time of the year when the farmer is finishing harvest and can ill spare the time; which, if done early in the spring before the time to start the plow (and this is the cream of time, even if it takes a special order and increased cost) he has plenty of spare time. To sum the matter up, time is not all. A tree planted in the spring and gets all summer's growth, gets partially acclimated; trimmed branches and bruised roots heal over, and it stands the rigors of a severe winter far better than one planted in autumn, exposed in most cases to a change in climate and soil eight months before nature begins to give it new life.

I have in mind a nurseryman of small means from near Seneca Lake who came through here in autumn, many years ago and sold largely, warranting them to grow; after replacing those that died (fully one-third with good care) and then [illegible] next year, he concluded it did not pay and quit autumn business. "You will remember," [illegible] the sensation that was created a month or so ago by a madman, who took possession of a train in Illinois. Well, I had an experience once with a crazy woman on a sleeping car that I don't care ever to repeat.

"You see. I had run down to New York for a few days, and as luck and my friends would have it, I didn't get much more than three or four hours' sleep all the time I was here, there was so much painting to be done. I determined to make it up by sleeping all the way back home, and I took the evening train for Buffalo on the Central. I was so sleepy when I got down to the depot that I could hardly keep my eyes open, and I took some ammonia and soda water, just before I got on the cars, to keep myself awake until the porter could fix up my birth. There were two sleeping cars on the train, and I had a section in the first one.

"The train was not billed to start for fifteen minutes after I arrived, and so I walked through the cars. I found that I was the only male occupant of the sleeper my berth was in; and, after ordering the porter to make up my bed at once, I went into the next car. I found some people there that I knew, and I remained talking with them for half an hour after the train started.

"Then I started back to my own car, almost dead for sleep, and happy at the thought that at last I was going to have a rest.

"When I opened the door of the other sleeper, however, I found all the occupants crowded in the end of the car, all of them women. They seized me at once.

"Oh,' one of them said, 'we're so glad you have come in here. You're the gentleman that has a section in this car. Aren't you?'

"I replied that I was.

"Do you know,' the woman went on, in a tone of utmost horror, 'that there is a crazy woman in the car? She's got the berth at the other end, and there's an attendant with her. Every little while she screams and raves, and the attendant has all she can do to keep her quiet. Oh, dear! we are all so frightened! And we don't know what we shall do!'

"Why don't you go to bed?' I asked.

"'Go to bed?' they all shrieked in chorus. 'Go to bed with that woman raving at the other end of the car?'

"They all agreed that they wouldn't go to bed for $100,000 each.

"'Well, I'm going to bed, anyway,' I answered.

"At this they all shrieked again, and they begged and implored me to sit up with them, and protect them. They knew that this fearful woman would certainly get away from the attendant, and they were positive that they should all die of fright if I didn't agree to stay awake.

"I was in a nice predicament, for I was in about the state we read of, in which soldiers will go to sleep with a gun pointed at them. Finally I told the ladies that I had a frightful headache, and if they would let me lie down for an hour, then I would get up and watch with them for the rest of the night.

"But how shall we wake you up?' one of the ladies asked.

"Shake me,' I said.

"They were shocked at the idea of reaching behind my curtains, however, and one of them suggested that I should tie a string to my wrist, and leave it hanging out of my berth, where they might pull it at the end of the hour. I had to agree to this, and they got the string and tied it to me.

"I got in behind the curtains, deploring another night of misery, and was seized with an inspiration. I untied the string from my wrist, attached it to the arm of the seat under my mattrass, and fell off into a profound slumber that lasted till morning.

"The ladies were still sitting up when I awoke, and the string was broken. They all said I was the soundest sleeper they ever heard of."—[New York Times.

Not Funny.

"I don't know how, but I know you can," replied the editor.

"Well, will you take my judgment on the articles?"

"If you promise to be serious, I will."

"All right, I think I may be able to satisfy you that they are serious."

Then he went away, and the next day returned and placed a bundle of papers on the editor's desk, which that worthy immediately proceeded to examine. After a minute or two, he looked up and said in amazement:

"Why, what's all this? Haven't you given me the wrong stuff?"

"I guess not. What's wrong?"

"Why here's a bill of $15 for board, another of $5 for washing, another of $50 for clothes, another of $10 for shoes and Heaven only knows what's in the rest of the pile."

"Well, what's wrong? There ain't any of them receipted, is there?"

"No, not as far as I've seen; but I don't understand why you should bring them here."

"Didn't you say you wanted some articles without any fun in them, and didn't you say you'd take my judgment on their being serious, and could I have found anything with less fun in it than what I have brought you? If you don't accept my judgment in this matter, I want to quit right now."

"I catch on. But don't quit. I've been there myself, and I can see clearly that you have an excellent sense of the serious. I've got a few old manuscripts of the same sentiment on file, and I've not been able to see anything funny in them these many years."

He Always Took Salt.

The Lewistown Journal tells this story of the Hon. Robert Martin, of Auburn; "Once during one of his visits to the Legislature. Mr. Martin sat at table at the hotel, where before him upon the table were individual salt-cellars, the first which he had ever seen. When his tea was brought to him, mistaking the salt for sugar, he took the salt cellar up and poured its contents into his cup of tea. The whole table looked at him. He stirred it up and tasted of it. If an expression of distaste was on his placid countenance, no one saw it, for he was imperturbable. He drank it all and asked for a second cup. In the meantime the waiter girl had filled his salt-cellar again, and it was beside his plate when his tea was brought in.

"Squire Martin lifted the salt cellar again and was just turning it into his tea when the waiter girl said: "I beg your pardon sir, but that is salt. Do you use salt?"

"Mr. Martin looked up, and with a gleam of satisfaction in his eye at his own ready tact, he replied with decision, intended for the entire table:

"Always, madam; I always use salt."

IMPROVED
BUTTER COLOR
A NEW DISCOVERY.

☞For several years we have furnished the Dairymen of America with an excellent artificial color for butter; so meritorious that it met with great success everywhere receiving the highest and only prizes at both International Dairy Fairs.

☞But by patient and scientific chemical research we have improved in several points, and now offer this new color as the best in the world.

It Will Not Color the Buttermilk. It Will Not Turn Rancid. It is the Strongest, Brightest and Cheapest Color Made,

☞And, while prepared in oil, is so compounded that it is impossible for it to become rancid.

☞BEWARE of all imitations, and of all other oil colors, for they are liable to become rancid and spoil the butter.

☞If you cannot get the "improved" write us to know where and how to get it without extra expense. (46)

A Dream.

BY CECIL LORRAINE.

Beloved—'tis but a dream—yet still I see
The witching beauty of your face so fair,
I watch again the light that never dies
Upon the yellow glory of your hair.

I gaze into the eyes that wrought my woe,
The gray eyes flashing 'neath their heavy fringe.
I watch the hue that glows upon your cheek,
The sweetest rosebud knows no fairer tinge.

And yet 'tis but a dream—the face I loved
Will, perfect, lie no more against my own;
The heart has ceased to beat for me and yet
My love has never, never weaker grown.

How we can love! if woman only knew
The power she holds to work us good or ill,
The happiness and peace her smiles may bring.
The sorrows that her voice has power to still—

Surely she could not prove to us unkind;
Surely she would not win us to betray!
Knowing that she can give us life or death—
And turn our darkest night into bright day!

Sweet—I forgive you—tho' your lovely face
Breaks in upon my lonely, unloved rest—
I have no power to judge—I love you still,
Although you broke the heart within my breast.

A WOMAN'S ANGER.

In her boudoir Miss Bertha Hoyt paced up and down like an enraged tigress.

She was going to a ball, and her escort was to be the catch of the season—Mr. Herbert Hammond.

Her jewels lay before her on her dressing table. Her toilet was finished, save for the beautiful basque which was to complete it. This had been sent to a young embroideress to cover with a dainty pattern of leaves and blossoms, and it was not yet brought home.

One could have excused a good deal of temper on such an occasion, but Miss Bertha was in a rage of the most tremendous description.

She threatened to commit sicide, to slap any one who spoke to her, to break the windows.

But for the fact of the close proximity of neighbors Miss Bertha would have vented her feelings in a series of shrieks.

"I don't believe it will ever come!" she wailed. "I never was so disappointed—never! And there's that horrid Miss Green going in a Paris dress, and she'll dance with Herbert. If she can catch him, she will do it to-night. And poor me left to die an old maid, and go and live in the country with Aunt Billings, perhaps! For, you know, we are living up to our income, and pa is sure to fail, or something. Oh, that jacket! My whole future depends on it!"

"Couldn't you wear your pale blue? It's pretty," said her mother. "After all, you've only had it on once."

"I'd die first!" cried Miss Bertha.

But at this moment the girl who opened the door ran in with a parcel.

"The basque, Miss," she said.

And Bertha seized the package eagerly, and, shaking out the exquisite mass of embroidery, slipped her arms into the sleeves and began to button it about her waist.

"There!" she said, all aglow with tickled vanity. "Isn't it becoming? And, after all, Herbert isn't here yet. There's the carriage now."

"Please, miss," said the girl Bessie, "the young woman said that she would like a little money to-night. She said excuse her, but she really is in need. She looks so poor and coughs dreadfully," said the girl looking at Mrs. Hoyt.

"Well, Bertha dear, you've got the money, I know," said Mrs. Hoyt.

"Yes, I have," said the young lady, "and I'd have paid her if she hadn't served me so; but I shan't now, just to punish her. I shall keep it, and pay her just when I like. Tell her so."

"Oh, miss," cried the girl, "excuse me for speaking, but she said she hadn't had anything to eat to-day. She couldn't work fast because she fainted twice, and she couldn't get here for weakness. Oh, miss!"

"Leave the room!" said Bertha; "and mother, hold your tongue! Just give the girl my message."

Bessie, who had a temper, too, ran down stairs, and told the shivering woman at the door exactly what had been said in a loud tone of voice, and in Mr. Herbert Hammond's presence.

The poor seamstress trembled and tried to keep back her tears.

"Can she not let me have a little?" she pleaded. "I need it for food."

"I told her so," said the girl, "but she didn't care. You'd better come back after a while when missus is alone. The old lady is a deal kinder than miss, but she's afraid of her. She'll pay you something, anyway, if miss isn't here to overrule her. She wanted miss to pay you now, but she's angry at having waited."

Herbert Hammond, waiting near the parlor door, heard every word. He saw the fair face grow paler, and was moved with indignation.

As the door closed and the servant retreated, he stepped out into the hall. It was his intention to offer the girl some little gift of money. Her want was so apparent that he felt it his duty; but before he had contrived to discover the secret of the lock—which was one of those patent affairs apparently invented to keep people from getting out of a house—the girl had vanished.

He looked up and down the street, and even stepped out into the snow, but could see no one; and a voice modulated to the most amiable society tone, sounded behind him.

"Ah, Mr. Hammond, I am keeping you very late. You will forgive me. It was a workwoman's fault."

[illegible] being the favored escort of the most beautiful woman present.

Long before a little girl, a child in a white slip, used to look at him with just such eyes when childish troubles made them overflow. "Rosetta," he said to himself, over and over again, "Why should that poor girl remind me of little Rosetta?"

At an early hour they drove home. Bertha valued that drive more than she did the ball. It gave Herbert the most favorable oportunity for a proposition.

However, he did not make it. He certainly paid the conventional compliments, but these was only lip service in them, had Bertha but known it.

Her maid's description of her mistress haunted him. Certainly it might have been an unfair one. The girl might be dismissed for some fault, and Miss Bertha might simply be ignorant of the need of the embroideress, and provoked, as he had been by his tailor's neglect at times. It might be merely carelessness.

Still he was not in the mood to put his life's happiness into this girl's hands.

When the carriage drew up before her home he stepped out and took her gloved hand with no flutter of the heart; but in a minute more he felt it throb violently beneath his vest.

An awful pity—a great horror thrilled him through and through.

Upon the steps—a black object, scarcely discernable in the faint moonlight save for the pallid face and hands—lay the figure of a woman.

He knew before he bent over her that she was the seamstress who had been turned from the door.

She had returned, as Bessie advised, and fainted or fallen there.

Berth, with a scream, had flown up the steps and rung the door-bell violently.

The door was opened; the light from the hall flashed over Herbert's troubled face as he lifted the little figure in his arms, and without a word of explaination or apology, bore it into the house, and laid it on a cushioned sofa near the glowing fire.

"Call for a messenger boy," he said to the servant.

He was obeyed at once. The boy came. Herbert wrote a word or two on his card and gave it to him.

"I have sent him for a physician," he said. "I shall wait here until he comes. Meanwhile a little wine and a biscuit. I think this is a case of starvation."

"Oh, dear, dear!" cried the girl who had brought what he had asked for on a little tray. "Why, it is the young woman that did the embroidery. My heart bleeds now that I didn't ask her to come into the kitchen and have a bite. It's what I ought to have done when she was sent off without being paid. It's a shame the way the rich serve the poor."

Miss Bertha heard and winced. She made some soft remark about being in ignorance of the young person's situation, but it is doubtful if Herbert heard her.

He was trying to make the poor girl swallow a little wine, while the maid rubbed her cold hands and shed tears of real pity over her.

At last the effort was successful. A little life had already returned to the poor creature when the doctor arrived.

By this time Mrs. Hoyt had descended, and after looking at the girl he addressed her.

"Madam," he said "I can send for an ambulance, but if you are charitable enough to give shelter to this poor girl for the night I can feel more certain of saving her life. She should be put to bed at once."

"And there's my bed, and I'll sit up with her," cried Bessie, "poor dear, I am glad to do it!"

"I am sure," said Mrs. Hoyt, "that I shall be quite willing to do all that I can."

"You see it is on our conscience," said Miss Bertha, making the best of a bad situation. "She was evidently coming to our house for a small amount of money we owe her. She embroiders."

"Embroidery is the most poorly paid work that sewing women do," said the doctor. "I wonder if this poor girl has any friends who are anxious about her? Does any one know that, or her name?"

"I do," said Bessie. "She hasn't a soul. She hires a bed-room with no fireplace in it, and it's quite across town, and her name is Miss Rosetta Hall, and she's a lady born and bred. That's all the worse for her now."

"Rosetta Hall!" cried Herbert. "Doctor, I thought I knew the face; Mr. Hall was my best friend in youth. To him I owe much. I used to know this lady well when she was a child and I a young collegian. Poor girl! how has she come to this?"

"Ah," said the doctor, "were you in my position you'd know that the poverty which parades itself in beggary is light compared to that suffered by people who would rather die than beg; merchants who have failed; professional men who have broke down; people once prosperous and surrounded by friends, who lurk in garrets and cellars, and sometimes starve there."

That night the poor girl lay half unconscious in Bessie's bed. The next day a room was put at her disposal.

Bertha was not displeased. It gave her an opportunity of posing in the presence of Herbert, who called every day, as a tender sympathetic soul, full of benevolence and charity, a very handsome Florence Nightengale, in blue cashmere morning robe, with flowers in her hands for the sick room.

"It's an excuse to call often on me," she thought. "That little pinched creature can't attract him, though his talk about his 'gratitude' to her father is so constant. I wonder what he will do when she gets well, and proves to be that [illegible] person, a young lady who [illegible]

[illegible]

But some suspicion of the the truth entered, her mind when she saw the convalescent, a pale brunette, with great melting dark eyes—give her hand to the warm clasp of the big blonde-haired, florid Herbert Hammond.

* * * * * *

"A wedding in the church! And who is it that is to be married?" asks old Mrs. Mill, who takes great interest in weddings.

"It's quite romantic, Mrs. Mill," replies the minister's pleasant wife. "It is Miss Rosetta Hall who is the bride and Mr. Herbert Hammond who is the bridegroom. We all thought he was going to marry that handsome Miss Hoyt, but it seems that Miss Hall was a little sweetheart of his as a child, and her father's death had left her penniless.

"Mr. Hammond had searched for her for years, for her father started him in business and was the cause of his making a fortune; and he always loved little Rosetta, but he never would have found her if she had not fainted on the Hoyt steps one night. Bessie says she had told Miss Bertha she needed food, but she had been sent away without pay. Bessie has lived with me, and talks a good deal about the Hoyts, if I will let her; but at all events, there Rosetta lay, and Mr. Hammond saved her life; and this is the pretty end of the story."

THE PROPER THING.

Plomb or lead is the leading color at present.

Black silk will be more worn than black satin next season.

In the street black toilets are more frequently worn than ever.

Old time balzarine has been revived for dresses. It is very durable.

Hoods of embroidered silk are among the novelties for evening wear.

The small close princess bonnet promises to be the favorite for autumn and winter wear.

Bonnets and hats of silk Jersey webbing and felt will be largely worn during the coming autumn.

Navy blue alpaca trimmed with silver braid of white mohair makes pretty gowns for young ladies.

White pique dresses with a vest of blue or black velvet are worn by those who object to white wool goods.

The most marked feature of the coming season's dresses will be the absence of the "bunchy" side draperies.

Tartars velvets in the colors used by the Scotch clans are to be worn as dress trimmings and also on bonnets.

Rosary beads in carved woods are the novelty. They are used to edge the brims of bonnets and for other ornamental purposes.

The correct mourning boquet is strictly purple and white. A feather fern or two or a little smilax may be used, but no other green.

Children's skirts and kilts are worn very short, and all skirts for little girls are made fuller in the back to give appearance of tournure.

Silk and satin are no longer correctly worn on the street, the tailor-made cloth or novelty wool frock having completely superseded everything else for walking.

Pansy dresses of several purple shades, relieved by yellow flowers in the bonnet and on the corsage, are refined in color, especially when made of fine cashmeres enriched with velvet.

Round hats have narrow brims closely rolled against the crown. While crowns are still high, they are not in the exaggerated shapes worn during the summer and low crowned turbans and English walking hats will be much worn.

Only a Mistake.

When Congressman Lawler, of Chicago, made his first visit to New York, some years ago, a friend invited him to a restaurant, where they called for soft-shelled crabs. Lawler had never seen any before, and did not know what they were. He liked them, however, and a few days afterward, wishing to regale himself again with some of the toothsome crustaceans, he hunted up the restaurant, walked in, and sat down at a table, but he had forgotten the name of the food he desired. Looking over a bill of fare, he saw "lobsters!" He call to the waiter and said: "Waiter, have you any lobsters?" "Yes," said the waiter. "Bring me a dozen," said Lawler. "A dozen!" exclaimed the waiter, in astonishment. Lawler saw that he had made a mistake, but he was not going to admit it. "Confound you," he said; "don't you suppose I know what I want? Bring me a dozen." The table was cleared of everything on it, and Lawler pitched in. He ate all he possibly could, and called for a glass of brandy, looked up at the waiter, and said: "Waiter, I was not as hungry as I thought. How much is my bill?" "Fourteen dollars and fifty cents," replied the water. "Why, it is not as much as I thought it would be," said Lawler. "Here, you needn't mind the change," and handing the waiter fifteen dollars, Mr. Lawler walked out.—[Indianapolis Journal.

Rowing a Gondola.

It appears to be very easy to row a gondola. The chief engineer stands in an unconcerned attitude on the quarter-deck, and with a careless, indolent forward motion, leans against his oar, and the boat goes forward or round a corner or dodges another gondola, with a celerity and intelligence that has something human in it. To every forward lounge of the gondolier there is an accompaniment in the way of a creak at the crooked rowlock. There is not much of the musical drip that we read about, as the Venetian rarely lets the oar-blade come out of the water. His skill is something marvelous, and during all the time I lived in Venice, a period extending over two entire days, I never saw one gondola strike another. I cannot say the same for the gondoliers, for I saw a couple of them come to blows on a question of precedence. Even this, I understand, is an occurrence of great rarity, although these bold mariners are great on the matter of verbal defiance. I engaged a gondolier by the hour and had him strike out in the open water, from the front of Doge's palace. He evidently thought I was going over to the church of St. George, I think it is called in English, from whose tall, square tower the best view of Venice can be had. When we got well out, far from the critical gaze of the idlers on the wharves, I said to the astonished man, by signs and broken Italian:

"You may come here in front; I want a turn at the oar."

It was some time before I got him to comprehend what was wanted, and then he put on an expression of the greatest horror; he lifted his long oar and sent it perpendicularly down in the water, till only his hand grasping the end of it was out, and as it floated up from the depths to the surface again, he hauled it dripping on board, saying in the choicest Italian:

"You see, you hopeless idiot, how deep it is, and I have a wife and seven children at home, and am not insured."

He once more put the oar in its place, and motioned energetically with his hand for me to sit down and calm myself, while he did the manual labor. I was not to be sat upon in this manner. I said that if he would not come forward I would go aft, and this I proceeded to do.

With a torrent of the worst language I ever heard used in Italy, he seemed to say that if I was resolved on suicide and murder, to at least give him a chance for life and not persist in coming on the rear end of the gondola while he was there. He then drew in the oar, placed it along on the right gunwale, if that is the correct term, and all the while using the most libelous language, walked past the little cabin along the left gunwale—an operation which on any other boat of similar size would have inevitably resulted in an upset—and stood beside me. Then he shrugged his shoulders, cast an upward look as if calling Heaven to witness that this was not his doing, and signified that the victim was ready. I walked gingerly aft and planted my left foot against the little block that was fastened in the small bit of deck, apparently for the purpose of affording a foot-rest, and bent my right leg gracefully behind me, making several easy inclinations forward with an imaginary oar.

"How is that for position, old man? Not so bad for a beginner, eh?"

The unhappy gondolier groaned aloud and cast a regretful look at Venice, as much as to say: "Beautiful city, must I leave thee thus?"

I next picked up the oar, which was much heavier than I expected, and in getting it into position I rocked the frail craft considerably, and once nearly stepped out into the sea. The wretched man in front refused to sit down, being evidently prepared to make a dive for it when the time came.

"Are—you—ready?" I cried in the best Putney style.

I dipped the oar in the water and gave it a valiant shove forward. To my surprise the vindictive gondola, instead of going ahead as I expected, made a sharp turn to the left as if its upright steel crest wanted to look around and see what was the matter. The oar floated out of its rest, and by hanging on to it I saved myself from going over. But hard as it was to keep a person's feet aft, it was much more difficult for'ard. The doomed gondolier had braced himself up for a shove ahead, but when the sudden side swing came, he made one wild grasp in the air and then went down in a heap, saving himself and the boat by catching on the opposite gunwale.

"Now, see here, Mr. W. Clark Russel," I said, "for an old navigator, such conduct is simply ridiculous. If you can't behave yourself while on board, why, you'd better step ashore."

The gondolier saw that safety lay in sitting so he sat down, his face towards me, but persisted in giving me the most minute instructions about how to handle the oar, accompanying the same with gestures that were more suggestive than his language.

Once more I got the oar into place; once more I forged ahead; and once more that inquiring prow tried to turn round and look at me:

"What thing upon its back had got Did wonder more and more."

Still using the most unparliamentary language, the gondolier put his open hand in the water, and showed that I must hold the blade at a certain angle. I again placed the oar in the notch cut for it, a position which it persistently refused to maintain, and putting it at the correct angle exceeded my strength. The angle at which it was set developed an ungovernable tendency in the blade to [illegible]

[illegible] water on one side, and my outstretched hand grasping the oar, which tried to float away, on the other. I drew the floating oar to the side of the boat, and then with painful cautiousness, drew in my feet, and assumed a more dignified attitude. When I caught my breath, I said to the picture of despair sitting in front:

"Admiral Seymour, if I thought you gave me that diabolical suggestion on purpose, I would report you."

But it was evident from his dejected attitude that it had been given in good faith, and was only another instance of good advice gone wrong. Hauling in the dripping oar I was about to try again, when the gondolier started to his feet, crying, "Avantee! Avantee!"

I looked up, and saw a sort of lugger with chrome-colored sails bearing down upon us.

"I guess you'll have to do the avaunting yourself, Mr. Plimsoll," I said, hurriedly shipping the oar and getting in front again.

The joyful navigator stepped to the rear, flung the blade overboard, while the shaft sought the proper notch of its own accord, and stayed there. With both hands, and the weight of his body he shot the gondola from under the bow of the chromo, then with one hand he worked that oar as if it were a feather, half closed his eyes, and hummed a tune, to which he kept time with the easy undulations of his body, propelling the gondola as if it were mere child's play.

"Oh, that's all very nice, Mr. Hanlan!" I said, settling down in the easy cushions; "but a few minutes ago you were the most frightened Venetian in this inundated city.—[Luke Sharp in Detroit Free Press.

AN ELEGANT SUBSTITUTE

Religious.

Christianity goes right on to warm and cheer all nations. Men may shut their window blinds of prejudice so they can not see it and may smoke their pipe of speculation till they are in the shadow of their own vaporing, but the Lord God is the sun and all the earth shall yet bask in the warmth and brighten in its illuminations, aye, when fully let loose it will be a swift gospel and who can calculate the speed of its undulations! Aye, the pure, white light of the gospel holding in it all the beauties of earth and heaven, the voilet plucked from amid the spring grass and indigo of southern jungles, and blue of skies and green of forests foliage and yellow of of autumnal forests and orange of tropical groves and the red of sunsets, all brought out under the spirtual spectrum, Great Britain will take Europe for God, and the United States will take America for God, then both nations together will take Asia for God, then all three will take Africa for God, who art thou, O, great mountain? Before Zerubbabel thou shalt become a plain. The mouth of the Lord hath spoken it.—[T. De W. Talmage.

Three Peculiarities

Hood's Sarsaparilla, the great blood purifier and regulating medicine, is characterized by these peculiarities, namely:

1st: The combination of the various remedial agents used.

2d: The proportion in which the roots, herbs, barks, etc., are mixed.

3d: The process by which the active medicinal properties are secured.

The result is a medicine of unusual strength and curative power, which effects cures hitherto unequalled. These peculiarities belong exclusively to Hood's Sarsaparilla, and are

THE BUSINESS OUTLOOK.

Indications on all sides substantiate the welcome prediction of a general improvement in business this Fall. These predictions are fast developing into facts. Iron works which have been closed for months and in some cases, years, are starting up. Steel rails are advancing in price at the rate of a dollar a week. The prospects for a bountiful harvest are very flattering. In this vicinity the good feeling and financial condition of the farmer has been greatly impaired by the continuously inactive condition of the cheese market and consequently low prices for dairy products, together with the heavy losses in tobacco by the ruinous results of the recent hard storm, and will effect our local trade to some extent. Other farm commodities at this writing promise fairly well. Bradstreet's report last Saturday is as follows:

"The general business situation continues quite as favorable as reported last week. The activity is mainly confined to print cloths, bleached cottons, wool and boots and shoes, but the feature of the week is found in the improvement noted in the eastern iron markets. Notwithstanding the reported gain in this line at the South and West manufacturers and dealers east of the Alleghenies had failed to report a like gain. Within the past week the improvement has become more general, and while no one in the trade admire the likelihood of a boom, all feel satisfied that there is a better business in sight. The movement of wool at all seaports has been liberal. Prices are firm and gradually advancing. The six week's gain is sustained and production is in excess of that of a like period last year. The movement of dry goods in agents' and jobbers' hands at the east has been free and previous advances are fully sustained. August sales of dry goods at Boston are heavier than those in the month of 1884. The movement of general merchandise affected as it is in lines noted is regarded as seasonably active. Wheat growers West and Northwest are holding back their grain and the result in some regions will be to unfavorably affect general trade. Grocery staples are quiet with the exception of sugar which shows an improved consumtive demand. Dairy products are higher with an indifferent demand."

The business revival will no doubt opperate slowly at first. The many idle institutions throughout the country which are depriving thousands of men of labor can only resume business as a substantial movement in the condition of affairs in the right direction commences. The experience of the last year has been very beneficial to business men in that it has called forth their keen abilties for financiering and implanted a system of economy and self denial that will demonstrate its usefulness in times of prosperity. Many have lost their footing the past year from a lack of forsight, having perhaps, tied up their ready cash in non-salable goods at the very outset of the close times, and and in many other like ways. Now that the revival has at last come it would be well to observe that the business men right here at home who have expended a liberal amount of their profits in printer's ink through the colums of the local papers during the dull times will be the first to feel the beneficial effects of the change. Wait and see.

BE PREPARED.

In another column will be found some resolutions from the Board of Health in regard to vaccination as a precautionary measure to prevent the invasion of smallpox. Our readers are all aware of the existence of this contagion in Canada and of its rapid growth. At this season of the year the disease is most dangerous and there is little probability that it will be confined to Montreal alone, despite their stringent efforts to suppress it. Fulton is in close proximity with the direct line of travel between the States and Canada, and is therefore serously threatened with danger from the infection. We do not aim to create a needless scare but it is a fact that danger is apparent and it is best to be prepared for it. Once here and the results are incalculable. See that yourself and children are properly vaccinated. The Montreal Witness says: "The people of Canada and of the United States whose lives are endangered have a right to insist that the law of compulsory vaccination shall be rigidly enforced whether people like it or not.

THE name of Hon. Edward B. Thomas of Chenango county will be presented at the Republican State convention as a candidate for the office of Attorney General. He has been twice elected State Senator from his district which is composed of Broome, Chenango and Delaware counties. His qualifications for the office are not unknown throughout the State.

PRESIDENT CLEVELAND and party came out of the woods Saturday, and the President spent Sunday with Dr. S. B. Ward at Albany. Col. Lamont joined him, and the President and Private Secretary visited Governor Hill at the Capitol. The President went to New York by the West Shore road, and thence to Washington. The vacation in the North Woods was greatly enjoyed.

AN Albany Dispatch says that political observers who have been through the state, agree that Hill will be nominated by the Democrats, and that with the Republicans the force will be about equally divided between Carr and Morton, with a chance that Davis Davenport, or Seward may come in as a compromise. THE great ocean race between the English yacht Genesta and the American yacht Puritan, is off until Friday. The first trial of Monday was only half sailed owing to the lack of wind. The Puritan was two miles a head when the race was abandoned. In the second trial which came off yesterday a foul was made by the Puritan in attempting to cross her antagonists bow. Her sails were badly torn and the Genesta's bowsprit was broken.

In 1874 frosts occurred in New York and Massachusetts for six consecutive days in August (from the 23d to the 28th) but the following September temperature was as high as usual or higher in almost all sections of the country. In August, 1875, there were were destructive frosts in Minnesota on the 21st and in New York state light frosts on the 23d and 24th, but the sequel was not an exceptionally cold September in the northwest. In 1877 frost was reported as far south as Cape May on August 13 and in Iowa a week later, but the temperature of the ensuing September was higher than usual over the whole country except on the Rocky mountain slopes. In 1878, so memorable for its fine crops, frost occurred in Dakota on August 16, in Massachusetts a week later, and in Iowa, Connecticut and New York on the 24th, while September of that year was abnormally warm over almost all parts of the United States; and very near a parallel case was recorded in August and September both in 1880 and 1884. September temperatures in 1877 and 1879 were generally low in the United States, but not to such a degree as to blight late crops.—[New York Herald.

An important decision relating to the eligibility of candidates for the Cornell scholarship has been rendered by Judge Martin of the supreme court. Mary E. Wright, who stood third in the recent examination at Ithaca for the scholarship contested the appointment on the ground that the candidates who were first and second in the examination were not pupils of a school in the county. The Judge decided that candidates for the position must be residents of the county and pupils of a school therein to be eligible, and he awarded the scholarship to Miss Wright. "She always speaks of Americans in terms of glowing enthusiasm, calling them the most generous, chivalrous and appreciative of the nations."

RIEL'S CITIZENSHIP.

Secretary Bayard not Disposed to Initiate Inquiries into the Subject.

Major Mallet, an influential French Canadian now in the United States, sends a communication to Riel's sympathizers at Quebec, in which he gives the substance of an interview held with Secretary Bayard respecting Riel's case as follows :—

1. The American government will not take the initiative in the researches to be made to establish Riel's title to American citizenship, or his rights in that quality.
2. Up to the present the American government has not given any attention to the question beyond inquiring from the War Department as to the truth of the statement that Riel was made a prisoner on American soil, this inquiry having been made on the demand of a citizen of the city of New York who asked for information on the subject.
3. The government will not consider the question in any way unless it be presented for its consideration in a formal manner, with a statement in writing of the facts and arguments upon which an application for its intervention is based.
4. The government is not disposed to investigate the facts or review the proceedings of the court which passed judgment on Riel unless it is shown that Riel's trial was conducted according to more rigorous methods than would be adopted in the trial of a subject of Her Majesty the Queen under like circumstances.
5. The government recognizes the principle that every country has the right to determine for itself what constitutes treason, even if he were an American citizen by birth or process of naturalization. The Secretary considered Riel's case like that of the Irish revolutionaries, as they are styled, in so far that the American government would do all that it was proper to do for Riel, as it had done for others.

The most destructive hail storm ever known in that section of Maryland, occurred in the vicinity of Port Tobacco, Saturday evening. Entire fields of corn and tobacco were destroyed, in many not a leaf of tobacco having been left on the stalk while it was little more than half ripe. The hail stones were as large as pullet's eggs and the destruction was general. The damage in Charles county is estimated at $100,000.

In Chicago, during the past week the health inspector condemned 170 cholera-stricken hogs to the tanks. Sunday in a slaughter house at the yards he condemned 26 that had been killed and dressed and were ready for market. The hogs were the property of various scalpers. Cholera has never been so prevalent among hogs at the stock yards as it has been this season, and scalpers, it is alleged, intsead of endeavoring to stamp out the disease by refusing to purchase, deliberately buy the stock in the hope that they can evade the health inspectors.

The riots between Germans and Czechs in Bohemia continue, and greatly disturb the Austrian government. It is feared Germany will take umbrage at the state of affairs and demand heavy indemnities for injuries to the Germans. Fall reports from Erie, Chautauqua Cattaraugus, Niagara, Orleans and Genesee counties show that the recent rains have not damaged the crops to the expected extent. Oats have been damaged some, but other grains have fared better and promise well. Potatoes are a large crop, but there are fears of rotting. In Cattaraugus county the potato bug is reported as making unprecedented ravages. The hay crop was large and of good quality. In the dairy counties the yield of butter and cheese is large, but there comes a wail from the dairymen that prices are too low. Grapes are plentiful and of good quality. Fruit seems to be abundant. Niagara county peaches will be scarce this year. Plums promise well. From the buckwheat growing sections the reports are encouraging. Though the Hessian fly is in Genesee county, farmers are not discouraged and are putting in a large quantity of fall wheat.

Cheese Market.

(FROM THE UTICA HERALD.)

AT UTICA Sept. 7.

Buyers were not jubilant over last week's transactions, and claimed that they could not afford to repeat them with the New York market at 8c. for high. On the other hand, some of the best factories refused to sell August cheese at less than 8c., and as a consequence held over their entire offering. Buyers offered 7¾c for a number of best lots, but it was of no use. The sales are therefore much smaller than on any Monday this summer. Cool weather and a good make of cheese enable factorymen to hold over their stock very comfortably. They say that if dairymen can not get more than 55c. a hundred for their milk, they might as well stop milking, fatten up their cows and sell them to the butcher. They would be better off in the end. Those who are making butter have much the best of it this year. They are getting at least one-third more for their milk than the cheese dairymen. Everybody hopes for better times, however, before the season is over. Transactions for the day are as follows: 4 lots, 400 boxes, at 7c.; 2 lots, 107 boxes, at 7⅓c.; 47 lots, 4,887 boxes, at 7¼c.; 11 lots, 1,335 boxes, at 7⅝c.; 12 lots, 1,471 boxes, at 7½c.; 8 lots, 667 boxes, at 7⅝c.; 2 lots, 200 boxes, at 7¾c. Sales 9.087 boxes; commissions 482 boxes; total 9,569 boxes. Ruling price 7¼c. Transactions one year ago, 11,218 boxes at 9¾c. for ruling; two years ago, 8,000 boxes at 10c. for ruling.

LITTLE FALLS, Sept. 7.

CHEESE.—This market has been the dullest and trade the lightest known here for weeks. Dairymen were very firm in their determination not to accede to a decline in price from last week. Many salesmen would not have taken less than 8c. The weather has been cool so long and still continues so, and the August make of cheese is so fine, probably the finest of the entire season's make, that salesmen will not part with it until they are sure they have secured the best possible price, and they feel disposed to take some risk in securing this end. Everybody agrees that stocks are very fine, much ahead of the usual August product. Nobody attempted to do much business. it being taken for granted that none, or scarcely any would be done. Upon the average about the first week's cheese of August is now gone from the factories here. Following are the transactions :

Lots.	Boxes.	Price
1	58	7 cts
4	215	7¼cts
27	1,524	7½cts
1	118	7¾cts
9	463	Com.
42	2,378
Farm Dairy	850
Total	3,228

FARM DAIRIES.—The market in the morning showed considerable life and good prices were paid by the home trade for the cheese offered. Eight hundred and fifty boxes sold at 7 and 8¼c., but one lot at the latter price; two or three lots brought 8¼c., several 8c., and the bulk 7¾c.

BUTTER.—Forty-three packages of creamery sold at 21½ and 22c., the bulk at former price. Fifteen packages farm dairy sold at 17 and 18c.

AT FULTON.

The market here opened rather dull and a drop of ¼ cents from last week, makes the dealers very quiet. Twenty-three factories were represented with 2,115 boxes of cheese. About one half of the above amount was sold at 7¼ cents. The balance held over. The price one year ago was 9¼ cents; two years ago 9¾ cents.

The cheese brands ordered by the bill recently made a law, are now ready for distribution by the dairy commissioner. The branding plates are of brass. Each bears the words, "New York State Full Cream Cheese, State Brand." Each plate will be numbered, so as to provide against duplicating or counterfeiting. The law does not compel any cheese maker to use this brand. But it provides for a fine in case he uses it on any other than cheese of full cream quality.

NEW YORK, Sept. [illegible]

A Fulton man returning from a trip abroad, reached his native place on Saturday evening. As he registered at the hotel he asked the clerk, "If this was the quiet little town he left only ten years ago?" "Same town only a little changed" said the clerk. "Fulton used to be a town to rest in, but now there's too much business for real quiet, so I guess I'll go on down to Oswego and go to sleep." He went, and wrapped the quiet stillness of the sleeping city about him and has not been heard of since.

* * * * * *

Gum! Gum! Gum! Everywhere the girls chew gum. I met them chewing by the sea side, on the cars, and on the quiet farms. I suppose that if they chews to do it, it's none of my business. I'd do it chew if I wanted chew. But the question is, why do they chew? Does it improve their dear faces! Some of the girls do not look very pretty in the act, but one thing is sure, they can keep their molars working even when they have no listeners. One young lady told me hat "chewing gum (chew) aids (chew) digestion (chew) and good (chew) digestion (chew) is conducive (chew) to longevity, (chew)." No doubt that she will digest as quick as her non-chewing sister. "And Getchen kept on chewing,"

In a deep gully just below Catskill station on the West Shore road, some religious enthusiast has printed in bold white letters, the warning, "Prepare to meet thy God." Last week as I passed over the road, the train was delayed several hours by a wash-out near the town. Part of the train was ditched with the engine, and the engineer was killed. As our train went slowly from the gully, and passed the fatal wreck, I could not help but notice how the combined influences of the warning, and wreck affected the people. Laughing eyes became quiet, everyone looked serious, some frightened, and a cloud of gloom overhung the car. It was not dispelled until we had left the melancholy scene, and were running rapidly in the sunlight.

* * * * *

Further town the road in the most dangerous and gloomy place, I noticed the same words on the rocks coupled with the still more forcible "Repent or you'll go to hell."

* * * * *

At the Free Methodist camp meeting lately held in your village one of the speakers presented a very strong picture of "a burning, sulphurous, seething, everlasting, torturing hell," in contrast to a delightful realm called heaven. The picture was greatly overdrawn, and to the younger listeners that night must have sounded strange. The "Sheol" of to-day is milder, and as the days of such orthodox preaching are over I am inclined to believe that brimstoney words will repel rather than draw "the sinners into the fold." Words less strong would be more effective.

A German druggist on Third avenue, New York, was approached one morning this week by a billious looking tramp After a lengthy preamble the tramp finished his tale of woe, thusly, "When I've finished my story, Boss, I'm sure you will coincide with me, and give—— ——"Hey Fritz" said the man of drugs to his boy. "Co inside, und pring oudt de prussic acid boddle." The coroners jury that sat on the tramp decided that "paralysis of the heart and brain killed him. The druggist and the crowd escaped.

CHARLIE'S JOKE.

An Oswego young man has helped a Fulton girl hold the rustic seat in her father's summer house in place all through the glorious summer evenings. Tuesday evening they were busily engaged in their pleasant task. He held one of her hands, while she plucked the aromatic sprays of the evergreen tree that invaded their retreat. Thoughtlessly she ate them, until Charles (he had been reading a joke book) exclaimed:

"Don't eat any more, darling, they will make you sick."

Ethel. "I guess not love. Why do you think so?" Charlie looks abstractedly through the door, and softly hums, "when the leaves begin to turn."

Another fellow courts her now.

All sorts and conditions of trunks. Big trunks and little trunks, old and new by wagon and truck load pass me in review. The drones of this world are on the homeward fly to begin again, in town, the endless search for pleasure. People with bronze faces, and elastic step, just from the country, pass me on the street.

The avenues seem alive with carriages that have not passed over them for months. Capital quickens the wheels of trade, and the dealer has a smile, or nod for all and the poor, feeling at once their burdens lightening, takes up with with more vigor the daily struggle of life.

A man went into the country last Sunday for a walk. He carried his overcoat on his arm, but finding it burdensome, hung it on the fence. OBITUARY.

Thomas Hubbard, one of Oswego county's pioneer prominent men and the oldest citizen of the town of Volney died at his late residence Friday, September 4th. Mr. Hubbard was the fourth son of the Rev. Thomas Hubbard of English descent. He was born in New Durham, N. Y., May 10th 1790. When a small boy he moved with his parents to Mass. and after some twenty years he came to Camden, N. Y., where he remained but a few months, and moved to the town of Volney on the farm where he lived until his death. Before leaving Mass. he married Miss Charilla Gaylord, in the year 1811. Of this marrage were born Thomas M., Ira G., Mary Ann, Geo. W. and Catherine A. Hubbard. Coming to this country the year before the beginning of the war of 1812, he assisted in defending Henderson's harbor against the attack of the British. During his whole life he followed the occupation of a farmer, and in his day he chopped and cleared some two hundred acres of timbered land. With a constitution strong and vigorous at first, he by well guarded habits retained the vigor of youth until about four years ago when he had a stroke of paralysis, from which he never fully recovered. His wife died in the 1863 at the advanced age of 73 years. In the year 1864 he married Mrs. Keeler, widow of the late Horace Keeler, who contributed to his happiness in his declining years. In the year 1817 he connected himself with the M. E. church and always remained in that faith. He was a Democrat of the old school, but never took an active part in politics. The funeral was held from the Mt Pleasant church, Sunday, Sept. 6, the Rev. Charles E. Miller officiating. The remains were intered at Mt. Pleasant cemetery.

The death of Mattie Williams of No. 148½ East Adams street, Syracuse, which occurred at the residence of her sister Mrs. E. M. Derusha, on the corner of Park and Highland streets in this village, Monday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock, is one of the saddest events which has occurred in our midst in some time. Miss Williams came to this village some three weeks since to visit her sister, and was apparently in good health. About one week ago she was taken seriously ill with malaria fever. Medical aid was at once summoned, and all that human hands could do was done for her relief. But it was the will of Providence that she should die and last Monday her spirit passed away. Deceased was the youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. G. Williams of Syracuse, who were present at the bedside of their dying child during the last three days. Deceased was about 18 years of age. A large circle of friends are left in Syracuse who will mourn her loss. The remains were taken to that city yesterday morning. The funeral will take place to-morrow.

The six-year-old daughter of Dumas LaLonde of this village, died yesterday morning of typhoid fever. Funeral services will be held this afternoon at 4 o'clock, from the house.

A new kind of potato bug has appeared in the vicinity of Lyons, which promises to do large damage. It is described as a shiny, bug about one-half the size of a common potato bug. It has a particularly hard shell and a very small head. Its color is dark brown, its legs are long and very strong. It works its way into the hills of potatoes by going down the stalks of plants. Once inside a hill of potatoes it attacks the potatoes by eating its way and there deposits eggs which are hatched within the potato. There is no way to ascertain the extent of the insects' damage, unless the hill itself is opened and that kills the potatoes. The farmers know of nothing that will kill the insect.

[illegible] around Fultonians lingered the [illegible] of riding over the new road. The first ticket sold in Syracuse was to Fulton, and was bought by F. M. Baker, travelling agent for [illegible] & Warner, cigar manufacturers. He is a brother of Harry Baker of this village. Mr. Baker put the ticket in his pocket and walked away. When he saw that it was ticket No. 1 he returned and called for another to the same place, and said that he was going to keep the first one as a souvenir.

All along the line of the new part of the road people were out to see the train. At Phoenix about 2,000 people were assembled, among whom were many farmers from the surrounding country, who had brought their wives and children with them. The crowd shouted as the train ran in, the ladies waved their handkerchiefs and the school children mounted the fence around the schoolhouse and cheered at the top of their lungs. The Phoenix people have worked hard for the road and now they expect to reap the benefits.

"The complaint of a few of the business men of this place," said a Phoenix man, "is that in place of being an advantage it will prove detrimental to our commercial interests, inasmuch as it gives facility to people to do their trading in Syracuse. Thank God, the number of these men is small. They do not understand that we have excellent water power which can only be developed by communication with other cities." The trip from Oswego to Syracuse, a distance of thirty-five miles, was made in one hour and thirty minutes.

The route is a pleasant one and the new road-bed rides as smoothly as any of the old lines. The rails are of steel and the grades are easy. The bridge at Three River Point is pronounced by those who should know as absolutely safe. The statement that it has been condemned by the Railroad Commissioners is claimed by the railroad authorities to be without any foundation. It appears to be strong and safe.

When the train reached Syracuse every seat was taken, seventy-six passengers being from Phoenix alone.

They Preferred To Walk.

Last Sunday morning two well-known citizens of Fulton concluded to have a pleasant sail on the river just below the village. It is presumed that they were out exclusively for pleasure, although no evidence is at hand to substantiate that theory, and several rumors are current that fish lines, bottles of bait and several packages of cigarettes were among the articles on board. During their trip the boat, owing to some unaccountable reason became capsized, and the occupants were left floundering in the river. Fortunately both are quite tall and when standing on tip-toe were just able to keep their chins above water. They succeeded in reaching the shore and home with no other loss than their hats and several articles that were too heavy to float. When asked the cause of the accident, one of them said, "there was no tip-over, we simply got tired of riding and concluded to get out and walk." We would suggest that boating parties hereafter—especially on Sunday—take along several life preservers as part of their outfit. This would insure their safe arrival on shore, at least.

True Economy.

You hear about the "old reliable" or, the "old standby" dealer, 'Tis a primitive expression, and gulls no one. In the string present it makes a big difference who sells "fiddle strings" the cheapest. If the "old reliable" don't, he is going to get left that's all. By the way, why is it that the "old reliable" comes out at last and quotes fiddle strings 10c. each, when for years' past he has had no difficulty in "roasting" double and treble and quadruple this small sum from the buyers? Reasion obvious!

The younger dealer steps in and "takes the wind out of his sales!" "Get's there, Eli," studies the tendency of the public, and then cuts a slash into the huge profits and lets the life out of them. Brings the margin down to a healthful condition. It does the buyer good. 'Tis hard to realize sometimes, that "If you don't get up and get"

"Somebody else will you bet."

This is bad poetry but full of the meat of truth.

Board of Health Notice.

To the citizens of Fulton and vicinity. You are hereby notified that the board of health of this village passed the following resolution:

That in view of the menacing existance of smallpox in Canada and elsewhere, and by the urgent request of the State Board of health to comply with the laws of 1885, which requires all local Boards of Health to guard against the introduction of contagious and infectious diseases, they resolved to provide thorough and safe vaccination for all persons within its jurisdiction who may need the same. The Board has therefore on the advice and approval of the State Board of Health, obtained from the New York city sanitary bureau, a quantity of fresh nonhumanized virus, and all persons who have not been vaccinated and those who have been vaccinated in infancy that are over twelve years of age, are hereby requested to attend to this important duty immediately for the protection of the whole community as well as each individual and family, and it is so necessary to secure its protection in all places and for all classes of people that none have a right to neglect it for themselves, their families, the public schools, or the community.

Therefore all persons attending any of the public schools of this village after a given time (of which time due notice will be given) will be required to bring a certificate from a physician that they have been successfully vaccinated or be excluded from school until such evidence is given. Provision will be made by the Board of Education, or trustees for those who are attending school and are unable to pay for vaccination, leaving no excuse for any to neglect it. Physicians can procure vaccine virus of the Board of Health, at cost.

To the Afflicted.

Dr. Galt came to Oswego Falls and commenced the practice of medicine last November and during the time up to March 1st. 1885, treated successfully some fifty females who were afflicted with difficulties pecular to their sex.

The Doctor has during his entire practice treated over eight thousand and out of that number hundreds that had been confined to their beds from 1 to 20 years, and not one but was raised to comparative health, after they had been given up by the physicians that attended them. If necessary will give positive proof of validity of the above statement. Dr. Galt also claims that in his medical researches he has made as remarkable a discovery as has ever been made in medicine, that is. in a remedy that positively will cure a fever sore or any ill conditioned ulcers, abscesses or or sores on the body of any name or nature. It removes the poison from the blood and circulation. and destroys all impurities. The Doctor has cured some 14 cases while at Oswego Falls, entirely sound, as bad cases as could be found. Any person wishing to ascertain the validity of the above statement is requested to write to the editor of the Oswego Falls Observer or the postmaster or both. The Doctor is assisted by his wife, who is a thorough physician and who understands the treatment of female diseases the same as the Doctor, and ladies feeling delicate in being treated by the Doctor can be treated by Mrs. Dr. Galt. Fever sores cured according to contract or no charges made. Charges moderate and the hard times for money considered. Persons having such difficulties are requested by the Doctor to make him a call and find out themselves whether this true is or not. Examination free without he is called away and then charges moderate.

How to Break off Bad Habits.

Understand the reasons, and all the reasons, why the habit is injurious. Study the subject until there is no lingering doubt in your mind. Avoid the places, the persons and the thoughts that lead to the temptation. Frequent the places, associate with the persons, indulge in the thoughts that lead away from temptation. Keep busy; idleness is the strength of bad habits. Do not give up the struggle when you have broken your resolution once, twice, thrice—a thousand times. That only shows how much need there is for you to strive. When you have broken your resolutions, just think the matter over, and endeavor to understand why it is you failed, so that you may be on your guard against a recurrence of the same circumstance. Do not think it an easy thing that you have undertaken. It is folly to expect to break off a habit in a day which has been gathering long years.

AGRICULTURAL DEPARTMENT.
TOPICS FOR FARMERS.

The exclusive feeding of clover to cows gives hard cheese and soft butter.

The hay crop in this country in 1883 was estimated to be worth twenty-three million dollars.

An experienced milkman states that one secret of his superior products is regular feeding of all the salt the cows care for.

Adding potash in the form of wood ashes to sandy land supplies needed moisture, besides furnishing a mineral in which sandy soil is usually deficient.

Cows with light fore quarters as compared with the hind quarters, should not be chosen for milkers. Such proportions indicate a lack of digestive power with thinness of milk.

If in a rich farming section low land is not productive, the chances are that a few underdrains will make the land all right; but do not attempt to drain the land in a locality where the naturally dry soil is sterile.

Corn cobs have considerable manurial value, being rich in potash, and on heavy soils they help to make the land light and more easily cultivated. In heaps exposed to the rain they will rot down in a year so that they can be evenly distributed as fine mold.

A correspondent of the Rural Home has been testing several methods of keeping milk. He found that milk which was sealed up and kept in water over night kept longer and was of better quality than when treated in any other manner. He believes milk should be rapidly cooled, but sealed from contact with the air.

How to Wash Butter.

If butter is to be washed at all after salting and working says the Boston Cultivator, it should be washed with pickle or brine, and not with ice water and fresh water. Fresh water will at once whiten the butter with which it comes in contact, take the salt out and becomes strong in taste almost immediately. For this purpose the pickle should be made several days before needed for use. It must be of good strength, that is, the water must be thoroughly saturated with the salt, the result of stirring and dissolving. Washing in cold brine does not soften the butter. Salt maintains the water at a low temperature. Ice water in contact with butter has an injurious effect. Even slight droppings of ice water in upon a parcle of butter for twenty-four hours will whiten it, and spoil it by rendering it strong and unmerchantable as a choice product. Take a tub of butter and place upon the top of the butter a cloth saturated with fresh water, and in less than a day the upper layer will be whitened, the salt removed and the first stages of rancidity induced. Many otherwise choice parcels of butter have been spoiled by the use of fresh water, and even by the use of water in which salt has been stirred about for a short time. Unless the pickle is made very strong, a work of time, it is but little better than fresh water for this purpose. The best creamery butter is salted at the rate of ounce to the pound of butter, and if washed at all, pickle only is used.

Dairy Notes.

Use a pure blood male as long as you run a dairy. Test every cow individually and know what you can get from her. It is not the amount of butter in the milk, but the amount you can churn out, that decides the butter value. It pays to resort to artificial heat to keep up the temperature of the cow's body by warming the stable and the water she drinks. It is reprehensible to expose cows to cold spring storms, after being sheltered and dry all winter. It will cause new milch cows to shrink materially in their flow of milk. Do not be afraid of the cow that eats heartily, but shun her if she is a dainty, light eater.—[F. D. Curtis.

This Time of Year.

Plant the latest turnip. Keep the runners cut off strawberry plants, except those wanted for layering. Go through the raspberry and blackberry patches and cut away the old branches that have born fruit. Thin out the young shoots three or four to a hill. Top these when three or four feet in length, and tie them to stakes. They will be stronger next year for it.

Quantity and Quality. In the Diamond Dyes more coloring is given than in any known dyes, and they give faster and more brillant colors. 10c. at all druggists. Wells, Richardson & Co., Burlington, Vt. Sample Card, 32 colors and book of directions for 2c. stamp.

Who Lost The Pocketbook?

A salesman in one of the large dry goods stores the other day picked up a worn-out empty pocketbook, and thought he would have a little fun with it. He therefore placed it on the counter, half concealed by the goods lying thereon. Presently a lady shopper enters. Her eyes light upon that wallet as by instinct, and while pricing half a score of articles, she endeavors to cover it, quite carelessly, of course, now with her handkerchief, then with her satchel, and again with her parasol; but the salesman without appearing to notice her actions, each time removes the portemonnaie out of danger and into the light. Finally she adopts new tactics, and picks it up, with the remark:

"Somebody's left a pocketbook."

"Yes?" replies the clerk interrogatively; "thank you." And he takes the leather and disappears with it for a moment. Upon his return the lady asks, with a slight show of interest:

"Was there much in it?"

"Only three dollars," replies the salesman carelessly, and with the ease of one who has been used to lying all his life.

"And who gets it if it isn't called for?" asks the lady.

"The firm," is the epigrammatic response.

The lady goes out. In ten or fifteen minutes a boy comes in and asks: [illegible] pocketbook with three [illegible] this morning?" [illegible] replies the salesman, "but it [illegible] called for."

[illegible] "Oh!" and retires. [illegible] smiles audibly.—[Boston [illegible]

[illegible] Railway, tells [illegible] story about the capture of his engine when he was "pulling" a passenger train. His engine was 56 and he pulled out of Nashville with a full train of passengers bound for Chattanooga. At Stevenson, Ala., they stopped to wood up, which they had to carry in their arms. They started again, and just before reaching Anderson station Jim Wilson, the fireman, who had turned around to get some wood, sung out, "Great Scott! Look at that rattler!" "I jumped," said the engineer, "as he uttered the words, and, to my horror, saw a tremendous rattlesnake climbing down from the tender with half his body over the platform. My hair commenced to crowd my cap off my head, and for to say I was scared doesn't begin to express it. Jim gave a yell, and when I looked around two seconds later to see what he was doing, I saw the rattler crawling into the cab. But Jim was nowhere to be seen. I pulled back the throttle and leaped over the snake, which rattled as I made the jump, and landed in the tender. Standing on a log I watched that snake take possession of the cab, which he did without any ceremony. The steam was not completely shut off, and knowing that the train of passengers was at the mercy of that snake, I started back towards the cab with a stick in my hand when the rattler, hearing the noise I made, elevated his tail and rattled in a mighty lively fashion. That settled it. By this time we had crossed the mountain and were sailing along pretty lively. No. 6 was waiting for us at Stevenson, and I knew that if that snake ran the engine till we got there the coroner of the town would be kept busy for a week. Crawling over the tender and making my way into the postal car, I hurriedly told my story to Charles Henderson, the messenger, and then to Frank Armstrong, the expressman. We held a hasty consultation and determined that something had to be done, and done quickly. The train was moving along lively, and the thought of No. 6 at Stevenson made us fairly wild. Arming ourselves with pistols, furnished by the postal expressman, we carefully crept out to the tender, and looking into the cab, saw that doggoned rattler stretched out on the board by the window. Well it didn't take more than three seconds for us to put three bullets into his carcass. They struck him so quickly and so thoroughly that before he could get a chance to rattle he was as dead as Hector. Grabbing a stick, I jumped into the cab, threw the snake out of it and got hold of that throttle. Well, to make a long story short, I landed old '56' on time at Stevenson; and strange to say, the first fellow I saw was the coroner, but thank heaven, there weren't any inquests for him to hold."—[Nashville Dispatch to St. Louis Globe Democrat.

The Tree-Frog.

As a mantel ornament, a paper weight, a pen-rack, or a tooth-pick the tree-frog may not be as brilliant a success as his short-horn Texas cousin; still he is not as green as he looks, and is, on the whole, an honor to the sex. Just give him for a mattress, a tender spot on the wood shed roof, with a shingle for a counterpane and he will live high all summer, and won't cost you a cent for repairs, and then, too, he's the quietest boarder—never kicks about a few mosquitos in his sleeping apartment, or a stray fly or two in his daily hash; but, like the philosopher he is, removes all such offensive partisans by philosophically swallowing them!

And so accommodating and gentle, manly, and so polite to the ladies; why, he'll actually plaster himself inside the rainwater barrel or kitchen sink, out of everybody's way, and stick there for hours, in the most uncomfortable position, just so as to be where your wife can lay her hand on him in the dark at any time.

Talk about faith, and the efficacy of prayer! Did you ever see a tree-frog climb up in a cherry-tree, and holler for rain? No matter if there isn't a cloud in the sky you had better fly 'round and shut the windows, take in the dry clothes from the line, and pick up a basket of chips, and be quick about it too, for the rain has got to come.—[Texas Siftings.

FARMERS' FOLLY.

Some farmers adhere, even against the full light of fact and discovery, to the old fashioned folly of coloring butter with carrots, annatto, and inferior substances, notwithstanding the splendid record made by the Improved Butter Color, prepared by Wells, Richardson & & Co. Burlington, Vt. At scores of the best agricultural Fairs it has received the highest award over all competitors.

A Stream of Bullets.

The Maxim gun is a weapon weighing only sixty-five pounds, mounted upon a light tripod, which can be lowered, raised, moved laterally with one hand as easily as a garden hose, and which pours out automatically 600 shots a minute. There is no crank to turn; there is no labor of feeding. One man simply sets the frightful stream of bullets going, and then directs it at will, raking a whole regiment front if he likes with it, or keeping the fire within a range of five feet or five inches. The basis of it all is the utilization of the recoil force to fire the next shot. Each time the recoil energy, instead of being wasted in kicking the gun over, is used to eject the empty catridge, cock the gun, place the next cartridge and fire it.

Hard to Believe.

It is hard to believe that a man was cured of a Kidney disease after his body was swollen as big as a barrel and he had been given up as incurable and lay at death's door. Yet such a cure was accomplished by Kidney-Wort in the person of M. M. Deveraux of Ionia, Mich., who says: "After thirteen of the best doctors in Detroit had given me up, I was cured by Kidney-Wort. I want every one to know what a boon it is."

To concoct the morning corned beef hash, it vexes of her soul
To behold a wreath of pansies where she most must cut and slash,
So she scrapes it off because the paint might permeate the hash.

On the household rolling pin is tied a pretty yellow bow,
And its lilies of the valley oft commingle with the dough.

Georgia Justice.

In a certain backwoods community a suspicious character had been arrested for cattle stealing. When his trial came up he was represented by able counsel. The judge looked upon the lawyer with suspicion, and seemed to feel that his presence was entirely unnecessary. He assumed an unusual amount of dignity, and called the court to order. Having been in the Superior Court a few times he had caught an idea of how criminals were tried there, so he arraigned the prisoner and demanded "guilty or not guilty?"

The prisoner responded, "Not guilty," and the justice looked him squarely in the face and said, "Now, see here, you know that's as black a lie as you ever told."

The lawyer suggested that the Court should not pass judgment before hearing the evidence. The Court intimated mildly that he knew his own business and needed no assistance. As soon as the evidence was concluded, the Justice proceeded to pass judgment. "Stand up," he said to the prisoner. "It is ordered by the Court that the defendant be confined in the chain gang at hard labor for twelve months."

"Hold on, your Honor," said the lawyer; "you have no jurisdiction to pass such a sentence as that. You can only bind the prisoner over to answer for the crime at the Superior Court. You have no right to sentence him to the chain gang."

"Now, see here young man, this Court thinks she knows herself, and it will stand you in hand to keep your mouth shut. If I hear another word out of you I'll give you six months in the chain gang."

The lawyer collapsed, and the Justice proceeded with the call of his docket.—[Cartersville American.

The Way of the Street Flirt.

Whatever idea the young girls who practice street flirting may entertain of their seemingly innocent pastime, it may be set down as a certainty that when a respectable young man desires the acquaintance of one who may some day become his wife he does not go out on the street and seek her acquaintance through a flirtation. But on the other hand, the flirt of the street, no matter how innocent and fair her intentions may be, is the last person he would select as his life's companion. He desires purity without and above suspicion. The young girl who engages in this kind of pastime should bear in mind that she not only endangers her good name, but that her name is a by-word among those with whom she flirts, to be banded about in saloons, on the street corners and in the low down, unholy places in the city, fastening on her otherwise fair name a stigma or stain that will follow her years after she sees her folly and attempts to mend her ways.—[Newark American.

Mornings frosty grow, and cold,
Brown the grass on hill and wold:
Crows are cawing sharp and clear
Where the rustling corn grows sear;
Mustering flocks of blackbirds call;
Here and there a few leaves fall,
In the meadows larks sing sweet,
Chirps the cricket at our feet—
In September.

Noons are sunny, warm and still;
A golden haze o'erhangs the hill,
Amber sunshine's on the floor,
Just within the open door;
Still the crickets call and creak—
Never found, though long we seek—
Oft comes faint report of gun;
Busy flies buzz in the sun—
In September.

Evenings chilly are and damp,
Early lighted is the lamp;
Fire burns and kettle sings,
Smoke ascends in thin blue rings;
On the rug the children lie;
In the west the soft lights die;
From the elms a robin's song
Rings out sweetly, lingers long—
In September.

DR. SPENCER'S CRIME.

I was sitting in my office, half-dozing over an interminable article on nutrition in the last medical review.

The fire in the grate was low, the night was stormy and the clock was on eleven. I was just about to turn off the gas and retire, for, being a bachelor, I sleep in the room connected with my office, when there was a pull at the bell.

I started up suddenly, for this was something new. Middlebury was a decorous sort of a place and the people usually managed to be sick at seasonable hours.

Old Mrs. Jerome had been threatening to die for the past five years, and every time I visited her she solemnly informed me that when the decisive moment did come she desired me present. But nothing ailed the old lady beyond now and then an indigestion from too much high living, I had never been called upon to be present at her death.

Now, I thought it must be old Mrs. Jerome is a going.

I took up my lamp and went to the door. A strong gust of damp, sleet wind nearly extinguished the light, but shading it with my hand, I discerned the face of a woman.

"Come in," said I, holding open the door, but she declined with a gesture of impatience.

"You must come out," she said, in a sharp incisive voice, "and be quick about it."

I put on my overcoat without demur, locked the surgery door and stepped into the storm. As I did so the woman laid a firm hand on my arm and putting her face close to mine said;

"Dr. Lockwood, can you keep a secret?"

"I think so, madame."

"Swear it."

"Is this secret of yours of a professional character? That is, is it anything you wish to confide in me as a medical man?"

"It is."

"Very well, then, I swear it."

"That is right."

A man respects an oath, though why he should is a mystery, since men's mouths are running over with them.

"Whither are you taking me and for what purpose?"

"To the Clifton house to see my mistress." I started.

Clifton house was an old mansion recently taken by Dr. Spencer, a stranger to every one in Middlebury. Spencer was a tall, dark, rather distinguished looking person, who had hung out his sign in the village only a few doors above mine, but as yet he had no practice.

He was unsocial in the extreme avoiding his neighbors persistently, and when he did speak it was in such a curt, half-savage way that no one was likely to prolong the conversation.

"As we walk along," said my companion "let me explain to you just what is necessary, for you know my mistress is very sick."

"I beg your pardon, is it Mrs. Spencer or Miss Melrose?"

She laughed bitterly.

"Miss Melrose! I would stab her to the heart sooner than own her for a mistress. My mistress is a lady—noble, royal and gentle of birth. It is an honor to serve my mistress."

"And is she ill! How long since?"

"Ever since she married him—curse him!" she muttered in a fierce tone; 'but I must tell my story, or rather hers.' Two years ago, through the desire of a dying father, Alice Herdon became James Spencer's wife. Before that she was a healthy, blooming girl; immediately after the marriage she began to fail. Do you see anything strange in that?"

"Not necessarily."

"Let me enlighten you further. Dr. Spencer at one time was engaged to Miss Lucille Melrose, but he broke the engagement and married my mistress instead. Miss Melrose was as poor as Job's turkey. Miss Herdon was an heiress, and Dr. Spencer was deep in debt and hard pressed by his creditors. Do you see anything strange in that?"

"Perhaps so. Go on."

"When my mistress married Spencer she was only seventeen and had been taught to obey her father in everything. She was a gentle, affectionate child, and it would have been easy for Spencer to have won her love. But he did not care for that. It was her money he wanted. It paid his debts and bought him fast horses; it set his table with nice and costly dishes, and put it in his power to keep Miss Melrose robed like a queen. All this time my mistress had been slowly but surely sinking, and look you, Dr. Lockwood, I believe she is not dying of disease, but of" she lowered her voice to a whisper as she spoke the word—"poison."

"Impossible! This is a grave charge."

"Of poison by her husband who, at [illegible]

Spencer are out at the same time, or I should have called a physician before; but to-night they are both away by the death of Miss Melrose's sister and will not be back until to-morrow. With the consent of my mistress I came for you, and oh, Dr. Lockwood, I pray you to save my dear mistress. I nursed her when her mother died and left her a helpless infant; all through her innocent youth she was like a child to me; and now to see her fading hour by hour before my eyes. Good heavens! If I knew beyond a doubt that he was guilty his life should pay the forfeit."

I was already beginning to feel a deep interest in Mrs. Spencer, although I had never seen her, and like her own nurse I was beginning to feel a great animosity for Dr. Spencer.

Mrs. Spencer received me in her bed chamber. It was on the second floor, and was furnished with exquisite elegance.

Everything in the room bespoke the delicacy and taste of the occupant. The warm air was fragrant with the odor of heliotrope; and glancing around I saw the purple blossoms and green leaves in an alabaster case on the edge of the south window.

She was a woman who, when once seen, could never be forgotten. I have seen in my life many beautiful women but never one so lovely.

She was tall and straight, with a purely oval face, liquid brown eyes, and a dash of hectic in her cheek, which is never seen in perfect health.

She received me, as I know she did everyone, gracefully, and though there was a slight embarassment in her manner when I spoke of her illness, she answered my professional inquiries without hesitation.

As for myself, I laid aside all false delicacy and questioned her plainly as to her symptoms. Mrs. Hurd, her nurse, remained in the room, and added many important little items of information.

When she spoke of her husband, it was with a sort of hopeless sadness which distressed me greatly.

Not a breath of suspicion against him in her answers to my questions, and I felt sure that at present she knew nothing of what Mrs. Hurd had such serious apprehensions. I was glad it was so, for with her finely strung organization, it might have produced serious results. I made my examination of the patient, as closely as I could, and drew my own conclusions. I could have sworn that Mrs. Spencer daily swallowed arsenic in small quantities, and the deadly drug was telling fearfully on her constitution.

She said, answering my questions, that she had no physician except her husband. He thought himself better acquainted with her case, and therefore better qualified to treat her. He never left medicine with her to take; he always brought it fresh from his office, and administered it promptly.

There was little enough I could do in such a case. Anxious to do everything, the very circumstances of the affair left me nearly powerless.

A charge of such nature of course I could not make out against Dr. Spencer, without the amplest proof. If I hinted a suspicion, every one would set it down to my professional prejudice; and if I could not substantiate my statement the doctor could make me pay dearly for such slander uttered against him.

The only dependence seemed to be in Mrs. Hurd. To her I unbosomed myself freely. I told her without reserve that I thought Dr. Spencer was killing his wife by slow poison, and I besought her to constantly watch to save the victim, and discover some proof by which we could fasten the guilt upon him.

She smiled grimly and promised obedience, and I gave her a powerful antidote for the poison I suspected, and went home perturbed and anxious in mind. I did not sleep that night and all the next day I was in a high fever of excitement. A ring at the bell made me tremble—a step on the gravel outside my office stopped my breath, and I hardly knew what I expected to hear. I felt sure before I slept I should hear something.

And now I must tell the story as it was told me.

Dr. Spencer returned home the morning after my visit to the Clifton house. He looked wretchedly, the nurse said; appeared gloomy and depressed. Miss Melrose came with him and looked decorously sad over the death of her sister. Women of her stamp always do mourn to perfection. They never overdo nor underdo the thing, as women of feeling are likely to do.

Dr. Spencer came at once to his wife's chamber. He thought she looked ill, and prescribed a cordial at once, saying he would go and fetch it.

"You are always ordering cordials for her," said Mrs. Hurd, musingly. "Why not take something yourself? You look like a ghost!"

He eyed her keenly, but replied composedly:

"I think I will take some of the cordial myself, for I do not feel quite well. Alice, dear, shall I bring it here and drink your health?"

Mrs. Spencer smiled sadly in assent—she never disputed her husband—and he went out. Presently he returned with two glasses. Both contained liquor colorless and odorless. Mrs. Hurd was watching him with her heart in her throat, for she told me that she felt the decisive moment had come. There was something in the gray pallor of the doctor's rigid face told her of a desperate purpose in the man's soul.

He lifted the glass to the right of the tray and gave it to his wife.

"Drink it, dear," he said. "It's a panacea for all evils. I am also going to take a glass of it," and he pointed to the glass still on the tray.

Mrs. Spencer accepted it and was putting it to her lips, when Mrs. Hurd in- [illegible] her mouth, and my old bones are so full of rheumatism that it nearly kills me to go down stairs."

The doctor turned and bent on her a look as though he meant to read her through But she kept her face passive. If he had any suspicions her manner quieted them, and putting down the glass he left the room. Then Mrs. Hurd changed the position of the glasses.

When he came back—and he was gone but a moment—the nurse stood exactly where he had left her, and Mrs Spencer was lying back in her chair with her eyes closed.

Again he lifted the glass, this time it was the one intended for himself, and placed it to the lips of his wife. She swallowed the contents, drank a little of the water he brought her, and thanked him in her sad, sweet way.

"Now for my own cordial," he said, with affected gayety. "I indulge in something a little stronger," and as he spoke he tossed off the mixture.

"It made me stone cold to my fingers' ends to see him do it," said Mrs Hurd, relating the circumstances to me, "but as Heaven is my witness, I felt no conscience. I argued like this: 'If it was simply cordial, it would do no harm; if it was poison, his blood would be on his own sinful head.'"

He went to bed half an hour afterwards, complaining of fatigue. In the morning they found him dead.

I was called to the post-mortem examination, and we discovered in the stomach of the deceased, a sufficient quantity of the deadliest poison known to modern science to kill half a dozen men.

My brother physicians agreed that the man was insane, and had probably taken the dose in one of his unsettled fits of mind. I did not dispute them, but even before Mrs. Hurd told her story, I had my own theory as to the cause of his death.

There was no public exposure, however, Mrs. Hurd and I agreed that it would profit no one to make the wretched affair public, and so we kept our own counsel.

Miss Melrose, in spite of my convictions that she had an active part in the conspiracy against Mrs. Spencer's life, I could not help pitying. Such a miserable, worn and haggard face as hers I have never seen, and when they buried Dr. Spencer she was confined to her bed with brain fever.

I attended her in her illness, but though she recovered in health, she was a harmless maniac, whose delight was in gathering flowers and decorating the doctor's grave with them.

She is living still, and still gathers flowers and lays them on that grave, singing to herself a low incantation, which no one ever pretends to understand.

Not until Mrs. Spencer had many years been my wife, and the faithful Mrs. Hurd slept under the violets, did Alice ever know of the perfidy of her former husband.

And when I told her, after the first shock was over, she crept into my arms and whispered:

"But if it had not been for James crime I should not have found you Herbert. So good does sometimes come out of evil."

AN EDITOR'S DUTY.

To Be Independent He Must Be Wealthy—His Place in Politics.

When an editorial angel shall descend and occupy a seat in the sanctum of a daily newspaper, then, and then only, may we hope for perfection. An independent newspaper is often promised, but we do not believe that any such journal exists to-day. To be independent the editor must be wealthy, so that every desire can be gratified and that he may be above and superior to temptation. He should have no politics and no friends. To be in politics is to lose independence, and to have friends is to cripple the pen. His intimate friends may do wrong, and then he must needs whitewash them.

Is there an independent newspaper published in New York to-day? Not one. Every editor and proprietor has prejudices to nourish, interests to uphold, friends for preferment, grudges to be repaid or favors to ask. To point out the weakness of each particular paper and editor would be to draw down upon us the ill-will of all. From Bennett, with his telegraphic and other interests, down to Brother Bowen, with his patent rat-traps, rose trees, and washing machines for sale, all are imbued with the jobbery of trade or the hope of political advancement. Editors are extending "a pressure" upon the president the whole time for the promotion of friends; the mayor of this city is embarassed in his appointments by proprietors of newspapers, begging that this and the other man may be appointed.

It's well for an editor to write of politics, but to dabble in the pool himself is a mistake. He may write of and criticise the drama, but he should not seek to play Hamlet himself. Editors, for instance, should not have interests of a commercial nature which may lead them to attack useful measures in the legislature, fearing that their own purses may suffer if the people's burdens are lightened. The editor's place is at his desk; his only interest should be the welfare of the public and the success of his paper. If the paper cannot support him let him get out of the business. If it will support him handsomely he should abstain from other enterprises.—[The Journalist.

One day last week, when the engines were flying down Washington street in response to an alarm of fire, a man who was running was stopped by an eager citizen in quest of information, who asked hurriedly of him: "Where's the fire?" [illegible]

THE PROPER THING.

Bretelles and corsets are in high favor.

Black chantilly remains the choice for real lace for trimming.

Canary color and moss-green are among the leading combinations.

Trimmings arranged for one side only are a feature of the season.

Everything that is tied about the neck is knotted just back of the left ear.

Braid and fancy galoons will probably continue in favor another season.

The shoulder knot, or bow of satin ribbon, is worn upon the left shoulder.

Plain, striped and figured velvet will be largely worn during the coming season.

The heavy wool fabrics of the Astrakhan effect, will be used for winter Jerseys.

Princesse dresses are sometimes made open in front to show an elaborate petticoat.

The fancy for wool lace extends to its use in lingerie for the neck and dress corsage.

Combinations of plain and figured goods will be used for autumn and winter dresses.

Wool laces for autumn use are shown in flounces a yard deep, to cover the entire dress skirt.

Curled mohair and Astrakhan borders appear on novelty goods for fall and early winter wear.

Brides wear white roses, lilies of the valley and myrtle very generally in place of orange blossoms.

Carved wood beads in brown shades are used on the front breadth, collar and cuffs of brown velvet dresses.

Wide sashes with narrower hat scarfs to match are imported in wool goods, in moire, faille, satin and velvet.

The new fine woolen tulle, which neither creases nor tears, promises to be very popular dressy toilets.

A gay new fabric is wool of several colors in small irregular bits like mosaics or like the designs of crazy quilts.

In woolen stuffs Parisian modistes are fond of finding a colored selvedge and allowing it to show, so that it forms a trimming.

There is a revival of the Irish crotched laces in cream and ecru shades in broad widths for covering the fronts of dress skirts.

HOUSEHOLD HELPS.

If paper has been laid under a carpet all dust may be easily removed.

To prevent flat-irons from scorching, wipe them on a cloth wet with kerosene.

Mortar and paint may be removed from window glass with hot, sharp vinegar.

To bake pies to a fine brown, dip a clean, white cloth in fresh cream, and brush lightly over the top crust before putting into the oven.

For mildew stains, mix together soft soap, laundry starch and half as much salt, and the juice of a lemon. Apply to the mildewed spots, and spread the garment on the grass.

To beautify the nails, hold them for fifteen minutes in warm water. Then while flexible, cut carefully. Polish them with a piece of chamois skin dipped in a mixture of oil and very finely powdered pumice stone.

To make linen beautifully white, prepare the water for washing by putting into every ten gallons of water a large handful of powdered borax. Or, boil with the clothes one teaspoonful of spirits of turpentine.

There is nothing better to save space than wall bags of linen, made of a straight piece doubled half-way up and divided unto three or five pockets, as required, with a flap turned over from the top and made into cases for small articles—scissors, toothbrush, thimble and the like. The lower compartments are for slippers, rubbers and an extra pair of boots. These wall-bags are not intended as regular dressing-cases, but they are handy, easily made, and can be put upon a wall or a door in a hotel or on board a ship in a minute, and take up hardly any space when not in use.

Wanted Him For a Model.

A flashily dressed young man standing just inside the front door of the passenger coach, pretending to look out the window at the scenery. Occasionally he walked to the rear end of the car. He did a great deal of attitudinizing, apparently for the benefit of the ladies. He seemed to think his shape perfection and enough to travel on in case the cars stopped. His manly form was so conspicuous that pretty soon a passenger went up to him and said:

"Sir, you excite my admiration. I am an artist—a sculptor—and I should like your sevices as a model."

"Aw, thanks, sir; are you making an Apollo?" returned the young man, with a look of triumph toward the lady passengers.

"Oh, no," said the artist; "cigar signs."—[Chicago Herald.

Rise and Fall of the Roller Rinkist

I have once more tried to ride a pair of roller skates. That is the reason I got down on the rink and down on roller skates. That is the reason several people got down on me. That is also the reason why I now state in a public manner to a lost and undone race; and unless the roller rink is at once abolished, the whole civilized world will be plunged into arnica.

I had tried it once before, but had not carried my experiments to a successful termination. I made a trial trip around the rink last August, but was ruled out by the judges for incompetency, and advised to skate among people who were hostile to the government of the United States, while the proprietors repaired the rink.

On the 9th of Sept. I nestled in the bosom of a cyclone to excess, and it has required the bulk of the succeeding months for nature to glue the bones of my legs together in proper shape. This is the reason I have not given the attention to roller skating that I should.

A few weeks ago, I read what Mr. Talmage said about the great national vice. It was his opinion that if we skated in the proper spirit, we could leave the rink each evening with our immortal soul in good shape.

Somehow it got out that on Thursday evening I would undertake the feat of skating three rounds in three hours with no protection to my scruples, for one-half the gate money, Talmage rules. So there was quite a large audience present with opera-glasses. Some had umbrellas, especially in the front rows. These were worn spread in order to ward off fragments of the rink which might become disengaged, and set in motion by atmospheric disturbances.

In obedience to a wild, Wagnerian snort from the orchestra, I came forth into the arena with my skates in my hand. It is a morbid desire to wear the skates on my feet that has always been my bette noir. Will the office boy please give me a brass check for that word so that I can get it when I go away?

My first thought after getting myself secured to my skates, was this: "Am I in the proper frame of mind? Am I doing this in the proper spirit? Am I about to skate in such a way as to lift the fog of unbelief which now envelopes a sinful world, or shall I deepen the opaque night in which my race is wrapped?"

Just then, the end of the rink erupted in a manner so forthwith and so tout ensemble that I had to push it back in place with my person. I never saw anything done with less delay or less languor.

The audience went wild with enthusiasm, and I responded by writing my name in the air with my skates.

This closed the first seance, and my trainer took me in the dressing-room to attend a consultation of physicians. After the rink carpenter had jacked up the floor a little, I went out again. I had no fears about my ability to perform the mechanical part assigned me, but I was still worried over the question of whether it would or would not be of lasting benefit to mankind.

Those who have closely scrutinized my frame in repose, have admitted that I was fearfully and wonderfully made. Students of the human frame say that they never saw such a wealth of limberness and looseness lavished upon one person. They maintain that nature bestowed upon me the hinges and joints intended for the whole family, and therefore when I skate, the air seems to be perfectly lurid with limbs. I presume that this is true, though I have so little leisure while skating in which to observe the method of itself, the plot or animus of this thing, as it were, that my opinion would be of little value to the scientist.

I am led to believe that the roller skate is certainly a great civilizer and a wonderful leveler of mankind. If we so skate that the summons comes to seek our ward within the general hospital, where each shall heal his busted cuticle within the walls where the rinkists squirm, we go not like the social wreck, morally paralyzed, but like a hired man taking his medicine and so forth—we may skate with perfect impunity, or any one else to whom we may be properly introduced by our cook.—[Bill Nye.

At a negro wedding, when the minister read the words "love, honor and obey," the groom interrupted him, and said; "read that again, sah; read it once mo' so's de lady kin ketch the full solemnity of de meanin.' Ise been married befo'."

A Great Victory

A Terrible Case of Scrofula Cured by

Hood's Sarsaparilla

"In the winter of [illegible] I was attacked with Scrofula in one of the most aggravating forms. At one time I had no less than thirteen large abscesses over and around my neck and throat, continually exuding an offensive mass of bloody matter disgusting to behold, and almost intolerable to endure. It is impossible to fully describe my sufferings, as the case was complicated with Chronic Catarrh. After three years of misery, having been treated by three physicians, I was worse than ever. Finally, on the recommendation of W. J. Huntley, druggist, of Lockport, I was induced to try Hood's Sarsaparilla. And now, after having taken twelve bottles, within the last twelve months, the scrofulous eruptions have entirely ceased, and the abscesses have all disappeared, except the unsightly scars, which are daily becoming smaller by degrees, and beautifully less. I do not know what it may have done for others, but I do know that in my case, Hood's Sarsaparilla has proved an effective specific indeed. As an evidence of my gratitude I send these facts unsolicited, and I am ready to verify the authenticity of this cure, by personal correspondence with any one who doubts it." CHARLES A. ROBERTS, East Wilson, N. Y.

This statement is confirmed by W. J. Huntley, druggist, of Lockport, N. Y., who calls the cure a great victory for Hood's Sarsaparilla. Send for book giving statements of many cures.

American Oratory Still Pre-eminent.

American oratory is not a thing of the past. Webster and Choate, Everett and Phillips, are dead; but their places are not entirely vacant. The orations delivered commemorative of General Grant are a credit to any country. Right here in New England,—and we have no doubt but that the same excellence was attained in other parts of the country,—there were delivered half a dozen or more orations of the very highest order—that of Mr. Blaine at Augusta, of Colonel Higginson at Cambridge, of General Butler at Lowell, of Senator Daws at Pittsfield, of Representative Long at Weymouth, of Senator Hoar at Worcester,—all different; all exhaustive; most of them historical; but all of true, as the needle to the north pole, to the patriotic, national idea of the perpetuity of American institutions, and the glorious destiny in store for the future of the United States of America. Senator Hoar's we consider the weakest, because he emphasized that portion of Grant's career which least of all deserved praise. Col. Higginson uttered a volume for the homes of America when he said that Grant "was never heard to utter a word that would not be spoken in his wife's presence." To the young men and old of America, Grant's life teaches one thing; that a man can be great, in the fullest sense of the word, and yet be strictly pure. In this age of scandal in high life, and painful disclosures of rottenness in men whom the world chooses to call great, America can point with pride to her immortal hero, and say, "Greatest of the great! purest of the pure! We challenge the Old World to produce his equal."—[New Moon, Lowell, Mass.

THE SILVER QUESTION.

To many, and we might say, the wise, it is becoming apparent that the business of the country is being greatly endangered by the unrestricted operations of the Bland bill. If this bill is not repealed, (and it is surprising that the business men of the country do not make an effort to have congress do away with it) the time will come sooner or later when every dollar of currency in circulation will represent not one hundred cents but eighty cents. What will be the result? Another demoralizing era of "cheap money." The grand total of standard dollars is 248,000,000 with continued increase at the rate of 2,000,000 per month, and the scheme of the Treasury is to force it in use by withdrawal of $57,000,000 of currency. It is shameful and dishonorable. To load the people with carrying about the silver dollar is bad enough without Uncle Sam's undertaking to cheat us out of a big percentage on every dollar. The Bland bill would never become a law had it not been for the misrepresentation of former coinage laws and the foolish prediction as to its beneficial results. The government of the United States of America should coin an honest dollar and one that will protect the poor man instead of bleeding him. The coinage of the vast amount of money mentioned above is simply pampering the "silver king" or silver mines, while at the same time it endangers the financial condition of the country. The first thing congress should do next winter is to set itself about to repeal the Bland bill, and until this is done there can be no true feeling of confidence for better times.

A WASHINGTON special to the New York Times says: "The preparation of the annual message to Congress will occupy a great deal of the President's attention from this time forward. Only two questions of policy are understood to have been determined thus far: First—there will be an extension of the provisions of the civil service law. Next—the nature of the legislation desired on silver. The President's attitude in regard to the silver question was defined in his famous letter to the silver men in Congress last winter, but it is known that a bill is now being prepared in the treasury department under the direction of Secretary Manning and Treasurer Jordan, which contemplates a compromise, on the basis of a plan suggested by Comptroller Cannon, in his last report and afterward proposed by Congressman Warner of Ohio. The coinage of the standard dollar is to be stopped and the consent of the silver men is to be won to this proposition by a continuation of the purchase of bullion. Certificates are to be issued representing the market value of the bullion, at the time of its purchase, and these certificates are to be redeemable at the quotation [illegible] the date of presentation. AT a meeting of the Republican state executive committee held at Jackson, Miss., last Wednesday, a resolution was adopted setting forth that in view of the fact that an organized opposition to the Democratic party in this state this fall is useless, because of the well-known impossibility of securing at the polls an honest election, it is the sense of the committee that no convention be called to nominate a state ticket. The Republicans of Mississippi are not very enthusiastic.

IN a recent speech of Vice-President Hendricks, at a meeting in Indianapolis, he expressed himself as being in sympathy with the Irish struggle in their country, for home rule. The English press is very indignant over this action and calls America severely to account for it. The New York Sun in a leading editorial answers our journalists over the waters, in a way that would do the heart of any American good to read. It is the very echo of American sentiment. Truly the editor of the Sun wields a mighty pen.

The crime for which "Wes." Allen was arrested in New York Sunday and taken to Syracuse, was stealing a $200 diamond pin from the shirt front of William A. Sweet, during the firemen's convention at Syracuse.

A. S. Warner, the president of the defunct First National bank of Albion is in Canada, where he is engaged in business. He says he is willing to come home and help settle up the estate, if he can be assured of protection from the law.

Senator Esty of Ithaca has given $5,000 and two village homes to the Ladies' Union Benevolent society—one of the buildings for a hospital and the other for an orphanage and place where poor working women can leave their children while at day service.

Frank Deady, formerly a school teacher, who managed a skating rink last winter, was found dead on the Rome Watertown and Ogdensburg track near Wolcott, Wayne county, Saturday, having been run over by the cars. The head was cut from the body, which was badly mangled.

The Doran & Wright Co., limited, commission brokers of Rochester and New York, have opened a new broker's office in the Opera house building, under the management of W.C. Tucker, the former manager of the office of Babcock & Andrews.

A large number of Italians have been taken to Batavia to work on the waterworks, for which the village voted an appropriation of $50,000. The native workmen are in consequence very indignant. and will endeavor to have the Italians discharged. It is claimed the latter will work for 75 cents a day, while the former demand $1.25.

Courtney and Conley have challenged Hanlon and Lee to row a double scull race and two single scull races for $500 a side each race, the distance in each race to be three miles with a turn. In the singles, Courtney is to be pitted against Hanlon and Conley against Lee. The races are to be rowed in the order above named, and the first race within four weeks from date, the day and place to be mutually agreed upon.

The Hannibal and Fulton stage route seems to be excellent trading property. The route has changed ownership three times within a week. Mr. Wesley Hendrick is now the owner and carries the whip.—[Hannibal News.

S. N. Dada of Fulton was in town yesterday. Mr. Dada will, we understand, spend a portion of his time in Phœnix hereafter, and can be found at the office of his son, Geo. S. Dada, over the post office.—[Phœnix Chronicle.

The withdrawal of Mannister Worts from the senatorial canvass in this district simplifies matters somewhat. The contest is now between Messrs. Sloan and Warner. It will be settled in Oswego county.—[Watertown Times.

Unknown parties entered the house of Nathan Hallock in Scriba, the other day during the absence of the family, and stole $250 belonging to Hallock's sons. A young man named Walter Putney has been arrested on suspension of being the burgular.

The post office at Parish was established in 1832. Out of the 53 years the postoffice has existed, the Democrats have held postmaster 29 years and the Republicans 24 years. It is a singular historical poltical fact, that during all these years no postmaster has ever been removed till this last appointment to make way for the opposite political party to hold the office.

At the Democratic convention of the Second District of Oswego held at Central Square Saturday, the following delegates to the state convention were chosen: James A. Clark, of Pulaski, H. Potter of Orwell, and A. T. Low of Hastings. To the senatorial convention were elected: G. W. Bradner, James Barnes, J. C. Hutchinson, O. T. Wright, Ambrose Grigg; judiciary, C. W. Avery, D. A. King and C. C. Brown.

The committee appointed by the boards of supervisors of Oswego and Onondaga counties to consider the matter of the bridge over the Oneida river at Oak Orchard, met in Phœnix Thursday and decided to advertise until September 25 for bids to be received and opened in Syracuse. The only specification expressed respecting the structure was that it should be warranted to support a strain of 100 pounds to the square foot.

The Prince of Wales is entitled to wear 70 different uniforms.

The Jeffersonian club of Watertown have come out strongly for Roswell P. Flower.

It is said that Louis Riel talks continually about his wrongs whenever he can get a listener.

The White House stableman informs an interviewer that President Cleveland does not care much for horses and prefers to walk.

Chairman Smith, of the New York Democratic state committee, says Gen. William H. Seward will receive the Republican nomination for governor of New York.

Alexander III, the Czar of Russia, is passionately fond of waltzing and frequently startles ladies at court by seizing them and waltzing without musical accompaniment.

What is a bill? A Hill is a man intellectually elevated to such a height that he can forsee the nomination and election of a Democratic governor of the Empire state.

Mr. Hendricks says the troubles in Ireland must be regulated as they are in Indiania—by the election of legislators from the soil. Sure enough, but Mr. Hendricks must remember that they have no $2 bills in Ireland.—[Chicago News.

We insist that a fair, non-partisan civil service means a service in which both political parties shall be represented, and not one which keeps nearly 100,000 Republican spoil-grabbing partisans in office, to the exclusion of Democrats, who are a majority of the people. [New York World.

The Democrats of the South are disappointed in Cleveland, and many are declaring that the country is going to the dogs under his administration. This is evidently the outlook of disgruntled politicians, for as a matter of fact, the cotton crop is the largest and best since 1861, and the sugar-cane never gave better promise.—[Syracuse Journal, Rep.

The Rome Sentinel says:—"The observant Republicans clustered around Saratoga make little attempt at keeping secret the fact that the war in the party this year is not so much for the governship as for the State Senate, which holding over, will partake in the election of a successor to Warner Miller next year. This, of course, explains sundry doings in certain Senatorial districts. Piatt, on the one hand, represents the Stalwarts, whose blood is up at the memory of the affairs of 1881. Miller himself is his own generalissimo, and is drilling the Half-Breeds more than some of them like. In this conection, there is a multiplicity of chances for the Democrats to walk away with the bone, and they probably will."

Cheese Market.

(FROM THE UTICA HERALD.)

AT UTICA Sept. 11.

Our market to-day has been quiet and rather dull, but last week's prices have been fully maintained. Sales, 10,091 boxes; commissions, 1,171; total 11,262 boxes. Ruling price, 7¼c. One year ago transactions were 10,573 boxes, with the ruling price 10¼c. Two years ago they were 11,850 boxes, ruling price the same.

LITTLE FALLS, Sept. 14.

CHEESE.—There has been only a fairly free sale of cheese here to-day. The market is considerable of a disappointment to salesmen, who expected a good market at 8c.

Following are the transactions of the day:

[illegible] Took In a Large Number of Stickers, and up to the Present let the Subscribers Whistle.

Several weeks ago a young man of prepossessing appearance arrived in Fulton and established what he called the "New World Wholesale and Retail Protective Agency," a commercial agency for the collection of hard accounts. Any merchant by paying $10 became a subscriber. These subscribers were furnished with blanks that were headed "You had better pay up!" These blanks were filled out and sent to customers who refused to pay their debts, and if the obligation was not immediately settled, the delinquent's name was given to the collector who would make daily calls until it was settled. This collector was said to wear a very tall hat on which was displayed in large gilt letters the words, "Commercial Agency, Collector of Hard Accounts." It was also rumored that if after repeated calls the debtor still refused to liquidate, the collector would make his appearance with a hearse and a coffin and other horrible things. A number of merchants did not need much urging to subscribe, and a large number of ten dollar bills rapidly accumulated in the prepossessing young man's pocket. After a short stay in town the p. y. m. had urgent business in some other locality, and leaving his "grip" in the hotel, he departed for pastures new. After he had been away for some time word was received that he would return on Sept. 5th, and that he would be accompanied by the collector, who would at once spread terror among the boys that were "good, but slow." Up to the present time the p. y. m. has failed to put in an appearance, likewise the collector. It is perhaps fortunate for him that he did not come, for if half of the threats that were heard were carried into execution, he would not succeed in making more than half a dozen calls. Last Monday a TIMES reporter was present at the opening of the aforesaid grip. It contained a small bit of sealing wax, an envelope, a diminutive piece of chamoise skin and a homeopathic vial. The landlord said that there was no necessity for the young man's leaving his satchel, as he owed him nothing. Meanwhile some merchants are wondering if they have got ten dollars worth of experience. We hope they have.

Annual Review and Parade.

Last Thursday the Fulton Fire department had their annual parade. The day was all that could have been desired, the streets were in fine condition and nothing occurred to mar the pleasure of the throngs of spectators who had come to town to view the procession and contests. At 2:30 o'clock the line formed in front of the engine house and headed by the Fulton band marched down First street and up Oneida, and after countermarching through the principal streets, returned to the engine house, where they were inspected by the Board of Trustees. The new uniforms of the Hook & Ladder company and steamer and hose company No. 1 presented a fine appearance and were much admired. After the parade an exhibition of raising the extension ladder to the top of Gage's mill was given by the Hook & Ladder company which attracted considerable attention. The contest between the steamers was an important feature of the day. They started from the house at a signal from the bell and were drawn to the canal on Wall street, No. 1 made the distance, got up steam and was ready to throw water in 7 minutes and 38 seconds. No. 2., time from house to starting engine, 7 minutes and 55 seconds. Mutal hose, time from house to coupling on engine 1 minute and 10 seconds; time from coupling to engine to raising nozzle 25 seconds. Johnson hose, time from engine house to raising nozzle after coupling on engine 1 minute and 45 seconds. A large number of business places and private residences along the line of march were elaborately decorated. Among the most important ones were the Bee Hive, Rosenbloom's, Goodjon's and F. E. Bacon's. The decoration of Hadcock's book store was much admired, a fireman in full uniform being in the window.

The "Swa-geh Concert Co." are giving free concerts on the street every evening, consisting of music, singing, etc.

George M. Avery of Syracuse, and Miss Gussie Chandler of Mexico, Oswego county, were married at the home of the bride's parents in Mexico yesterday.

The new uniforms for the Fulton band have arrived, and are on exhibition in Rosenbloom's window. They are very handsome and are elegantly made.

A young son of Nicholas Craver had the first joint of his right thumb taken off last Saturday in the carding room of the factories.

Post Schenck of this village will visit Phœnix Wednesday evening, September 30, and unite with the Posts in that part of the county in a grand parade.

The rails are kept quite warm on that portion of the the N. Y. O. W. railroad over which the Phœnix and Syracuse trains pass. Twelve trains pass daily over the track from Phœnix Junction to Oswego.

The Mexico fair closed last Saturday, after a very successful exhibition. The attendance each day has been large, and considerable interest centered in the trotting. Some of the exhibits were remarkable fine.

The two new stores on Oneida street are rapidly nearing completion. Bacon's store has been ceiled up and an improved elevator is being placed in position. New plate glass fronts are to be put in and when finished these new blocks will attract considerable attention.

Sunday trains 5 and 6 on the N. Y. O. & W. railroad have been discontinued. After this date, train 5 will not run from New York, and train 6 will not start from Oswego on Sunday nights. The sleeping car to and from Cape Vincent will be discontinued upon the same date, and hereafter will run between New York and Oswego.

One of the finest and most complete photograph galleries we have ever visited is F. M. Darrow's on Oneida street. The rooms have been entirely remodeled and enlarged, the latest and most artistic scenery has been added and with these accessories Mr. Darrow produces pictures second to none in the county. Call on him when wanting anything in his line, and you are sure to be pleased. The prices are guaranteed satisfactory.

Bright new silver dollars were extensively circulated about town Saturday night. There being a shortage of one and two dollar bills at the banks, manufactures paid off their help with the silver dollars. Some say that it is not the pleasantest kind of collateral to carry about your person, but unfourtunatly we are not annoyed in that way. Very few publishers of country newspaper are. Subscribers in arrears please take notice.

We regret to announce that Putnam Allen who went to Andover, Mass., to take a preparatory course of studies the coming year, before entering Yale, has been compelled to relinquish his work and return home, owing to severe headaches, caused no doubt, from previous hard study. Mr. Allen was advised to give up his studies for a time, but he was very eager to advance himself, so went. He successfully passed all examinations and then reluctantly gave up. After a period of rest Mr. Allen will, we hope, be able to resume his course. We understand he aspires to the medical profession.

Wanted in Fulton.

G. M. Bailey, Silver Creek, N. Y., wants an active boy or girl in Fulton to take orders for the best-paying goods sold by agents. Agents also wanted in Oswego Falls, Phœnix and Hannibal. Boys and girls at school easily earn $1 per day, taking orders. Send two cent stamp for letter containing particulars.

Violating the Law.

Ex-Postmaster John E. Coe of Lycoming, town of Scriba, was arrested Monday by United States Deputy Marshal Wood on complaint of Postmaster E. J. Lawton, charged with keeping a sign over his store marked "postoffice," in violating of section 3,829 of the laws of the United States. Coe had been several times requested by Lawton to remove the sign, but refused. Coe was held to bail in $300, and the case was adjourned to September 25.

BETTER TIMES COMING.

In anticipation of which we have filled our store with all the latest novelties of the season, many of which can only be found in Fulton at the Boston Bazaar.

Biography of O. P. Conger.

We publish below the following biographical sketch of our former townsmen, Oliver P. Conger, now district attorney of Kidder county, Dakota, which appears in the Fargo and Moorhead (Dakota) Daily Argus, accompanied by a portrait:

"Oliver P. Conger, district attorney for Kidder county, was born in Oswego county, New York, in 1859, and is now twenty-five years of age. At the age of fourteen he entered the United States naval academy at Annapolis as a cadet midshipman. After remaining there about a year and a half and becoming discontented with the service in times of peace he resigned and returned to his home in Fulton, N. Y. At the age of eighteen he commenced the study of law in the office of a prominent member of the bar, of Oswego county, N. Y. He afterwards entered the law department of Columbia college, from which college he graduated with the degree of B. L. in 1881, and was admitted in May of the same year by the supreme court of New York to practice as attorney and counsellor at law. He was engaged in the practice of law until 1883, when he went to Steele, Dakota, and became largely interested in farming and sheep raising, being one of the proprietors of the Kidder county stock company. In the spring of 1884 he was elected an alderman of the city and also held the office of city attorney. In the fall of the same year he was elected district attorney of Kidder county. He was a delegate to the last republican territorial convention at Pierre, is a member of the legislative central committee for his district, is chairman of the republican county and city central committees, and takes a very active part in politics. He is said to be a keen lawyer and has a lucrative practice. His acquaintances predict for him a brilliant future.

Yesterday's Convention.

At the Republican district convention held at Pulaski yesterday, for the second district, the following State and judicial delegates were elected: State, G. W. Sweet, Charles T. Oliver, W. H. Sweet, D. H. Trimble, A. O. Olmstead and J. L. Buckley: judicial, W. H. Steel, D. E. Wilds and S. C. Huntington. They are for Scripture. D. E. Ainsworth was nominated for member of assembly. Following are the senatorial delegates: G. Coville, A. Potter, C. W. Ranway, H. L. Russ, R. Cooper, G. S. Warner, J. L. Sage, G. N. Shafty, C. S. Talcott, D. Wilson I. P. Brown, H. V. Spencer.

At the Republican first district convention yesterday N. W. Nutting, H. C. Howe, J. T. Mott, S. B. Mead, C. E. Cornwell and J. A. Place were elected State delegates and instructed for Carr for governor. W. G. Gage, J. K. Stockwell, F. Hamilton, H. D. McCraffrey, M. Stowell, G. T. Clark, D. P. Lester, J. K. Smith, T. P. Kingsford, D. F. Acker, T. S. Brigham and C. H. Taylor were elected to the senatorial convention and instructed for George B. Sloan for senator, N. N. Stranahan, H. W. Howe and E. B. Powell were elected to the judiciary convention and instructed for G. A. Hardin for justice of the supreme court. N. N. Strannahan of Fulton was made chairman of the convention.

Republican Caucus.

The Republican caucus was held last Thursday afternoon in Church's hall at 4 o'clock. R. E. Phillips chairman of the town committee called the meeting to order and nominated H. E. Nichols for chairman. The following county delegates were then elected: Arvin Rice, J. W. Pratt, Fred Bennett, Herm Hulett, James Barnes, J. H. Merton, J. S. Palmer, Almon Beardsley, Peter LaMay, Andrus Ives, John Moore.

The district delegates elected were W. G. Gage, Wm. Waugh, C. R. Nichols, W. J. Pentelow, H. S. Gardner, N. N. Stranahan, Ambrose Chase, J. W. Distin, Esquire Rowlee, L. H. Drake.

On motion H. C. Howe named the following assembly delegates for the town of Volney: H. H. Kendrick, E. A. Gage, D. M. Perine, H. L. Taylor, Amos Youmans, E. R. Redhead, Ed. Cole, Amos Baldwin, Delos Diston, Alex Bradford.

On motion F. A. Gage, Arvin Rice and John W. Distin were appointed town committee for the ensuing year.

Orange Blossoms.

Mr. E. Bascome Westcott of Galen, Wayne county, N. Y., age 75 years, and Mrs. Elizabeth Ann Rock of Fulton, age 57 years, were united in matrimony by the Rev. Markham of the M. E. church last Thursday afternoon. The bride is well known in Fulton social circles. It is reported that the wedded pair will make their home on the flats where the bride has for several years resided and will continue her usual avocation of gathering with her carriage such fragmentary "subsistance" as her generous patrons have heretofore presented her at the dining room and kitchen door. May her path be smoother than in earlier years and may her helpmate lend a helping hand to the one-wheeled vehicle.—]Times-Express.

Phœnix Fair.

The Pœenix Union Agricultural Society will hold its thirteenth annual fair at Pendergast Driving Park, West Phœnix Sept. 25 to Oct. 1st. 1885. The exhibition of live stock, farm product etc., will be unusually large.

John Barker of the Vienna bakery has recently purchased a new cracker machine and will soon be prepared to manufacture his own crackers.

Those wishing to subscribe for the Chatauquan the coming year, must hand in their subscriptions to F. E. Goodjon on or before the 20th of the present month.

James Murphy of this villiage was arrested last Thursday by Officer Poole on a warrant sworn out by Liveryman Becker for over-driving a team he had hired at Becker's livery. Murphy settled by giving Becker $15.00 and paying the costs.

We had a pleasant call Thursday from Mr. N. H. Gilbert, postmaster at Fulton, N. Y., who is a delegate from the Firemen's Association of Oswego county, which organized some fifteen years ago with less than a dozen members. It was about the first association of the kind organized in the state, and now has over 300 members enrolled.—[Long Branch News.

The merchants, manufacturers and the public generally will be glad to learn that the New York Ontario & Western, Ry. have reduced their freight rates to and from all stations and New York about twenty-five per cent; they have also reduced rates on live stock in about the same ratio. The reduction went into effect on Sept. 10th. 1885. This will doubtless largely increase the business of the company from and to New York.

The marriage of Miss Mary Gilhooly of this village and Thomas Roach of Oswego, took place at the Catholic church at 5:30 p. m. yesterdry, Rev. Father Kearney officiating. A reception was tendered the bride and groom at the home of the bride's uncle, James Gilhooly in Granby last evening. They were the recipients of many valuable and useful presents. They will make Oswego their future home.

Ed. Seymour, who has for the past two years very creditably filled a position in Watson's drug store, leaves next Monday to accept a position in Austen's drug store in Oswego, where he intends preparing himself for a course of Pharmacy, During his stay in Fulton he has made many friends, who, with us, while regretting his departure from our midst, wish him unbounded success in his new venture. The position in Watson's store made vacant by Mr. Seymour's departure will be filled by Mr. Bert Hoff, of this village.

OBITUARY.

Ida M. Mace, wife of J. H. Mace, died at her home in Palermo, Oswego county yesterday, aged 22 years and 6 months. Funeral services will be held to-morrow at 10 a. m., from the house. The remains will be interred in Bristol Hill cemetery.

GOOD WEATHER, AND LARGE CROWDS PRESENT.

The Exhibits Said to be the Finest Ever Shown—Partial List of the Exhibitors—Notes and Comments.

The eighteenth annual exhibition of the Oswego Falls agricultural society opened yesterday with delightful weather and a promising outlook for a successful fair. Every department on the grounds was alive with activity during the early part of the day making preperations and arranging goods. The attendance of the first day is not usually large, but the number who visited the grounds yesterday surpassed that of former years. The predictions are that the crowds of to-day will be immense, However, the grounds afford ample accomodation for the comfort and convenience of all. Let them come. The more the merrier. All the available space on the grounds is utilized. The display of agricultural implements in the mechanical department is a significent feature of the open air exhibits. The horticultural hall is well filled with the choicest fruits and vegetables our county can produce, and leave no room for doubt in the minds of those who visit the department as to the bountiful yield of the present year. The show of cattle, with considerable blooded stock, promises to be very fine. The pleasure and amusement seeker has unlimited opportunities to gratify his longings between side shows, merry-go-rounds, shooting gallerys, etc., The exhibits in the main hall are excellent and comprise articles of all sorts and designs, domestic, musical, artistic, etc., etc. The displays are are mostly made by home merchants and business men, while Syracuse, Auburn and Oswego are represented. The following is a brief discription of some of the most important exhibits in this building:

F. E. BACON.

Entering the main building from the east, the magnificent display upon the right by F. E. Bacon rivets the attention. The sides and end of the building are completely covered with an elaborate display of carpets, rugs, etc., while in the fore ground are shown an elegant line of lace curtains and lambrequins. Further along is a complete assortment of dress goods in silks, repp goods, cashmeres, brocade velvets and plushes. A special feature of the exhibit is the linen goods. A large assortment of eider downs and basket flannels are also shown. The attention of the ladies is called to the magnificent display of millinery by Mr. Bacon. A more complete assortment has never been displayed on the grounds. An elegant line of cloaks in plush and mattasee goods are offered in both Newmarket and Russian circulars. The ladies will do well to examine the display of Mr. Bacon.

D. C. DRAPER

Across from Mr. Bacon's exhibit is D. C. Draper, who shows a complete line of crockery, glass, majolica and plated ware, lamps, etc., etc. Mr. Draper makes a fine display.

M. M. WILLIAMS.

On the north side of the west wing is M. M. Williams, our enterprising druggist, who exhibits a complete assortment of druggist's fancy goods, combs, brushes, toilet sets, odor cases and perfume sets. A large and fine line of pocket cutlery is also shown.

A. BRISTOL.

Next to Mr. Williams is the display of A. Bristol. Pianos and organs, lap robes of every design and a fine display of sewing machines and general musical merchandise makes Mr. Bristol's exhibit very attractive.

M. V. CONNELL.

Directly across from Mr. Bristol's exhibit is M. V. Connell, who shows a wonderful assortment of fine shoes, boots, rubbers, etc. Mr. Connell is deserving of much credit for his display.

F. K. JONES.

In the extreme end of the west wing is located Prof. F. K. Jones, who has a fine display of musical instruments. A special feature of Mr. Jones' exhibit is the full line of violins. Pianos and organs of the best make are also shown. Mr. Jones is assisted by Fred Kenyon, the blind musician whose wonderful performances on the piano always attract attention. Do not fail to hear him.

"THE FAMOUS."

In the same location as last year is the exhibit of clothing from the Famous Opera Clothing house of Syracuse, Messrs. VonFrankenburg & Co., proprietors. The display of men and boys' clothing made by this truly "famous" house attracts the attention of all visitors.

THOMAS KINGSFORD.

From the center of the hall on the east side to the south end is the exhibit of Thomas Kingsford of Oswego. Mr. Kingsford's display of dry goods, carpets rugs, etc., is very elaborate and attracts universal attention.

W. P. OSBORNE.

Among the important exhibits in the west wing of the building is W. P. Osborne's display of fine watches, clocks, jewelry, etc. Mr. Osborne has an elegant line of goods on exhibition. Stop and examine them.

JAMES MCCARTHY.

One of the grandest displays in the building is the exhibit of James McCarthy of Oswego. The entire west side of the south wing is occupied by this enterprising merchant. His display of dry goods, carpets, and dress goods of every conceivable description is simply magnificent. The arrangement of the articles is incomparable. Hours could be spent in examining them. An important feature near the south door is the exhibit of china and glass ware, lamps etc., also shown by Mr. McCarthy.

JOHN HADCOCK.

In the first booth on the east side of the north wing we find the pleasant and affable book seller, John Hadcock, surrounded by an assortment of choice [illegible]

[illegible] exhibit both useful and ornamental is here displayed. Their assortment baffles description. A complete line of plush frames, mirrors, vases, toilet and fancy articles form a small part of their display.

On the east side of the north wing is exhibit of Jules Wendell & Son, of Oswego, who show a dazzling array of jewelry etc. A. D. Palmer of Syracuse is also represented on the same side with clothing. Peck & Schilling of Oswego, music dealers, make a fine display of musical instruments, sewing machines etc.

Up stairs in the east wing is an elaborate display of fine photographs, etc., by F. M. Darrow. Close by is a fine exhibit of elegant life size portraits, beautiful landscapes in both crayon and oil. These are shown by Honigmann & Thompson of Auburn. On the same side is a magnificent display of oil paintings, etc., by Mrs. John Sheridan. On the opposite side of the east wing in his old place, is Mr. S. Green, the old reliable candy maker. Mr. Green's goods speak for themselves. In the south wing is the display of Foster Bros., knife manufacturers of Fulton. A truly bewildering assortment of knives of all kinds are here shown, from the smallest paring knife to the huge cleaver and mammoth carving knife. Fine moulding knives of every description are also shown. Next to Foster's display is a wonderful assortment of tinware of every description, shown by T. F. Crockford of Fulton. On the opposite side of this wing is the exhibit of Mr. Hayden of Oswego, who makes a specialty of teas and coffees. Every purchaser of 50 cents worth of these goods are given their choice of any one of a large number of useful household articles.

A noticable feature of the exhibition up stairs is the beautiful display of embroidery, etc., shown by Miss N. Soule of Syracuse. Fine oil portraits are exhibited by Mr. Soule. Their beautiful goods are sure to attract attention. Immediately adjoining is another elegant display of embroidery and fancy needle work shown by Mrs. A. Emerick, Mrs. Wm. Sylvester and Mrs. McIntyre of Fulton. The exhibitions are sure to attract the attention of all lovers of such work, especially the ladies. A. D. Perry & Co., seedsmen of Syracuse, show a wonderful assortment of beautiful grasses, etc. These goods will be sold at very low prices.

In the stove hall south of the main building are to be found two of own enterprising hardware merchants. Geo. Johnston occupies his space of former years with a fine exhibit of parlor and cook stoves of the very best make. Geo. shows up the good qualities of a stove in an interesting manner. His display of other hardware is good. Directly opposite is found a well arranged exhibit of hardware from the new firm of Snow & Loomis, of this village who recently succeeded the late J. H. Woodin. This firm have an equally fine show of stoves, hardware, tinware, etc. The goods are very artistically displayed.

The poultry department up stairs is filled with fine birds and attracts considerable interest.

The display of wagons and carriages is exceptionally fine. A. Bristol the will known dealer in this line, has made an extra effort this year to show his large stock of goods. McCully has also a fine exhibit.

The Universalist society are serving refreshments in the dining hall on the grounds. Their stock of provisions and supplies are inexhaustive. The Baptist soceety are also serving refreshments in their hall near the main building. They serve up meals in grand style. When the pangs of hunger overtake you do not fail to call at these places.

Our limited time and space prevent our giving a detailed account of the many interesting features of this year's fair, but we predict for the society, success beyond their expectations, both financially and otherwise.

NOTES.

The rain last night has laid the dust.

The weather is cooler.

"All aboard for the fair ground."

The Fulton Band will discourse music on the grounds to-morrow.

Supt. Maertens kindly consented to close the factory at noon to-day and through to-morrow, giving the hands an opportunity to attend the fair.

Prices in Tinware and Household Goods guaranteed at the Boston Bazaar.

F. E. Bacon has made some splendid purchases in Dry Goods for the fall trade and is better prepared to offer special inducements to his customers than any previous season. He will give some unusual prices commencing Saturday.

To the Afflicted.

Dr. Galt came to Oswego Falls and commenced the practice of medicine last November and during the time up to March 1st. 1885, treated successfully some fifty females who were afflicted with difficulties pecular to their sex.

The Doctor has during his entire practice treated over eight thousand and out of that number hundreds that had been confined to their beds from 1 to 20 years, and not one but was raised to comparative health, after they had been given up by the physicians that attended them. If necessary will give positive proof of validity of the above statement. Dr. Galt also claims that in his medical researches he has made as remarkable a discovery as has ever been made in medicine, that is, in a remedy that positively will cure a fever sore or any ill conditioned ulcers, abscesses or or sores on the body of any name or nature. It removes the poison from the blood and circulation, and destroys all impurities. The Doctor has cured some 14 cases while at Oswego Falls, entirely sound, as bad cases as could be found. Any person wishing to ascertain the validity of the above statement is requested to write to the editor of the Oswego Falls Observer or the postmaster or both. The Doctor is assisted by his wife, who is a thorough physician and who understands the treatment of female diseases the same as the Doctor, and ladies feeling delicate in being treated by the Doctor can be treated by Mrs. Dr. Galt. Fever sores cured according to contract or no charges made. Charges moderate and the hard times for money considered. Persons having such difficulties are requested by the Doctor to make him a call and find out themselves weather this true is or not. Examination free without he is called away and then charges moderate.

[illegible] hereby notified that the board of health of this village passed the following resolution:

That in view of the menacing existence of smallpox in Canada and elsewhere, and by the urgent request of the State Board of health to comply with the laws of 1885, which requires all local Boards of Health to guard against the introduction of contagious and infectious diseases, they resolved to provide thorough and safe vaccination for all persons within its jurisdiction who may need the same. The Board has therefore on the advice and approval of the State Board of Health, obtained from the New York city sanitary bureau, a quantity of fresh nonhumanized virus, and all persons who have not been vaccinated and those who have been vaccinated in infancy that are over twelve years of age, are hereby requested to attend to this important duty immediately for the protection of the whole community as well as each individual and family, and it is so neccessary to secure its protection in all places and for all classes of people that none have a right to neglect it for themselves, their families, the public schools, or the community.

Therefore all persons attending any of the public schools of this village after a given time (of which time due notice will be given) will be required to bring a certificate from a physician that they have been successfully vaccinated or be excluded from school until such evidence is given. Provision will be made by the Board of Education, or trustees for those who are attending school and are not able to pay for vaccination, leaving no excuse for any to neglect it. Physicians can procure vaccine virus of the Board of Health, at cost.

AN ELEGANT SUBSTITUTE

For oils, salts, pills and all kinds of bitter, nauseous medicines is the very agreeable [illegible]

[illegible] DEPARTMENT.

[illegible] FOR FARMERS.

[illegible] water at the roots kills [illegible].

[illegible] means of preventing interfering, try a three-quarter shoe.

[illegible] like the present one, in [illegible], shows the folly of planting [illegible] on low ground, that is without [illegible].

[illegible] makers aim to get $150 to $200 yearly per cow. Fine stock, [illegible] and specialties in manufacture are the means.

If the farmers will burn the stubble in the wheat field after it is well dried, they will destroy many of the great insect pests that remain in the stubble until the next season.

An Ohio farmer avers that hundreds of farms that were nearly worthless have been saved from ruin by clovering. It is the great restorer of fertility on worn out land.

Secretary Shaffer of the Iowa Agricultural Society says that the use of pyrethrum on cabbage plants was attended with entire success. One pound of pyrethrum mixed with 150 gallons of water killed every worm it came in contact with.

As skimmed milk contains the elements for producing bone and muscle rather than flesh, it will be found more profitable to feed it to pigs, calves and colts, than to animals which have obtained their growth, excepting hens, to which it furnishes a large proportion of egg-producing material.

There is a general belief that late cultivation is injurious to the potato, causing it to set a large number of small tubers with few marketable specimens. This effect is the result of deep plowing between the rows after the potatoes have set. Shallow culture does no injury at any time, and pulling out grass or weeds is beneficial even after the potatoes are half grown.

Early Lambs.

When all other prices fail in the sheep business, the farmer at least has the raising of winter lambs to fall back on. They bring good prices year in and year out. The city palate has a liking for green peas and spring lamb. The aged mutton which goes by that name in town would cause the ruralist to make a face of disgust. It smells to heaven, and a bite into it suggests india rubber.

The earliest lambs can be brought into market, the better pay they will bring. Prices drop rapidly after the first few weeks. The period of gestation with the sheep is about twenty-two weeks. If the lambs can be got to market in February and March they will bring top prices. It is difficult to get ewes with lamb in hot weather, and the farmer who can succeed in doing this is fortunate, or rather skillful, for it is more skill than luck. If they are kept on short feed and dry feed like hay for a week previous to being put with the males, it is said success in this direction will be much more certain. It is also suggested that twice as many ewes as should be wanted for producing winter lambs should be kept, since 80 per cent. of them are apt to fail to get with lamb so early in the season. Those not needed can gradually be weeded out and sold for mutton as soon as it is ascertained which they are. Select rams with small heads. Feed the ewes after that plentifully, putting them carefully on the fresh feed from the dry. Large fat lambs can only be produced from well-nurtured mothers. In winter the ewes will easily bear feeding four times a day, besides the straw, clover hay and fodder they consume. Feed should be varied, roots alternating with grain, etc. Well nourished lambs of good breed will weigh sixty pounds at from eight to ten weeks old. Ewes for breeding should be perfect, and from two to six years old.

Farmer's Scrap Book.

Cut out agricultural articles that will be of use to you and paste them in a scrap book. Have them arranged alphabetically by subjects, so that you can turn to them at any time. Your wife, daughter, mother or sister will do the pasting for you. Many a time you will read notes and matters that you wish to keep. It is bulky to preserve whole newspapers. Besides that, in a whole pile of papers you will never be able to find what you want in a hurry. So keep a scrapbook. Such a set of volumes, kept year by year, will in time make a valuable farm library.

The Onion Maggot.

The onion maggot has done an unusual amount of damage in some localities this season. As a remedy or rather preventive, of this pest, some successful growers recommend sowing 400 pounds of salt per acre early in spring. A solution of saltpeter in water, in the proportion of one tablespoonful of the former to one gallon of the latter, will probably prove an effective remedy if applied to the plants as soon as they are up and the applications are repeated occasionally.

Most Men Would.

Simpson and his wife were on their way to church and the lady was putting on her gloves.

"My dear," said he pettishly, "you should complete your toilet at home. I'd just as soon see a woman putting on her stockings on the street as putting on her gloves."

"Most men would," she said promptly, and the [illegible] husband didn't say another word.—[Evansville Argus.

DON'T GET DISCOURAGED!

[illegible]

[illegible] a year. He can make $[illegible] a night lecturing, and he has made a fortune through Dorsey, the great star route man, in his partnership with Dorsey in his ranch. The Dorsey ranch is managed as a stock company, and its capital is $2,000,000. Of this Bob Ingersoll is said to own one-sixth, and as the ranch paid $300,000 last year, his profits must have been $50,000. The ranch now contains 55,000 head of cattle, and it shipped more than 10,000 head of beeves. Bob Ingersoll has a house built upon it which is a strange mixture of savage and civilized architecture. It is built entirely of logs, and all of the rooms are on the first floor. They are put together in all of the shapes imaginable, the idea being, I suppose, to get as much light as possible for each room, and one estimate makes the house cover a space, which if the rooms were arranged in the form of rectangle, would be 300 feet long by 150 feet wide. This would equal the area of an acre. The interior of the house is finished in fine woods, and I doubt not, every comfort that civilization can furnish will be within it. The contract price for building the house was $10,000, and the architect estimated that the fences and trimmings will run the total up to $15,000. Think of it! $15,000 for a log cabin! This would make Ben Franklin open his eyes if he could be raised from the grave like the Witch of Endor, wouldn't it?

Bob Ingersoll has a very pleasant house in Washington, in the best part of the city. He lives on Franklin Park, and his house is elegantly furnished and exceedingly comfortable and home-like. You may see "Infidel Bob" in Washington almost any day now. He is a round-headed, smooth-faced, jolly looking man of fifty-two, who looks as though he liked the present life very well and was not troubling himself very much about the one to come. He is a New York man by birth, and the little town of Dresden in the northern part of this State, has the honor of his origin. His father was a preacher, and Bob was duly baptized at the age of three years. He was baptized in a theatre where his father was preaching, and it may be that his early introduction to the scenic stage has been the cause of his backsliding. At any rate, it is certain he has done more harm than his father ever did good. When Bob was ten years old his father moved West. He here made the boy learn the Westminster catechism, and in due time educated him for the law. He was admitted to practice before he became of age, and when the war broke out he became a Union colonel. In 1863 he married the daughter of an Illinois farmer, Miss Eva Parder, and it was his marriage, I am told, which aided much in his subsequent greatness. I do not refer to his infidel record. Whether Mrs. Ingersoll believes in the doctrines of her husband or not, we don't know, but it is said that she has great influence over him, and that whenever he travels he takes her with him. Bob Ingersoll first became of national note in the Cincinnati convention, when he made that great speech nominating Blaine. His reputation here acquired had probably the effect of bringing him out as a lecturer. He began to speak infidel sentences. He found it attracted attention and that his lectures paid. His utterances then became more pronounced, and he finally made a reputation and a fortune in denouncing hell and the gospel.

She Caught Him.

A certain lady suspected that her husband was in the habit of kissing the cook, a pretty German girl, by the by, and resolved to detect him in the act. After watching four days, she heard him come in and gently passed through into the kitchen. Now Katie was out that evening and the kitchen was dark. Burning with jealousy, the wife took some matches in her hand, and hastily placing her shawl over her head as Katie often did, she entered the kitchen by the back door, and was almost immediately seized and kissed in the most ardent manner. With her heart almost bursting with rage and jealousy, the injured wife prepared to administer a terrible rebuke to her faithful spouse. Tearing herself from his embrace, she struck a match, and stood face to face with Katie's beau, one of the factory boys. Her husband says his wife has never treated him so well since the first month they were married as she has for the past week.

The New Moon.

We have received the September number of The New Moon, a magazine published at Lowell, Mass., at the very low rate of one dollar a year. ~~Single copies~~ ten cents. The number before us contains five stories, original and selected, and a very interesting melange of miscellaneous reading. In the different departments the editor indulges in some racy comments on current topics, and succeeds in making the whole number very interesting. The magazine is carefully edited and printed, and the tone is unexceptionable. It is for sale by all newsdealers, or a specimen copy will be furnished on application at the home office at Lowell. The proof-reading is exceptionally good.

WHAT IS IT?

A strictly vegetable preparation, composed of a choice and skillful combination of Nature's best remedies. The discoverer does not claim it a cure for all the ills, but boldly warrants it cures every form of disease arising from a torpid liver, impure blood, disordered kidneys, and where there is a broken down condition of the System, requiring a prompt and permanent tonic, it never fails to restore the sufferer. Such is BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS. Sold by all druggists, who are authorized by the manufacturers to refund the price to any purchaser who is not benefited by their use.

False pretenses.—[Wilmington Star.

False Steps.

By much the greater part of business dishonesty and defalcation is the direct result of what men, even who lead it, call it a fast life.—The devil charges well for his pleasure, and who begins must pay his price or break friends. And yet the curse of young manhood, the besetting sin of early life, the snare in which the devil catches myriads of souls, is in the brightly-lighted, music-charmed nights of fast life. How it begins, God only knows, save that the human heart is ready by its very nature for wickedness. The young man comes to the city unsullied and guarded in the atmosphere of a godly home. He comes in all the enthusiasm and ambition of young life to achieve success and win wealth and renown.

For a little all is well—he remembers his vows and his promises—he seeks to keep his life unsulled and to watch his steps—he marks all his actions with scrupulous care. But he is thrown into the wild intoxication of a life that in itself is awful in its rush of wickedness and sin. Just when he begins to absorb its spirit, no one knows, save that he feels a twinge of conscience over a neglect of duty, and a sacrifice of strict integrity. It is not much. He has taken a glass of wine; he has spent an evening in questionable company; he has stood and watched the table where the game goes on in its mad delirium and frenzied hope; he has caught the infection of the air he breathes, and he justifies it all in the old way—everybody else does, and so he goes too. He has begun at the first steps of a fast life, and beginning, only a shout for succor, and the strong hand of God, can save life from the ending of ruin and death.

Concerning Collars.

The paper collar is a thing of the past. A few old-fashioned and impecunious young men still cling to pasteboard neckwear, but most people who wear collars now use linen. The paper collar had its points, however. It was always ready for use, and a man wasn't as dependent on the washerwoman as he is now. It was so cheap that it could be thrown away whenever it became slightly soiled. Why, when paper goods were the style, a man could buy a pair of paper cuffs and a collar and a "dickey" of the same material, and be fixed up good enough for a ball or wedding. They were liable to cover up any amount of uncleanliness, however. The paper collar was invented by Walter Hunt about forty years ago, and was first made as smooth and glossy as bristol board. Then they were finally merged into the present style of linen. The celluloid collars and cuffs have never caught on well. They are worn considerably by itinerant book agents, peddlers, and that sort of people, but have never become popular. You can always tell a man who wears them by the strong smell of camphor.—[Pittsburg Dispatch.

Two of William H. Vanderbilt's grandsons, William H. and Cornelius Jr., have a taste for publishing, and print a monthly journal called the Comet, which they print under the firm name of Vanderbilt Brothers, editors and proprietors, No. 1, West Fifty-seventh street, the residence of their father, Mr. Cornelius Vanderbilt. They write their own matter, set it up in type, and print it from a press they brought home with them a short time ago from Europe. They are proud of their production, which is really a handsome specimen of typography. It is not large, but it is neat in design as well as execution. No. 4 contains an offer of "a handsome penknife for the best original story in two chapters, not exceeding 250 words in a chapter."

WELLS, RICHARDSON & CO.'S
IMPROVED BUTTER COLOR
A NEW DISCOVERY.

☞For several years we have furnished the Dairymen of America with an excellent artificial color for butter; so meritorious that it met with great success everywhere receiving the highest and only prizes at both International Dairy Fairs.

☞But by patient and scientific chemical research we have improved in several points, and now offer this new color as the best in the world.

It Will Not Color the Buttermilk. It Will Not Turn Rancid. It is the Strongest, Brightest and Cheapest Color Made.

☞And, while prepared in oil, is so compounded that it is impossible for it to become rancid.

☞BEWARE of all imitations, and of all other oil colors, for they are liable to become rancid and spoil the butter.

☞If you cannot get the "improved" write us to know where and how to get it without extra expense. (46)

The Tramp.

BY ZETA.

He saunters down the village street
His garments torn and incomplete,
Rude are the coverings of his feet
And funny,
He asks for something cold to eat
Or money.

He has a sort of happy air,
Long and Byronic is his hair,
His face is round, devoid of care
And dirty,
He eats what food we have to spare,
Quite hearty.

He dares the storms inclemency
Beneath a haystack or a tree,
His laundry at the brook must be,
Or fountain,
He travels through the vale with glee,
Or mountain.

God bless him, does no kith or kin
Ere to their fireside call him in;
And is his laziness a sin;
Or rather,
Must he for aye not toil nor spin
Nor gather?

Tell me, ye toilers, when ye see
Our rugged tourist running free
So healthy though but rags there be Around him;
Have you not envied such as he?
Confound him!

EXCHANGING LOVERS.

Lou Mayne stood before the tall dressing glass, brushing out her long, silky black hair with what seemed unnecessary energy, while her dark eyes flashed, and the rich color in her velvet cheeks deepened.

Dosia Lorn—a fluffy mass of white muslin, blue ribbons and yellow curls—was tocking away like a kitten in a big blue velvet easy chair and sobbing in that gentle, subdued way, that is, of all displays of grief the most aggravating to witness.

Lou turned and looked at her once, with the brush elevated, as if she had more than half a mind to fling it at her.

"Upon my word, Dosia," she said "you are the greatest idiot I know of. What are you crying about! Surly not because that old Aunt Thigummy of yours is dead? Why, you never saw her in your life."

"For shame, Lou! That was not her name at all. It was Thwing," Dosia cried out reproachfully.

"Worse still," muttered Lou. "No wonder she died."

"You ought not to be disrespectful to the dead, at any rate."

"I'm not. It's you the disrespect is for. You are so fearfully absurd, Dosia."

"What! when she left all the money to Hurst and me?"

"Oh, is that what you are crying about? Well, really!"

"No, of course not. You know it is on poor Roy's account. He will be so cut up.."

"Will he? Why?"

Dosia glided off into another little patter of weeping.

"I've—got—got—to marry Hurst now, you know!"

Lou's dark piquant face twisted into an indescribably comical grimace as she surveyed the sobbing girl, and she gave utterance to a prolonged whistle of amazement.

"You see," wailed Dosia, "the money is left us on condition that we marry each other."

"And you mean to give up the man you love for that old woman's money?" ejaculated Lou in an incredulous scorn.

"You know," murmured Dosia plaintively, "that the wishes of the dead ought to be respected."

"Rubbish!" exclaimed Lou irreverently. "That eccentric whim of a superannuated old woman who never saw either of you."

She finished adjusting her magnificent coronet of hair, biting her red lips all the while.

"Marry Hurst, will she!" she was saying to herself in mingled agony and amusement. "What a little fool she is! I wonder how he feels about his legacy?"

A little later Lou Mayne was sauntering down the street in all the glory of a new winter toilet, a scarlet-winged toque perched coquettishly above her jetty braids, and the archest mischief smiling from her velvet eyes.

Not far away she met Hurst Nuel.

"I am so glad not to have missed you," he exclaimed eagerly. "I was just going to your house to ask you—"

"And I am very glad to have met you," interposed Lou. "I wanted to congratulate you."

"Indeed?" he questioned with a puzzled look; "what about?"

"On your approaching marriage."

Hurst stared a moment and then laughed and colored.

"You mean my Aunt Thwing's legacy? How does Dosia take it?"

"Like a little lamb," returned Lou demurely. "Sheds a few natural tears to poor Roy's memory, but declares herself ready for the sacrifice."

Hurst laughed again, and then:

"There's to be a big sleigh-ride to-night, Lou; will you let me take you in my new cutter?"

Lou bridled up and pursed her pretty lips.

"What will Dosia say?"

"Dosia! Roy Poynts will take care of her, of course."

Lou shook her head very gravely.

"She wouldn't think of going with [illegible] now. She intends to break with [illegible] marry you."

to-night I'll put my fate to the test."

The moon had not yet risen when the sleighing party set forth, with bells jingling and merry voices ringing. But it was bright starlight, clear and frosty.

As young Nuel, not a little proud of his new turn out, drew up before the house in which Lou Mayne and Dosia Lorn both lived, Roy Poyntz was just behind him; and the two girls came out together, both so muffled and veiled—for the night was cold—that in the obscurity one could hardly be told from the other.

"I never should have known it was you, only for your hat," said Hurst, as he tucked his precious freight carefully away among the furry robes, with a smiling glance of recognition at her scarlet winged toque.

"It's all right," whispered Lou Mayne as she stepped into Roy Poyntz's cutter. "I changed hats with Dosia; she thinks Hurst wanted her to ride with him, and he thinks he has got me."

They both laughed. The next moment they were off.

Hurst had two horses, a lively span, too, but he managed to drive them with one hand, the other to gently insinuate itself about the little muffled shape beside him. For he meant to lose no time. Something in Lou's air that afternoon perhaps warned him of breakers.

Greatly emboldened, he ventured to extend the circuit, and bending his tall head, murmured in the tenderest accents:

"Darling!"

The figure he clasped gave a little convulsive start.

"You know already that I love you, don't you, dearest?" he proceeded.

Something between a gasp and a sob came from behind a thick veil, but no words.

Hurst's arm tightened, and he drew her still nearer.

"Will you be my wife, dear one?" he asked. just as the other sleighs came dashing and jingling up, making such a racket that he could not catch her reply.

However, he must have been satisfied as to its purport, or he would scarcely have strained her so fondly to him, and at a convenient turn in the road pushed up a corner of her veil to print an impassioned kiss on the sweet lips.

The sleigh-ride was to culminate in a dance at a country hotel a few miles out.

Having arrived at which place, amid much fun and laughter, the ladies were duly assisted into the house, and hastened to get warm and repair any damages to their toilets.

They were very merry in the ballroom soon after—all, perhaps, but Dosia Lorne, whose baby face, usually glowing with pink prettiness, had a white drawn look and a pitiful quiver about the small mouth that no one could help noticing.

Lou Mayne had never looked so aggravatingly lovely, and Roy Poyntz, having bowed very distantly to Dosia, devoted himself so pointedly to Miss Mayne that Hurst Nuel could not get a word with her.

He bore it very cheerfully for a while, soothed by the recollection of the sweetness of the ride out.

But even those tender memories failed presently to console for such utter banishment from the light of Lou's magnetic glance and smile.

That young lady, indeed, it seemed to him, took especial pains to avoid him—did not even seem to know he was in the room.

When he had lifted what he supposed to be her from his cutter a little before it had been with the triumphant feeling that he had come to an understanding with his slippery sweetheart at last—that they were "as good as engaged."

Was Lou, after all, he wondered, only the heartless coquette so many deemed her?

"What ails Dosia Lorn?" some one asked.

"Hush!" said Lou, but wickedly raising her own voice for Dosia's benefit. "Don't you know that her Aunt Thwing is dead?"

The girl heard, and gave her curly head an angry toss.

"You ought to be ashamed of yourself Lou Mayne," she whispered presently. "I never saw such a flirt in my life!"

"Why, Dosia!" was the reproachful reply; "and only because I am trying to comfort poor Roy for your shameful treatment of him."

"He's very easily comforted," pouted the girl; "and there's Hurst, too. How can you treat him so?"

"Mr. Fuel? Oh, he's your look out now."

Dosia gave a childish lift of her pretty shoulders.

"He hates me as bad as I do him, and I know it," she said. "If he did——"

She paused, blushing furiously, and then whispered:

"He made love to me dreadfully, though, on the road. He did, Lou! Would you have believed he was so mercenary?"

Lou laughed.

"You're rather well matched in that respect, aren't you!"

"Does—does Roy seem to mind much!" questioned Dosia, timidly.

"Oh, no. He'll get over it easily enough," said Lou lightly. "You needn't worry about him."

Dosia bit her lip and looked ready to cry.

"He hasn't asked me to dance with him once this evening," she said in a grieved tone.

"Of course not. Do you suppose he wants to dance with you now you're engaged to some one else?"

"I don't see why not," pouted Dosia. "When are you and Mr. Nuel going [illegible]

[illegible]

Thwing's money. He's welcome to it all.

"Oh, indeed!" said Lou, looking terribly amused. "Well, perhaps you had better tell him so."

"I would if I thought Roy would make it up with me."

"I don't know about that," returned Lou sternly. "Rather doubtful, I should think."

At this moment who should come sauntering up but handsome Roy himself.

"Our dance, Lou," he said quite gayly and familiarly offering his arm.

And then as they strolled away, he nodded coolly to Dosia, with:

"Not dancing, Miss Lorne? Shall I send you a partner?"

"No!" Dosia answered, shortly.

Then knowing that she was going to cry in spite of herself, she ran into a little waiting-room, supposing it untenanted.

Hurst Nuel was there, staring gloomily at his boots, and wondering about Lou.

"Hallo, Dosia!" he exclaimed. "Crying?"

She went straight up to him, lifting the pretty tear-drenched face, like a flower dipped in dew.

"Please Hurst," she cried, piteously, "you have Aunt Thwing's money, and I know it wasn't right to let you go on so in the cutter to-night, and kiss me and all; but please, I don't want to marry you."

A light began to break on Hurst.

"Was it you or Lou Mayne I brought here to-night?" he demanded abrutly.

"Me, of course. Lou said you wanted to talk over Aunt Thwing's will with me."

"Aunt Thwing's will!" began Hurst excitedly. "If I don't settle with Miss Lou for this! Excuse me, Dosia; I never dreamed it was you. I thought it was Lou all the time. She has got the joke on us both pretty bad."

With a peremptoriness that Lou for once never thought of resisting, he transferred her hand from Roy's arm to his own, and, holding it there, led her courteously but firmly to a spot where a friendly curtain screened them from the general gaze.

"A pretty trick you played me," he began sternly, stopping and looking at her.

Lou's eyes were downcast, the dark, saucy face covered with delicious blushes, and the red twitching nervously.

"The least you can do now," he went on, "is to ride home with me and settle it. Will you?"

"But what will Mr. Poyntz say?" protested Lou feebly.

"He and Dosia will be glad of the exchange and you know it. Will you come?"

"Perhaps," laughed Lou, as she adroitly slipped away from him, and in spite of all his efforts persistently evaded him all the rest of the evening.

However, she rode home with him, and Dosia with Roy.

Both pairs must have come to an amicable understanding, for there was a double wedding about three months afterward.

Aunt Thwing's legacy proved to be a delusion after all.

The poor old woman hadn't money enough hardly to keep herself. But her brain was a little cracked, and she had a fashion of stealing away every now and then to a lawyer, and getting him to draw her will, devising imaginary legacies to whomever she happened to think of at the time.

Contagion Carried By Letter.

Postmaster Pearson tells the New York Mail and Express that he never knew or never heard of contagion being communicated through the mails, and added: "In years past, we have handled mails from infected ports and countries but no instance in which disease was communicated ever came to my knowledge, although the mail matter was distributed without being disinfected. I do not understand that we will be called upon to fumigate mails in this city. The work will be done on the frontier at the points of exchange. The question of the necessity of fumigation is a matter of which I have no knowledge, and with which I have nothing to do." In Watertown resides a physician who can give the postmaster some information on this point. A little girl dying with scarlet fever, kissed a letter which her mother was sending to a relative, and around the spot kissed a circle was drawn. It was her dying kiss sent to a little friend. The latter kissed the same spot when the letter was received, and shorly afterward became a victim to the disease. It was the only case in the place, and the physician believes was communicated through the mails.—]Ex.

THE PROPER THING.

Bronze is the most fashionable here at present.

Fur will be much used on bonnets the coming season.

Striped materials will be largely worn during the autumn.

Woolen checks and plaids will be very popular the present season.

Vests of lace, with high standing collar are worn outside the dress waist.

The new double skirts are likely to become more popular as the season advances.

Scarfs of etamine and crepe will be used all the season upon hats and bonnets.

High dog-collars of velvet on which is laid crotched lace half their width are worn.

Beaded trimmings will be as extensively used as ever during the fall and winter.

Folds of canvas or muslin rival frill as a finish inside the neck and sleeves of dresses.

Round hats are made of velvet or plush, and may be trimmed with ribbon and ostrich tips.

Scarfs and barbs of lace are again coming into use to be folded in long rows down the front of the corsage.

The front edge of the new bonnets does not rest on the hair. It is raised by a beaded coronet or a puff of velvet.

Pretty dresses of dark cashmere, have three or four rows of worsted lace insertion let in on the skirt above the hem.

Cloth postillion jackets, made double breasted and edged with braid, are used as an extra waist to wear with various skirts.

Velvet, plush, embroidered cloth and felt, are materials used for bonnets. Ribbon alone frequently furnishes the trimming.

White and plomb will be the leading colors in veils during early autumn. Red, blue, brown and green tissue will be worn later.

Autumn bonnets for street wear are very small and narrow, with high trimming on top and increasing in height toward the back.

Jerseys for autumn wear are short and pointed in front, still shorter on the hips, and have a narrow, square postilion pleating behind.

Buckles, clasps, slides, and hooks in gold, silver, steel, bronze, enamel, pearl, amber and jet, are used with a free hand this autumn both for dress and millinery purposes.

A Phenomenal Memory.

Men who dislike shopping—and where is the man who does not?—should inform themselves in regard to the meaning of "a few little things," as women interpret that vague kind of phrase. Mr. S—— wanted to move from the city to a small town near by in which there was but one or two stores. He would be in the city every day, and agreed to purchase the "few little things" his wife could not buy in the village stores.

"You'd better put them down on a piece of paper," said Mrs. S——, when about to give her first order.

"Oh no," said Mr. S——; "my memory is good."

"Well then," began Mrs. S—— "a spool of 60 Coates' black thread."

"Yes," said Mr. S——.

"A yard of not too light and not too dark calico."

"Yes."

"A small hammer, a can of peaches of the Pasadena brand, a dozen small pearl buttons, two yards of cardinal ribbon, silk on one side and satin on the other."

"Yes," said Mr. S——thoughtfully.

"A pair of slippers for baby, a dozen lemons, a good tooth brush, a pine apple, two ounces of sky-blue Germantown yarn, an ounce phial of homœpathic nux vomica pellets, a—"

"Wait a second," said Mr. S——, counting on his fingers and looking perplexed.

"And a bottle of vanilla extract, and a yard of triple box-pleated crepe lisse ruching, and three yards of small-checked nainsook, and—"

But Mr. S—— had seized his hat and was running for the station.

What the poor man brought home was a yard of bed-ticking, three yards of black crape, a bottle of vinegar, eight yards of nankeen, a scrub brush, a pound of green yarn, sixty spools of "coat thread," a yard of very light and a yard of black calico, and a pint bottle of homœpathic pills.

"There, my dear," he said triumphantly, throwing down his numerous packages, "I don't think you'll find a thing missing. Who says a man can't do shopping? My memory never played me false yet."—[Youth's Companion.

A Great Victory

A Terrible Case of Scrofula Cured by

Hood's Sarsaparilla

"In the winter of 1879 I was attacked with Scrofula in one of the most aggravating forms. At one time I had no less than thirteen large abscesses over and around my neck and throat, continually exuding an offensive mass of bloody matter disgusting to behold, and almost intolerable to endure. It is impossible to fully describe my sufferings, as the case was complicated with Chronic Catarrh. After three years of misery, having been treated by three physicians, I was worse than ever. Finally, on the recommendation of W. J. Huntley, druggist, of Lockport, I was induced to [illegible] Hood's Sarsaparilla. And now, after having taken twelve bottles, within the last twelve months, the scrofulous eruptions have entirely ceased, and the abscesses have all disappeared, except the unsightly scars, which are daily becoming 'smaller by degrees, and beautifully less.' I do not know what it may have done for others, but I do know that in my case, Hood's Sarsaparilla has proved an effective specific indeed. As an evidence of my gratitude I send these facts unsolicited, and I am ready to verify the authenticity of this cure, by personal correspondence with any one who doubts it." CHARLES A. ROBERTS, East Wilson, N. Y.

This statement is confirmed by W. J. Huntley, druggist, of Lockport, N. Y., who calls the cure a great victory for Hood's Sarsaparilla. Send for book giving statements of many cures.

REPUBLICAN CONVENTION.

The Republican State convention which is now in session at Saratoga was called to order yesterday at 11 o'clock by James D. Warren of Buffalo, Senator Warren Miller was chosen temporary chairman and addressed the convention. Committees were then appointed. Hon. N. W. Nutting of Oswego county was made chairman of committee on permanent organization. Recess was then taken. When the convention reassembled James W. Husted was elected permanent chairman. Candidates for governor were then put in nomination and a ballot was taken. Carr received 205, Warren, 137, Davenport 105. To make a prediction at this writing as to who will be the choice of the convention would be rash indeed. Morton, Bliss and Leonard, are as liable to receive the nomination as any of them. Carr's friends cannot but feel disappointed in his strength on first ballot. At the conclusion of the first ballot the convention adjourned until to-day. Oswego county delegates went solid for Carr.

Saratoga, Sept.23—Ira L. Davenport is nominated for Governor on the second ballot. His nomination was made unanimous. Gen. Carr is nominated for lieutenant governor, Anson Wood for secretary of state and James W. Wadsworth for comptroller.

The United States government finally appears as the prosecutor of a suit to annul the patents granted to Alexander Graham Bell, the founder of the Bell Telephone company. The complaint makes charges of the most serious nature against the patentee. They are that he had access to descriptions filed by other inventors, through the favor of a patent examiner, and that although he secured priority of patents, he was not the original inventor.

Since Niagara Falls park became the property of the state it has had a great boom. The visitors number from 2,000 to 6,000 daily. The receipts from the inclined railway have been very large. The building of a hydraulic elevator at the Cave of the Winds is recommended. The police have reported the names of sixty-seven hackmen who failed to comply with the village ordinance requiring carriages to display their numbers and the rate of fare charged. A second examination of carriages August 29th, showed that seventy-eight drivers were evading the ordinance relating to rates of fare. The names were reported to the village trustees with a request that the ordinance be rigidly enforced. A large restaurant on the islands or in Prospect park is thought necessary.

Jumbo Dead.

Buffalo, Sept. 18.—A. Haight, representing Mr. Barnum, arrived at Buffalo Thursday, on his way to London Ont., to join the circus. He said that the truth about the killing of Jumbo on Tuesday had not been published. After the show in St. Thomas, Ont., that evening, the driver started down the track, with Jumbo and the baby elephant Tom Thumb, to where the Grand Trunk freight train was standing. There are a great many tracks at that point used in the switching of cars on the Grand Trunk air line, which there joins the mainstem of the road. On one side of the track was the train and on the other was a steep embankment. As the train came around the curve the keeper tried to induce Jumbo to go down the embankment, but he would not, for what reason was not at first apparent. The baby elephant was in the rear, and as the train approached Jumbo began to bellow and swing his trunk. The little elephant seemed dazed, but did not get out of the way. As the engine was almost upon them Jumbo raised on his hind legs as though to protect the baby and then quick as thought dropped down and grabbed him in his trunk and hurled him with great force over all the tracks and against a freight car twenty yards away, where he dropped down whining like a puppy with a sore foot.

Jumbo, in saving the life of his little protege, had entirely neglected his own chance to escape. The locomotive struck him with full force in the side, crowding him against some cars on the siding nearest him and fairly squeezing the life out of him. When they came to the end of the switch the engine left the track, and with it five freight cars that stood on the siding. Then there was a scene never to be forgotten by those that witnessed it. The mangled beast roared with pain, and the little elephant roared as loud as he could in sympathy. The crush was too heavy to leave any chance for recovery and the bystanders could only wait for Jumbo's death. It was not long delayed. In three minutes he turned over on his back dead. It was found that the baby elephant had sustained a broken leg, and as there was no help for him, orders were given that he be put out of his misery, which order was carried into effect Wednesday afternoon. The theory of the railroad people is that the engineer was asleep or dozing, for he did not apparently make any attempt to stop the train.

Trustees' Proceedings.

SPECIAL MEETING.

Fulton, Sept. 11, 1885.

Board met at the call of the President.

Present a full Board.

The President stated that the bridge across the Hydraulic canal on Oneida street, has been completed.

On motion of Mr. Gage the bridge was accepted.

On motion of Mr. Johnson the President and Clerk were directed to give Mr. Robert L. Henry, who has had charge of the work here, a statement showing that his work had been done satisfactorily.

On motion of Mr. Johnson the Clerk was instructed to draw an order in favor of Mr. Henry for $1,147.79 for the balance of payment for the bridge.

On motion of Mr. Johnson Sections 4 and 5 of chapter 4 of village ordinances were ordered published. Said sections are as follows:

§ 4. No dog or slut shall be allowed to run at large within the limits of this village between the 15th day of June and the 20th day of September, in each year, unless muzzled with a good and sufficient muzzle, rendering it impossible for such dog or slut to bite any person or animal; under the penalty of five dollars for each offence, to be paid by the owner or possessor thereof.

§ 5. It shall be the duty of all policemen of this village to kill every dog or slut when owned in this village, found running at large contrary to the forgoing section of this chapter, and such dog or slut may be lawfully killed by any person.

On motion of Mr. Kendrick the Board adjourned

[illegible] that owing to the low price of cheese, quite a number of dairymen have withdrawn their milk from the factories, and the make from this time out will be considerably diminished. Several salesmen to-day put in all or nearly all their August make, and others sold more than a week's cheese, so that the sales are swollen above what they would be if only the usual offerings had been made. On an average, cheese is now sold off to about Aug. 29, and the bulk of the sales next week will be of September stock. The market was ⅛c. higher to-day than it was last week, but there is no merit the advance. A competition arose over a few of the pet factories, and a slight advance on those caused the ruling to be increased also. Advices from New York are tame and the outlook is no better than it has been. It is nearly time, however, to see an advance if any is to take place this season.

Transactions to-day have been as follows: 4 lots, 400 boxes, at 7c.; 6 lots 600 boxes, at 7¼c.; 49 lots, 4,559 boxes at 7⅜c; 8 lots, 721 boxes, at 7½c.; 15 lots, 1,371 boxes, at 7⅝c.; 19 lots, 2,088 boxes, at 7¾c.; 100 at 7⅞c.; 100 at 8¼c.; Sales 9,939 boxes; commissions 987; total, 10,926 boxes. Ruling price 7¾c. Transactions one year ago were 9,716 boxes, ruling price 10¾c.; two years ago 11,330 boxes, ruling 10⅝.

Little Falls, Sept. 21.

Prices are again disappointing, even more so than last week, having dropped about one fourth cent. Trade was dull and slow, and the market closed late. Rumors were current that there were quite a number of sly sales at 8 cents, and this set salesmen on edge, hoping to secure better offers than they had yet done. At the close we find but few sales at 8 cents, and we give them just as reported to us. Hopes that better prices are very faint. If the fine cheese now selling can secure no better rates, why, it is asked, need any improvement be looked for? Factorymen sold rather light quantities to-day, though there were but few who declined to sell some. It has been a decidedly blue day for the cheese trade. Sales are:

Lots.	Boxes.	Price
51	3,032	7¾ct
32	2,194	7⅞ct
9	1,025	7⅞ct
4	510	8ct
2	240	p. t.
19	1,100	Com
120	7,691
Farm Dairy	1,455
Total	9,146

Farm Dairies.—There was an unusually large offering on the morning market, and unusually sharp competition and strife to secure it. One lot was run up to 9c., but the bulk sold at 8c.; the range was 7 and 9c. Sales were 1,455 boxes.

Butter.—Fifty-eight packages of butter sold at 14½ and 21c., the bulk at 18c.

AT FULTON.

The cheese market is dull and fails to display any animation. The sales this week will close out the August week. Twenty-three factories were represented with 1,985 boxes of cheese, which was sold at 7⅜c. The price one year ago was 10¼, and the same two years ago.

CAUTION TO DAIRYMEN.

Ask for Wells, Richardson & Co's. Improved Butter Color, and take no other. Beware of all imitations, and of all other oil colors, for every other one is liable to become rancid and spoil the butter into which it is put. If you cannot get it write to us at Burlington, Vt., to know where and how to get it without extra expense. Thousands of tests have been made, and they always prove it the best.

Edwin Abbott was arrested Saturday by Officer Curtiss for public intoxication. He acknowledged the corn, and left $6.50 in preference to visiting the jail for 30 days.

Frank Cook was found by the officer in a glorious state of inebriation. He was assisted to the cooler, and upon his arraignment was fined $6.00 or 30 days in jail. Paid.

George Foster of Ira was the next unfortunate. He was drawn into the toils by Officer Poole on Saturday. A deposit of $6.50 released him from the net.

Killed By the Cars.

Last Friday morning as the 9:08 north bound train on the Phœnix road crossed Broadway, Mrs. Susan Trumble, an aged lady of 70 years, residing with her daughter, Mrs. Gerard on Second street, started to go across the road on an errand to one of the neighbors. As she stepped over the track, the engineer blew a sharp blast on his whistle, and this with the fact that the train was so close evidently dazed the old lady, and she hesitated an instant and was struck by the engine and instantly killed. She was thrown a distance of over forty feet, striking on her head. The train stopped and the fireman of the engine stayed in town till the inquest. Coroner Marsh was sent for and upon his arrival summoned the following jury: James T. Pratt, Foreman; Frank Hall, H. Hulett, P. Hyde, Chas. Eason, Ed Jones, L. Johnson, N. Johnson and Ed Morgon. After viewing the body the inquest was adjourned until 7:00 p. m., to enable the conductor and engineer of the train to be present. After hearing the testimony of the witnesses in the evening, the jury found a verdict "that deceased came to her death by being struck by engine No. 27, of the R. W. & O., railroad, on the morning of Sept. 18, and while exonerating the rail-road employes, we censure the company for running their trains at such a high rate of speed as their schedule calls for." The funeral of Mrs. Trumble was held Sunday from the house, Rev. Mr. O'Dell, former pastor of the Free Methodist church, officiating.

The new Howe Ventilating Stove Company are taxed to their utmost capacity to fill the large number of orders which they are constantly in receipt of. This speaks well for the new enterprize. Three of the company's stoves are on exhibition at the Syracuse fair this week.

A Canadian in town the other day, found himself the possessor of several trade dollars which he had received in exchange for bills. A little later on he offered one of the silver wheels to a merchant in payment for commodity and he was allowed but eighty-five cents for the coin. After looking over the remaining dollars in his posession and reading the inscriptions, "in God we trust," he looked up at the merchant and remarked that he'd "be hanged if he liked to trust out fifteen cents on every dollar, no matter who it was."

The attention of the Board of Health and the village authorities is called to the condition of the jail in this village. A Times reporter who visited the place last Monday found close, foul-smelling apartments, cells dark and damp, bedding more or less filthy, and everything connected with the jail in a truly deplorable condition. The water dripping through the ceiling from Cullen's ice box does not have a tendency to sweeten the atmosphere. Although no one expects to find a jail very elegantly furnished, it seems as if a little consideration could be shown to erring humanity.

OBITUARY.

Clinton H. Cronyn of Lower Oswego Falls, died very suddenly at his father's residence last evening at about seven o'clock, aged 25 years. He was upon the street yesterday morning, and although his death was not entirely unexpected, his many friends will be shocked and pained to learn of his sudden decease. Mr. Cronyn's health has been slowly failing for a year or two, but his indomitable energy has kept him up, attending to his duties when ordinary men would have completely given up. He has been in the employ of E. W. Ross for several years, and his genial manners and pleasant ways have won many warm friends who will heartily sympathize with his parents in their bereavement. Funeral services will be held to-morrow afternoon at 2 o'clock from the M. E. Church, Rev. W. F. Markham officiating.

Word was received Sunday of the sudden death of Freeman Stanley Gasper of Lowell, Mich., aged [illegible] years and 3 months. He was a brother of Mrs. L. A. VanBuren of this village and was well known in Fulton, having resided here many years. He was in the employ of Wm. Dexter for about four years.

James Bogue of this village, died at his residence on Sixth street, last Monday, aged 70 years. Funeral services were held this morning from the Catholic church, Father [illegible]

Bold Attempt at Robbery.

Last Thursday morning about two o'clock, Will Hoff, who sleeps in Nichol's jewelry store was awakened from sleep, and looking toward a window he saw the head and shoulders of a man protruding into the room. Without an instant's hesitation he drew a revolver from under his pillow, and taking a hasty aim, fired, the ball burying itself in the window casing. The head and shoulders immediately disappeared. Mr. Hoff arose and upon lighting a lamp, found that two of the large panes of glass had been neatly removed, the sash having been cut, with a very fine saw. It is probable that the burglar knew that Mr. Nichols was the treasurer of the Oswego Falls Agricultural Society, and thought a round sum would be in the safe. In this he reasoned rightly, as several thousand dollars had been placed there the night before. In addition to this was several hundred dollars belonging to C. E. Sackett, besides a large amount of diamonds and jewelry. Had the thief succeeded in effecting an entrance he would undoubtedly have made a good haul. Mr. Hoff is entitled to the highest praise for his promptness in frustrating the plans of the would-be burglar.

Syracuse vs. Oswego Falls.

An enjoyable game of cricket was played here Friday on the O. D. A. grounds between an eleven selected from the O. D. A.'s and Onondagas and the Oswego Falls Clubs. Captain Baker winning the toss, sent his men to the bat to the bowling of Sawder and Wilton. Hallworth and Cowie were the only batsmen who made a stand, scoring fourteen and twelve, the inning closed for a total of 59. The Oswego Falls men followed at the bat and made a total of 62, heading Syracuse by three runs. Sowden and Mottram batted in good form for their scores of 18 and 14. In the second inning of Syracuse, Hallworth and Baker scored 19 each, Calthrop 18, Spaulding 11, and Millard 10; the total score 102. The visitors in their second inning scored but 27, leaving Syracuse the winner by 72 runs. This game is the first game played with the Oswego Falls club in three years, and Syracuse cricketers hope to meet them again in frendly contest before the season closes.—[Syracuse Standard.

Society Jottings.

Miss Cora Foster entertained several friends very pleasantly at her home on Rochester street last Wednesday evening.

Last Thursday evening an assembly of young people met at the residence of Mr. James Sheridan, on Cayuga street, and spent a very pleasant evening in dancing and other popular amusements. The party was given for Miss Lillie Hall, who is a guest of Mrs. Sheridan.

Miss Allie Case gave a pleasant little party at her home on First street last Monday evening in honor of her friend, Miss Florence Hartson of Mexico. She was assisted by Mrs. Geo. M. Case and daughter Eva. The guests were entertained handsomely. The pleasure of the evening consisted in whist playing and dancing.

Marital.

Wm. H. Pollard of Holyoke, Mass., and Miss Elma M. Haven of this village, will be married to-morrow afternoon at the home of the lady's parents on Oneida street. In the evening a reception will be given at the residence of Mr. Pollard's father in Oswego Falls.

To-morrow afternoon at 4 o'clock, Mr. Thomas Marvin of Warner's Station, Onondaga county, and Miss Genevieve Loomis of this village, will be married at the residence of the bride's parents on Utica street.

Married, at the residence of the officiating clergyman, Rev. W. F. Markham, Sept. 16, Thomas W. Wheelhouse of Hinmanville, and Miss Amelia Appleby of Talmage, Ohio.

Last Friday as Dr. G. V. Emens was engaged in forcing a screw into position the handle of the screw driver split, letting the sharp end of the iron penetrate his hand at the base of the thumb. The hand is badly swollen and very painful, but it is hoped that no serious results will follow.

Duprez and Benedicts' famous minstrels gave a fine entertainment in Stephens' opera house last evening. Owing to the inclemency of the weather the house was rather small, but those who braved the storm were well repaid. The company will return next Saturday, and it is to be hoped that a full house will greet them.

The Fulton Band will give another excursion to Long Branch next Sunday, by request. The grounds are second to none in this section of the State. There are ample accommodations for all, and every effort will be put forth by the management to minister to the pleasure and comfort of all who attend. The boat leaves the dock at 8:30 sharp. Fare 50 cts. The proceeds of the excursion will be used towards paying for the new uniforms. A splendid time is assured to all.

An Adams correspondent says that on the occasion of testing the new water works the town was extensively filled with strangers. From the hydrant on the corner of the principal street, and which covers more property than any other, a stream was thrown over the democratic pole, which is 130 feet high. Then three different hydrants were tapped at the same time, and each stream covered all the buildings it was expected to reach. After this two streams were taken from the same hydrant, and both streams did the work that was expected of them. Hinds & Moffett, who are putting in a system at Fulton. The works were built by system at Fulton.

A perfect town is that in which you see farmers patronizing the home merchants, the laborers spending the money they earn with their own tradesmen, and all animated by a spirit that will not purchase articles abroad if they can be bought at home. The spirit of reciprocity between business man and mechanic, tradesman and laborer, farmer and manufacturer results every time in making the town a perfect one to do business in. And merchants in a town who are guilty of purchasing articles out of or getting work done by outside parties, which they can as well procure at home, ought to be boycotted.

One of those "smart fellows" who proves his smartness by loud talk on all occasions, and some swagger was yesterday indulging in his garrulity near one of the milk stands on the fair grounds at Oswego Falls, surrounded by a half dozen or so of fellows like unto himself. Walking up to the counter he took up a glass of milk and raised it toward his lips, as he sang out "See here, you fellows, I'm going to milk the cow." "You mean you are going to feed the calf," said a lady who was passing, in a tone so loud as to be heard by all. "The "smart fellow" gulped down the milk, and then said he didn't see what the darned fools were all laughing at.—[Oswego Times-Express.

To the Afflicted.

Dr. Galt came to Oswego Falls and commenced the practice of medicine last November and during the time up to March 1st. 1885, treated successfully some fifty females who were afflicted with difficulties peculiar to their sex.

The Doctor has during his entire practice treated over eight thousand and out of that number hundreds that had been confined to their beds from 1 to 20 years, and not one but was raised to comparative health, after they had been given up by the physicians that attended them. If necessary will give positive proof of validity of the above statement. Dr. Galt also claims that in his medical researches he has made as remarkable a discovery as has ever been made in medicine, that is, in a remedy that positively will cure a fever sore or any ill conditioned ulcers, abscesses or or sores on the body of any name or nature. It removes the poison from the blood and circulation, and destroys all impurities. The Doctor has cured some 12 cases while at Oswego Falls, entirely sound, as bad cases as could be found. Any person wishing to ascertain the validity of the above statement is requested to write to the editor of the Oswego Falls Observer or the proprietor or both. [illegible] killed by lightning strik- [illegible]. Electricity runs along [illegible] 300 rods, and where [illegible] are standing near the [illegible] they are killed. We learn from [illegible] officer of an insurance company that [illegible] since six head of cattle were [illegible], which, from the position in which they were found lying, none of them could have been nearer than ten feet from the fence, and some fifteen feet. From the fact that the fence posts opposite the cattle and for forty rods on either side were split and shattered, showed they were killed by a heavy discharge of electricity. We do not know anything about the operations of this subtle fluid.

There are, however, various cases on record where stock have been killed by electricity running along the fence when they were standing several feet distant. There is abundant opportunity for the electricity to descend to the ground on every post, but owing to the better conducting power of the wire, it continues along the fence.

Why it should leap from fence to stock ten or fifteen feet away, will take a scientist to explain. But the fact is beyond dispute. If the stock stood along the fence, which is often the case, it is almost certainly fatal.

A way might be easily and cheaply fixed for the electricity to descend to the earth, by a wire running down the side of the posts deep into the damp earth, and in this way secure the safety of stock. Wire is going to be used for fences, and devices should be invented for making fences more safe for stock. If cattle were in a close lot or corral, with a wire fence, and it were struck all of the stock would stand a chance of being killed. A few dollars spent in aids to conduct the electricity to the earth would be cheaper than paying insurance premiums to insure stock. With such an instrument as lightning rod peddlers carry around with them to make holes to put down their rods, the common fence wire could easily be put down ten feet, which would be a good conductor, and save the lives of valuable stock. Let farmers who have valuable stock inclosed by wire fence think of these ideas.—[Iowa State Register.

Fertilizers for Corn, Potatoes, Vegetables and Small Fruits.

E. J. Brownell writes to the Rural New Yorker as follows:

I have been for many years greatly interested in the fertilizer question; but as I have, fortunately for myself, been so situated as to obtain a sufficient supply of stable manure, having been able to purchase it at reasonable rates, my experience in the use of commercial fertilizers has been but limited. I have, however, at different times used small quantities of superphosphate, and always with excellent results; especially is this the case in its application for corn and potatoes, and such vegetables as cabbage, turnips, etc. On one occasion particularly, I purchased about 100 pounds of superphosphate for use on a small piece of buckwheat on old, worn-out soil, where by leaving a small strip without fertilizer of any kind, I proved to my satisfaction, that my investment had returned over 250 per cent. profit. In fact, the best investments I have ever made in my farming and garden operations, are those I have made for fertilizers of any kind. In the growth of strawberries and raspberries, in which I am engaged to a considerable extent, I use large quantities of unleached wood ashes, and always with excellent results. In fact, at the rate at which I have been able to purchase them (about 50 cents per barrel), I consider them one of the cheapest fertilizers I can obtain.

FACTS FOR FARMERS.

Wheat should be sown at a depth of from one to one and one-half inches.

A little charcoal is good for hogs and should be given to them occasionally.

The wheat crop in Oregon this year will be 30 per cent in excess of last year.

Scratches in horses are caused by keeping the animal in a damp or filthy stable.

A Mississippi farmer dashes cold water into the ears of choking cattle. This causes the animal to shake its head violently, and muscular action dislodges the obstruction.

The editor of the Farm, Field and Stockman was told that a teaspoonful of coal oil poured into the wounds made by peach borers would kill the insects. He tried it and found it killed the tree as well as the borers.

After apple trees begin to bear the ground ought to be seeded in grass to keep down the weeds. The grass furnishes good sheep and hog pasture. Every second year the orchard will bear a dressing of good, well-rotted manure.

By the latest estimate of the agricultural bureau at Washington the entire wheat crop will be about 357,000,000 bushels. Certain compiles of crop statistics in the West would reduce this estimate by 25,000,000 bushels. At best the figures show a very large shortage. Last year's crop was 512,000,000 bushels, and the average crop for the five years ending that year was about 460,000,000 bushels. If we assume that this year's crop is 350,000,000 bushels, the shortage as compared with the crop of last year is 160,000,000, and as compared with the average of five years it is 110,000,000 bushels.

How to Walk for Exercise.

If walking alone is adopted as the means to counteract the effect of too much sitting, then care should be taken that system enters into the walk. A [illegible]

[illegible] dairy herds to decline with the diminishing growth of herbage, during autumn. When butter and cheese are high, there is every inducement apparent to make and save every pound of them possible, for the profit they yield is indubitable; but, when it is a serious question with the dairymen whether the cows yield any profit or not, a gradual decline in milk would not be greatly deplored.

This, is our opinion, is not the true light in which to regard the question. Any small waste of milk, or butter or cheese may not be as great a loss, absolutely, when butter is sixteen cents a pound and cheese six cents, as when they are fifty or one hundred per cent. higher, but relatively, it may be quite as important to save everything and make the yield as large as possible when products are low as when they are high.

If it be true, generally speaking, that the farmer should save his products as carefully when they are low as when they are high, there is additional reason for keeping up the yield of milk in a dairy in the fact that if allowed to decline in milk and dry up early, one year, they are quite likely to develope a tendency in that direction another year. The capacity of the herd for producing milk may be diminished.

With a cow, the more you take from her in the way of milk, within reasonable limits, the more she will yield, while if you forbear to take from her all that she secreted, her secretion of milk will diminish until her secretory organs will entirely cease to act. Hence, we see the importance of keeping cows in full milk as long as possible after the birth of every calf. In a state of nature, mammals begin to decline in milk within a short period after the birth of every offspring, determined by the time when the offspring is capable of subsisting on other food, but in the cow that period has been greatly prolonged by the practice of drawing her milk by hand for other purposes than the support of her young. The cow, such as we see her, capable of producing from 20 to 40 quarts of rich milk in 24 hours, and of prolonging her yield of milk for ten or twelve months after calving, is the creature of man, and is nowhere found in a wild state. She has been brought to her present lacteal capacity by careful selection and breeding, through centuries, by the selection of milk-producing food, and by drawing from the udder the last drop of milk it contains. The neglect or omission to provide any of these requisites creates a tendency in her to revert to her primitive condition in which she would be unprofitable as a milk producer.

Now, in view of these facts or laws governing milk production, it seems to us that it is advisable for dairymen to keep up as large a yield of milk for as long a period as possible, by furnishing an abundant supply of proper food and by continuing to milk the cows clean, as long, at least, as the milk is suitable for human consumption.

To do this it is necessary to always have at hand such a supply of food as will render the dairyman independent of the effects of meteorological fluctuations so there shall be no sudden decline in milk from drouth or frost. We enter autumn with a splendid prospect for pasture, but when that pasture declines in quantity, or is impaired in quality by frosts, the dairyman should have his his substitutes, either vegetables, fruit, good hay or grain, or all combined. Pumpkins, cabbages, beets, apples and corn, oats, millfeed, oil-meal will all promote the flow of milk.—[American Rural Home.

What Our Girls Need Most.

The fair maidens who, when the roses bloom again, will become, or hope to become, "sweet girl graduates," are now about to return to the struggle with the vexations of the school-room, which, being duly overcome, they hope to receive the diplomas certifying that they have mastered the scheme of studies calculated to develop the accomplished American girl of the period. Many of these young ladies will, perhaps, not be content with having "finished" at the seminary at which they shall have been graduated, but will enter one or another of the schools for the higher education of women. If they shall not approach to the plane reached by a George Eliot, a Hariet Martineau or a Mary Somerville it will not be the fault, perhaps, of the instructors who zealously expatiate upon the benefits of the new system. By all means, let every woman become a veritable blue stocking, provided she is first taught the practical knowledge demanded for meeting the needs of the household.

Mothers anxious that their daughters be taught music, painting, dancing, the graces of the schools and the diversions of society err sadly if they neglect to have them taught how to manage the nursery, the kitchen and the other departments of a home. Young women whose fortunes are rendered safe by the solidity of their investment may perhaps, disdain the knowledge of such commonplace things as the needs of a family, but in this age of speculation, when fortune often hangs on the caprice of chance, few mothers can afford to permit their daughters to risk the trials that the management of a home will subject them to without a preparatory training for the duties of housekeeping. Schools of household training for women are the greatest desiderata for the sex that our American civilization by its anomalies and vagaries has brought to the view of the reflecting among our people.—[Baltimore Herald.

30 YEARS RECORD.

Physicians' Testimony.

A. W. Brown, M.D., of Providence, R. I., says: "I have used Hunt's [Kidney and Liver] Remedy in my practice for the past sixteen years, and cheerfully recommend it as being a safe and reliable remedy."

Another prominent doctor of Providence says that "I am frequently urged to use other preparations as substitutes for Hunt's [Kidney and Liver] Remedy. I find on trying them that they are worthless in comparison to it."

An Old Lady.

"My mother, 76 years old, has chronic kidney complaint and dropsy. Nothing has ever helped her like Hunt's [Kidney and Liver] Remedy. She has received great benefit from 8 bottles and we think it will cure her."—W. W. Sunderland, Builder, Danbury, Conn.

A Minister's Wife.

Rev. Anthony Atwood, of Philadelphia, says:—"Hunt's [Kidney and Liver] Remedy has cured my wife of Dropsy in its worst form. All say that it is a miracle."

General Chace.

General Chace of Rhode Island says: "I always keep Hunt's [Kidney and Liver] Remedy in my house. Taken in small doses occasionally at night, it prevents headache, and regulates the kidneys, stomach and other organs." 10

"Disease soon shaken, by Hunt's Remedy taken."

C. N. CRITTENTON, N. Y., General Agent.

Tamarack Kidney Remedy.

Are you afflicted with kidney, uterine or urinary complaints in any form? Note symptoms. Do you have excruciating, lacerating or periodical pains in the back? Do you void often or in excessive quantity? Do you have difficulty in voiding water, smarting, stinging or burning pains? Do queer, creeping indescribable pains run up your back? Do you have heartburn or palpitation? Does your urine have an albuminous or yellowish red deposit similar to brick dust? Does a sudden start or excitement cause you much pain in the region of the kidneys? Do you have vertigo, nervous trembling, poor memory or despondency? [illegible]

But we don't often see them—outside of fiction.—[Norristown Herald.

Smiles When She Speaks.

The power of unconscious influence was illustrated recently by a little incident that occurred in Eastern Massachusetts.

A lady called at the house of a neighbor on an errand; but, as the family was away, she asked the hired man to tell his employer she would call again. Being in a hurry, and not thinking but that the man knew who she was, she did not leave her name. The lady of the house returned before the rest of the family, and the man told her that a lady had been there who said she'd call again.

"Who was it?" inquired Mrs. H.

"Oh, I don't know her name," replied the man.

"But you should have asked her," said Mrs. H., "so we would know who had been here. Can't you tell me anything by which I can tell who came? Where does she live?"

"I don't know," said the man, "but she's the one that always smiles when she speaks."

The pleasant look and courteous manner in which the lady had spoken to the servant had been noticed and remembered, leaving a sunbeam in that man's heart.

Let us each remember that religion is recommended by the way in which we treat even the servants. The command, "Be courteous," reaches to all with whom we nave to do.[The Congregationalist.

What New York Women Wear.

Brown and russet English homespun is early autumn wear, in hedge sparrow and burnt heather shades, with long vests of silk in quiet, harmonious colors. Indeed the hues of dress and vest are studied from wild birds on wing and breast. And a grayish brown will have a dull, mellow buff or orange vest; a darker suit be relieved with metallic blue, changeable as the wing of a jay, or a pigeon gray have a vest of warm dove color. Whichever shade is chosen for the vest reappears in the wings and rosettes for the hat trimming. Turbans and small hats are more stylish than the high-crowned shapes which have become common, and the princess bonnet worn at the Battenburg wedding by all the elegants is justly favored for the season in town. This modest, becomming bonnet may go out of fashion, but never out of favor.—Mail and Express.

Courtesy to a Stranger.

"Gentlemen, would you mind moving along and giving me a seat? I don't feel very well."

"You look well enough to stand; we're crowded already," said a glum young man.

"Excuse me, but I've traveled all the way from Montreal, and I didn't——"

Within two minutes the stranger had a choice of all the seats, and he wasn't from Montreal either.

Went Off With the Fever.

"Hello, doctor; Brown was buried to-day. Had they called in another physician?"

"No, Bromley."

"Why—how's that? I asked you yesterday about him and you said he was doing well."

"No, I didn't. I said the fever was gone."

"Well, isn't that the same thing?"

"I was in a hurry, and forgot to add that Brown went off with it."—[Philadelphia Call.

BUTTER COLOR

A NEW DISCOVERY.

☞For several years we have furnished the Dairymen of America with an excellent artificial color for butter; so meritorious that it met with great success everywhere receiving the highest and only prizes at both International Dairy Fairs.

☞But by patient and scientific chemical research we have improved in several points, and now offer this new color as the best in the world.

It Will Not Color the Buttermilk. It Will Not Turn Rancid. It is the Strongest, Brightest and Cheapest Color Made,

☞And, while prepared in oil, is so compounded that it is impossible for it to become rancid.

☞BEWARE of all imitations, and of all other oil colors, for they are liable to become rancid and spoil the butter.

☞If you cannot get the "improved" write us to know where and how to get it without extra expense. (46)

Congratulations.

BY T. C. HARBAUGH.

My congratulations—I did not attend
Your wedding, because I was late
In getting your kind invitation, my friend;
I fear 'twas the workings of fate.

I know you are happy, for who would not be
With a woman as lovely as Flo?
Just ask her if she has a mem'ry of me,
Or a thought of the "dear long ago."

My picture of her is a wild, dashing girl,
Yet a dignified, pert little miss,
With ebony tresses in many a curl,
And lips cherry ripe for a kiss.

And so she's your wife and no more Florence Vane!
A wife! Was it not yestermorn
That together we stood at the end of the lane
In the shade of the flowering thorn,

And laughingly whispered of years that would come
With duties, and troubles, and strife?
And maybe I pictured a snug little home
Adorned with a sweet little wife!

Yes, read her this letter; she'll like it I know,
There's nothing I'd not have her see;
And she will not object, for the "dear long ago,"
Old boy, if you kiss her for me.
—[Demorest's Monthly for September.

WAS SHE FRIVOLOUS?

The Rev. Mr. Shaw contrasted greatly with his surroundings—his spotless cloth fitting so well his strong manly figure; his clear cut Grecian features, and dark wavy hair thrown back with careless grace from his smooth brow.

He was visiting one of those wretched tenement houses used by the very poor, and before him was a forlorn group.

A widow who had just buried her husband: she had five helpless children—the eldest six, the youngest a nursling baby, and a pair of twins among them. The rags, and worse than all, the dirt of poverty everywhere apparent.

An expression of almost sublime pity rested on the countenance of the minister.

The woman, with her apron thrown over her head, rocked herself to and fro, and wailed forth her troubles.

"I don't know what I'm a goin' to do for myself and little 'uns. Though my old man would have his drink, he didn't beat us, and brought enough to us to keep body and soul together, but now I know we can't do nothin' but starve and die!"

"Have you no friends?" asked Mr. Shaw in a low tone.

"Some, but as bad or wuss off than us. Yes," she said, looking up with a grateful bright expression. "There is one—Lord bless her!—who has done a lot for me—Miss Mehitable Shanks. She sent me medicine and the doctor to the old man, and guv' me clothes and sunthin' to eat; and many's the man, woman and child what blesses her for takin' care of 'em. Why, sir, she even leaves little cards with stamps on 'em, and Job Potter, who can write, sends 'em to her when we are in a very bad state.

After assuring her of his sympathy and that he would do what he could for her, the minister wended his way home. As he thought of those to whom he might appeal, a vision of a sweet, bright face haunted him, but while he lingered over the the thought most tenderly, there was a shadow on his brow, as if there was some slight jar that marred the harmony of his thoughts.

Mr. Shaw was rector of one of the wealthy churches of the city, and Ma Belle Lee was one of his parishioners. Her face was Madonna-like in its tender curves and beauty, and the large blue eyes with just a tinge of sadness, the perfect curve of the red lips, a faultless complexion, and blonde hair that was like a halo of light round the graceful head. But ah, when she talked it was like a damper, a mist on a beautiful picture, marring the tints that otherwise would have been perfect.

Bright and witty, but a butterfly; such a devotee to society that one longed for the expression of a single serious thought that could leaven into common sense this personification of frivolity. With it all, however, she was lovely and lovable to every one, and Mr. Shaw had long struggled against an interest in her, the indulgence of which he felt would be fatal to his happiness and usefulness.

Absorbed in these thoughts he found himself in front of Mr. Lee's house, and obeying an impulse, he turned into the gate and was admitted.

As Miss Lee entered the parlor he thought he had seldom seen a fairer vision, and was vexed to feel his heart throb quickly, and thrill with pleasure that he felt must be controlled. She greeted him with that easy grace which was one of her principal charms.

"Ah, Mr. Shaw! I am so glad to see you! I have had a real spell of ennui this morning. The last novel is wretched, as both hero and heroine died in the most provoking way, all because of some overstrained idea of duty, and I was just wishing that some one would come in and I could have a cheerful little chat to dispel the gloomy impression."

"Then I'm afraid," smilingly, "you will not like your present visitor. I have not come in a very cheerful humor; and besides, I wish to ask a favor."

"A favor. That is too lovely! Consider it granted, even to the half of my kingdom. I am truly glad that you wish to ask a favor of me, because I did not think your opinion of me was sufficiently good for such a thing. Do you know," with a sudden drop of the eyes, "that you always make me feel as if I am doing something wrong!"

"Do I? Well, I shall give you a golden opportunity to redeem yourself. I have just been visiting some of those wretchedly poor families in ——— street and I would like so much if you could interest some ladies in their behalf—visit them and relieve them."

A look of consternation overspread her pretty face as she exclaimed:

"[illegible] don't mean for me [illegible] would I ever stand [illegible]. Ah, me [illegible] a shudder. "Ask me almost anything else!"

A look of keen disappointment drifted over Mr. Shaw's face.

She suddenly brightened and said:

"I do intend to do something good next week. I have refused a German," triumphantly, "that I may attend the Charity Calico Ball to be given. You know all the dresses are for the poor, so I shall do some good."

"And what is your dress to be?" asked Mr. Shaw, with rather an indescribable inflection to his voice.

"The loveliest light blue silesia with a flowered cretonne front," she replied, enthusiastically, "sleeveless waist, Medici collar, shirred and very bouffant draperies. It will be beautiful, and I know it will seem very nice to some poor woman who has never had anything like it."

"Yes," he said in a tone quite saturated with irony, "I don't doubt its usefulness; but don't you think you ought to add a few yards of illusion to make some warm bodies for those who have no fires, and a few yards of ribbon to decorate the little freezing arms?"

"Now, you are angry with me, Mr. Shaw," she said hesitatingly. "Don't think me utterly heartless; but I can't go to——street. It would give me a little blue chill."

"I could never consent to such a cruel thing as that," he said with an unpleasant smile. "I really feel that I owe you an apology for intruding such a disagreeable subject, particularly after your nerves were shattered with your novel. Good morning," and he bowed himself out rather abrutely with a strange little pain his heart.

He did not again allude to the subject to her but found other ladies who interested themselves most warmly in the work.

Everywhere he went in his charity rounds he could see and feel the influence of Miss Shanks' good acts. She seemed to be an angle of mercy, who never tired, and who devoted her entire time to charity. All that she did was marked by a practical good sense, and a depth of thought and feeling that he could not fail to admire. Still he chanced never to meet her.

One day, when entering the postoffice, he saw in advance of him the graceful figure of Ma Belle Lee. She was unaware of his presence, and, standing idly behind her, he felt as if he had received an electric shock as she asked: "Is there anything for Miss Mehitable Shanks?" and then received and pocketed several postal cards.

If he was astonished at the question, he was still more so at the effect which his discovered presence produced upon her.

Neck, face and brow, even to the roots of her golden curls, were dyed in a painful crimson, her eyes dilated with an expression of consternation, but with a few hasty steps he soon overtook her. He was lost in a bewildering surprise. She was the last person with whom he would have connected Miss Shanks in any way, and her great agitation, as he walked beside her, increased his surprise.

A sudden bright suspicion caused his heart to beat almost to suffocation.

"Tell me, Miss Ma Belle," he said, "what have you to do with Miss Shanks' letters?"

"I really can't understand, Mr. Shaw, what right you have to ask such a question. In all things spiritual I acknowledge your right, but in this instance you forgot yourself."

"Tell me," he said, with eager regardless haste, "are you Miss Shanks?"

A sudden burst of tears was her only answer as she hastily pulled down her veil and walked silently beside him.

A calm of perfect joy decended upon him as he realized the truth. He walked by her side until he reached her home and then, without invitation, entered it with her.

As they reached the parlor she tossed aside her hat and stood before him more like a discovered culprit than the little saint she had proved to be.

There was a defiant sparkle in her eyes as she turned her flushed face to him.

"So, Ma Belle, Ma Belle," he murmured tenderly, "your heart is as beautiful as your face, though you have veiled your goodness under an exterior of frivolity. This is not the general rule of humanity."

"But, Mr. Shaw, if it is a fault it lies entirely at your door."

"Have I anything to do with it?" in surprise. "I have been thinking for a long while that you were entirely beyond my control."

"Nevertheless I have only been obeying your instructions. Don't you remember some time since you preached against ostentatious charity? 'Let not thy left hand know what thy right hand doeth.' I thought that there was a world of truth and force in it, and I have only practiced what you preached. And now, Mr. Shaw," she said, with a demure glance at him, "if you are done with my hands I will not trouble you to hold them any longer."

"No," he said gravely; I do not wish to return them. Ma Belle! Ma Belle!" quickly and tenderly, "give me the privilege of owning them always. Won't you, darling?"

She caught them quickly away.

"No, no," with a low laugh; "it is Miss Shanks with whom you have fallen in love, for Ma Belle Lee has only had your toleration.

"Ah," he said, "that was when I thought you were a butterfly. Now that I know you to be a saint, I beg you to share your grace with me, and help me in all good things. I am willing to take either you or Miss Shanks—or, in defiance of the laws of the land, I will take you both!"

She hesitated; then with a lovely blush and smile, she laid her hands in his.

"One for Miss Shanks—one for myself."

He drew her to him, and [illegible] the waters, which had returned to him after many days.

George W. Childs.

"Whatever may be said of the Philadelphia Ledger and its proprietor," said President Amos Cummings, in the Press club the other day, "George W. Childs is certainly the most generous and whole-souled editor and owner of a newspaper in the world. No worthy journalist or journeyman printer when in need ever applied to him and was refused. A year or two ago Mr. Childs saw that one of his old editors was worn out, and that his work lacked the polish that had always characterized it. He called him into his sanctum one morning and said:

"'You have worked for me forty years. You have always done your work honestly and acceptably. I am now going to retire you on full salary. Take your wife and children, go into the country and enjoy yourself. Come or send to the office every Saturday and draw your salary. Hereafter your time, as well as your salary, is your own.'

"The old editor overwhelmed Mr. Childs with thanks and departed. On the succeeding Saturday he went to the counting-room and the cashier refused to pay him his salary.

"'Wait,' he said, 'and I'll go and see Mr. Childs about it.'

"He went to Childs, and Childs told him to pay the man for a week's services.

"'But he is no longer on the paper,' the cashier suggested.

"'That makes no difference,' Mr. Childs remarked, 'pay him salary as long as he lives.'

"'But, Mr. Childs,' broke in the cashier, 'do you know this man is worth over three hundred thousand dollars?'

"'I hope he is,' Mr. Childs responded. 'It speaks well for him. The fact that he is worth that money is no reason why I should not pay him his salary after his forty years of faithful service. If he had squandered his money in rum or dissipation you would have said that it would be all right to retire him on salary because he had no money. His prudence and thrift deserve at least an equal reward. Pay him salary as long as he lives, and say no more about it.'

"The old editor died three months afterward, leaving four hunded thousand dollars to his wife and children, but his salary was paid up to the day of his death.

"Another instance of Mr. Childs' kindness to his employes is shown in the case of a man employed on the Ledger when Mr. Childs first bought it. He was a good workman but a noted drunkard. When Mr. Childs assumed control he went to him and said; 'Mr. Childs, are you going to keep me on the paper at my present salary?'

"'What are you getting?' Mr. Childs asked.

"'Fifteen dollars a week,' the man replied.

"'I will double it on one condition,' his employer said; 'that is, that you shall never drink a drop of rum as long as you are in my employment.'

"The man accepted the proposition. He afterward became a well known temperance lecturer in Philadelphia, although he complained bitterly when advertised as a reformed drunkard. Childs kept an eye on him, and he also has just been retired on a salary. Whenever he desires to do any special work on the Ledger, he is at liberty to do so. Meantime he draws his salary regularly and his bills of expense are never questioned. He, also is said to be worth three or four hundred thousand dollars.

"Another instance of Mr. Childs' benevolence was shown in the case of Colonel John W. Forney. As the twilight of life approached Forney became very poor. His good heart had been strained to its utmost tension by pretended friends, and he was barely able to make a living. One day he met Childs.

"'I am getting old,' the colonel said, 'and I owe a good deal of money to persons not able to lose it. If you could aid me by paying my debts, it would make the latter part of my life comparatively happy.'

"'Go home and find out how much you owe,' Childs replied, 'and let me know in the morning.'

"The next day Forney reported that he owed about twenty-five hundred dollars. Childs sat down to write a check for the money, when Forney said:

"'Childs, you might as well make it five thousand while you are about it.'

"The good-natured editor filled out the check for $5,000 and passed it to Forney. Within a week the colonel wrote him a letter, saying that he had no idea how happy the receipt of the money had made him.

"'I do not now,' he wrote, 'owe a cent to anybody in the world, and I am twenty five hundred dollars ahead.'

"The colonel, with prehensile frendship, had accepted the generous man's check as a gift, and not as a loan.

"Not long afterward the colonel died. He left his family in comparative poverty. On learning of this Mr. Childs remembered that while Mr. Forney was clerk of the house of representatives at Washington, he had paid $30,000 into the public treasury on account of the defalcation of one of his subordinates. Mr. Childs went to Samuel J. Randall, told him the situation of Colonel Forney's family, and asked him to see whether the money that had been paid to the government by Colonel Forney on account of the defalcation could not be returned. Mr. Randall investigated the case. It appeared that Colonel Forney, while technically responsible for the defalcation, was not actually to blame. Through Randall's influence congress passed a bill returning the money to Forney's family with interest. On looking over her husband's papers Mrs. Forney discovered that Forney had borrowed the five thousand dollars from Mr. Childs. On the next day the appeared at the Ledger office [illegible] returned [illegible], Mr. Childs said:

"'I'll take the money, Mrs. Forney, and place it to your credit. It is for your use alone. As long as you live you shall have the use of it, but I want it placed so that it shall not be swallowed up in case of any misfortune to you.'

"It is not generally known that the action of congress in making General Grant a retired general of the army on full pay was due to the efforts of George W. Childs; but such is the fact, as one can ascertain by talking with the Grant family."—[New York Journalist.

FOR AND ABOUT WOMEN.

A WHISPER.

Love me, love, but breathe it low,
Soft as summer weather,
If you love me, tell me so,
As we sit together.
Sweet and still as roses blow—
Love me, love, but breathe it low.

Words for others, storm and snow,
Wind and changeful weather—
Let the shadow waters flow
Foaming on together;
But love is still and deep, and O!
Love me, love, but breath it low.

It is said that the girls in the United States Treasury do not marry because they know too much about men.

Trust not a woman when she weeps, for it is her nature to weep when she wants her will.—[Socrates.

If you think all the old maids are on the anxious seat to marry, and that the old bachelors can get them for the asking, you are mistaken. Most maiden ladies over thirty are single from choice, and not from compulsion, as you seem to imagine.—[From a letter in the Houston Age.

Coming Fashions For Men.

The new fall silk hat will be higher and straighter in the crown than its spring forerunner, with a narrow brim, having a flat curve, technically called a "D'Orsay roll." Derbys will be high, with rounder crowns and less brim than formerly, and in color, black will be more worn than brown, which is the only other permissible shade. The tailors have not much to trouble them, as the styles of men's clothes have not been altered to any great degree. Four button cutaways and one button cutaways will be chiefly worn, the neck opening being cut a trifle lower than formerly. Trousers are steadily but gradually on the increase in width, and are cut straight instead of being shaped to the calf. Overcoats will be single-breasted Chesterfields, in cassimeres and diagonal. No new materials seem to have been introduced. Checks will still hold their place, while a broad, wide-spaced diagonal seems likely to be fashionable. In neckware the folded scarf has been largely replaced by the simple sailor's knot.

THE PROPER THING.

Plush is a favorite material for small wraps.

Very large flat buttons are again used on cloth jackets.

Wool ball fringe is used on mantles, and leather covered fringes are also new.

Cloth jackets, short mantles and long cloaks will be worn during fall and winter.

Long cloaks will be made with closely fitted backs, half loose fronts and square sleeves.

Cashmere colors in beads are a novelty and are found in galloons and passementeries.

For trimming plain wool dresses and wraps, there are colored mohair gimps, in pretty patterns.

Dainty neckerchiefs of finest muslin embroidered in field flowers or in gold and silver thread, are worn.

Fanciful silk cord or rope will be much used in festoons and long curves on the drapery of costumes and on wraps.

The trimming of the season will be velvet, which may be used on almost any material, either in contrast or in the same color.

Small mantles will be worn for dress occasions during the coming season, as they do not conceal the costume like the long cloaks.

Long black silk garments, made Newmarket, are popular for street wear, as they are easily adjusted, and can be worn with any skirt.

Wool laces in piece lace and in scalloped edges are used for combination wraps, both for short mantles of fine wool and for long cloaks.

In handkerchiefs, nothing can be so choice for a lady, as one of pure white, with deep hem-stiching border, provided the quality is perfect.

Lace ruching finished by two rows of the lace hanging about three yards long from the neck and caught in at the belt, are stylish for youthful ladies.

The wide-tucked sleeve which is coming in, is for thin women, who need it, and the tight model sleeve remains in for plump women, who know what art and nature requires.

A headgear for an elderly lady is of black French lace festooned round a half moon, violet silk center embroidered in iridescent beads and fastened with black and pearl headed pins.

The yoked dresses so much admired for little girls will be worn until late in the autumn, but a couquettish little shoulder cape of the dress material, tucked or embroidered, or with bead or bugle trimming, will be worn as an accompaniment for cool days.

What a Baby Can Do.

It can wear out a $1.00 pair of kid shoes in twenty-four hours.

It can keep its father busy advertising in the newspapers for a nurse.

It can occupy both sides of the largest-sized bed manufactured, simultaneously.

It can cause its father to be insulted by every second class boarding-house keeper in the city who "never take children," which to nine out of ten is very lucky for the children.

It can make itself look like a fiend just when mamma wants to show "what a pretty baby" she has.

It can make an old bachelor in the room adjoining use language that, if uttered on the street, would get him in the penitentiary for two years.

It can go from the furthest end of the room to the foot of the stairs in the hall adjoining quicker than its mother can just step into the closet and out again.

It can go to sleep "like a little angel," and just as papa and mamma are starting for the theatre it can wake up and stay awake until the last act.

These are some of the things that a "baby can do." But there are other things as well. A baby can make the commonest home the brightest spot on earth. It can lighten the burdens of a loving mother's life by adding to them. It can flatten the dirty little face against the window pane in such a way that the tired father can see it as a picture before he rounds the corner. Yes, babies are great institutions, particularly one's own baby.

Rheumatism

It is an established fact that Hood's Sarsaparilla has proven an invaluable remedy in many severe cases of rheumatism, effecting remarkable cures by its powerful action in correcting the acidity of the blood, which is the cause of the disease, and purifying and enriching the vital fluid.

It is certainly fair to assume that what Hood's Sarsaparilla has done for others it will do for you. Therefore, if you suffer the pains and aches of rheumatism, give this potent remedy a fair trial.

A Positive Cure.

"I was troubled very much with rheumatism in my hips, ankles, and wrists. I could hardly walk, and was confined to my bed a good deal of the time. Being recommended to try Hood's Sarsaparilla, I took four bottles and am perfectly well. I cheerfully recommend Hood's Sarsaparilla as one of the best blood purifiers in the world." W. F. WOOD, Bloomington, Ill.

THE DEMOCRATS.

David B. Hill received the nomination for governor at the Saratoga convention last Thursday on the first ballot, by a vote for him of 338 out of a total of 380. The people of the state in general are familiar with his past history and his brief career as governor. Mr. Hill, as is known was elected to the office of lieutenant governor on the ticket with Grover Cleveland by an overwhelming majority. The convention nominated Roswell P. Flower for the second place, who has since positively declined to accept. The news of Mr. Flower's declination was an unfavorable blow to the ticket. Gen. Slocum is now being strongly urged to accept the nomination. Comptroller Chapin, Attorney General O'Brien and Engineer Sweet were renominated, while Fredrick Cook of Rochester received the nomination for secretary of state and Lawrence S. Fitzgerald of Cortland for treasurer. The ticket is thoroughly Democratic and will be supported by Democrats. The mugwamp vote cannot be depended upon this fall. If Hill is elected it will be a pure unadulterated Democratic victory.

JUDGE HARDING RENOMINATED.

The Republican convention for the fifth judical district was held in Oswego last Friday. The honor of chairman of the important assemblage, composed largely of the ablest and brighest members of the bar of the central part of the state, was conferred upon Asst-District Attorney N. N. Stranahan of this village, a young man whose recognized ability and dignified bearing with other significant qualifications not unknown throughout the county, enabled him to execute the duties of a presiding officer in a highly creditable manner. The action of the convention resulted in the renomination of Judge George A. Harding of Herkimer, after several informal ballots, on the third formal ballot, a majority of one. During the informal balloting, Mr. Scripture received one more vote than Judge Harding. Had the men whom he counted on been true to him, he would undoubtedly have received the nomination. However, he made' an honorable fight.

FERDINAND WARD, who is still in Ludlow street jail, is making threats that he will soon reveal the true state of affairs which existed at the time of the failure of Grant & Ward. He says the public who know not the real condition of things are very unjust in their accusations against him. He is desirous of a trial and it is no more than right that he should be given a chance in a court of justice to clear himself if possible.

THERE is considerable feeling among the Democrats of Cato over the appointment of Matthew M. Hunter as postmaster. That portion of the party hostile to Mr. Hunter, are circulating a petition asking that the appointment be recalled. Mr. Hunter is a good consistent Democrat and obtained the untiring efforts of his brother, James Hunter, late editor of the Cato Graphic, and other prominent Democrats at Cato.

A slight fire occurred about 10 o'clock Saturday evening in the Phœnix Chronicle office in the Butts block. It was discovered by some persons on a canal boat, who gave the alarm, and the block was saved from destruction, as it certainly would have been burned if the fire had gained a little headway. Supposed to be a case of spontaneous combustion from rags used to wipe the machinery. The damage was only trifling.

Ira Davenport.

Ira Davenport, the Republican candidate for Governor, first saw the light at Hornellsville, N. Y., June 28, 1841. His father, Col. Ira Davenport, was a wealthy man, a noted philanthropist and a prominent citizen of Steuben county. The early education of young Ira Davenport was received at the Union school of Bath, N. Y., and later at the collegiate school of Dr. Russell at New Haven, Conn. He became prominent in political life in 1877, when he was elected to the State Senate. His services in that body as chairman of the committee on commerce and navigation, and on the canals and retrenchment committees, received the signal endorsement of his district, and in 1878 he was re-elected, increasing the plurality of 1,701 at his first election to a plurality of 5,778 upon his re-election. Here he laid the foundation for the future eminent services he was called upon to render as comptroller, to which he was nominated and elected by the Republicans in 1881. In this position he won the honorable title of "the model comptroller." He was renominated in 1883, but shared the fate of the remainder of the Republican ticket, excepting Secretary of State Carr. Mr. Davenport inherited a fortune to which he has added. His gifts to public enterprises are well known and his activity in endowing and establishing a Soldiers' Home at Bath is a matter of current comment. Mr. Davenport is slight and erect in figure and modest in dress. He wears a light moustache, has a high forehead and combs his hair backward. His home in Bath is an unpretending proportions and furnishing. It is situated in the midst of a small farm upon which are raised live stock, fruit and shrubs. Mr. Davenport is a bachelor.

IT is said that cholera failed to strike a single one of the 4,000 women employed in the national tobacco factory at Valencia, Spain, though the disease raged violently in that city, and the Medical World recalls that tobacco workers were also noticed to enjoy exemption from attack during an epidemic at Amsterdam.

THE New York Times and the New York Evening Post, mugwump organs, are seriously urging the election of the Republican candidates. The Times says: Democrats of courage and independence who wish to sustain the Administration will repudiate Hill, the nominee of Tammany and the spoilsmen, and vote for Ira Davenport.

Cheese Market.

(FROM THE UTICA HERALD.)

AT UTICA Sept. 28.

While everybody expected a higher market today, it is safe to say that no one anticipated such a decided boom. The advance is much the largest we have had this season, but it will take the rest of this week to determine whether it is warranted or not. There are two theories to account for it. One is that September cheese has been sold short, and the sellers desire to cover early, before any further rise takes place. The other is that positive orders were in hand to-day to purchase a number of the best factories at whatever price it was necessary to pay. We do not pretend to say that either of these theories is correct but give them for what they may be worth. The main fact that interests our readers is that cheese has advanced 1¼c., with a prospect that the advance will be maintained. Most of the stock marketed to-day was September made. Some factories had one or two days of August left, but they were all taken without objection. Transactions for the day were as follows: Four lots, 56 boxes, at 8c.; 39 lots, 1,311 boxes, at 8½c.; 3 lots, 230 boxes, at 8⅝c.; 31 lots, 3,820 boxes, at 8¾c.; 13 lots, 6[illegible] boxes, at 8⅞c.; 18 lots, 1,747 boxes at 9c. and 5 lots, 5[illegible] boxes, at 9¼c. Sales 12,514 boxes; commissions, 1,297 boxes; total, 13,811 boxes. Ruling price, 8¾c. Transactions one year ago, 9,764 boxes, with a ruling of 11c.; two years ago, 12,099 boxes, ruling 11⅞c.

LITTLE FALLS, Sept. 28.

CHEESE.—Another boom in the trade has made matters lively to-day. The market shows an advance over last week of about 1¼c. Trade continued so late that it was difficult to get full reports in time for transmission by late mails and trains. A few of the fancy factories held till the last minute, and scarcely any reports can be had till all business stops. Some buyers hoped to keep the ruling price down to 8½c., but it couldn't be done. There was a good deal of figuring to secure some of the fine lots and buyers were ready purchasers of all grades. It was generally regarded a good time to sell and there are fears expressed that rates have been crowded to high. Transactions are:

Lots.	Boxes.	Price.
29	1,537	8¾cts
17	2,129	8⅛cts
55	3,587	8¾cts
1	130	8⅞cts
24	1,768	9 cts
3	369	p. t.
129	9,530
Farm Dairy	980
Total	10,510

FARM DAIRIES.—There were 988 boxes of cheese sold on the morning market at a range of 8@10c., but one lot, the Burt Grove factory, sold at 13c., the bulk going at 8¾@9c.

BUTTER.—Several fine packages farm dairy butter sold at 15@17c., the bulk at 17c. Twelve packages creamery brought 18½c. per pound.

AT FULTON.

There has been a very encouraging advance in the price of cheese the past week. Twenty-five factories offered 2,020 boxes which was mostly disposed of at 8½c., Utica ruling. A quantity was sold at 8⅝c. The price one year ago was 10¾c.; two years ago 11 cents.

[illegible] dining. The husband who can look forward to such a state of things every day of his life will never tire of home, and the wife who studies his comfort will have little difficulty in managing him according to her will. Men are gregarious animals, and will wander in spite of all allurements, but they are selfish enough to remain where they are best treated, and by taking a little trouble for a year or two of married life the years that follow will, as a rule, find the husband always glad to go back to the pretty home where smiles await him and the dinner I spoke of. There are so many women who object to being "bossed," as they call it. My dear ladies you can always be boss if you take the trouble. By giving in you get your own way as you never would by fighting for it. And, after all, it is better to feel you respect your husband so much that to give in to him is not a difficulty.

Nine men out of ten are manageable if you go the right way about it, and one great point is to act after marriage just as you did before. Argument and contradiction are vital enemies to married peace. Should you wish for any thing in particularly, don't insist upon it after refusal. Some women are persistent and ask: "Why may I not? Why won't you do as I tell you?" and irritate the man. Rather bide your time, and make an extra good dinner of his favorite dishes, put a bow on of the color he likes, make home and yourself sweeter than ever. You'll get it sure, even if you have to wait. Also, when you want him to do any particular thing which you know will be for its good, for Heavens sake do not say "Do it." Rather drop a hint that you think so and so would be a good thing to do. Get him interested and then let the subject drop. I venture to say that in a short time that man will do precisely as you wish; he will never permit you to think that he has traded the least on your common sense.—[San Francisco News Letter.

How foolish, when a bottle or two of Parker's Tonic would set them all right. Try it, and get back your health and spirits. 21w3

[illegible] Bitters [illegible] over any [illegible]

With your permission we wish to say a few words in reply to the article addressed "To the Oswego Falls agricultural society," which appeared in the Fulton Patriot of last week. We are somewhat familiar with the department which the writer refers to and feel constrained to say that there is no just cause for a feeling of dissatisfaction. The judges of this department were impartial in their decisions, and we have reason to believe, were made from their best judgment. In no case were articles entered by judges and the "lion's" share of the premiums carried off. It is very probable, too, that the executive committee knew perfectly well as to the fitness of the judges, for the work required of them. Perhaps if the dissatisfied parties would hand in their names early enough, the executive committee might appoint them as judges at the next fair. We advise them to consider the matter.

VIOILA TOUT.

Held For the Grand Jury.

For a number of years John Kernan Sr., has been in the employ of the Oswego Falls Manufacturing Co. as night watch. For some time past pieces of cloth, tools, and a lot of miscellaneous articles have been missed and lately suspicion has fallen on the night watchman. Last Monday Supt. Maortens found a quantity of cloth, etc., which had been secreted, which confirmed his suspicions. A search warrant was sworn out and in Kernan's house was found a quantity of goods and property of the factory company. Kernan was arrested yesterday noon and upon his arraignment before Justice VanWagenen he pleaded [illegible]ty and was held to await the action [illegible] the grand jury.

A Strange Find.

About fourteen years ago Gardner Dutton who lived in Granby about two miles from this village, lost a watch, as he supposed in a field. The ground in the vicinity was thoroughly searched but in vain. He afterwards went West and died there, and in the years that have elapsed the incident was almost forgotten. Last Sunday morning his brother, Grove Dutton, while in the barn discovered a watch which had apparently dropped through some straw with which the stable is lined and lay in a crevice in the side of the building. He is satisfied that it is his brother's long lost watch. He thinks he left it in the barn instead of losing it in the field and forgot about it. Strange to say it keeps good time after its long rest.

The Phœnix Fair.

The thirteenth annual fair of the Phœnix agricultural society began yesterday and from all indications promises to be the largest and most successful one ever held. The display in live stock is very full, including some of the best blooded stock in Onondaga county, while the farm products are also well represented. There will be farmers' running races and two trotting races each day. The Pendergast race course is noted throughout the state as being first class.

Election of Officers.

At a meeting of the Sunday school board held last evening, the following Sunday school officers were elected for the M. E. S. S. for the year ensuing:

Superintendent—F. E. Bacon.
Asst. " F. E. Goodjon.
Lady " Mrs. E. Harroun.
Secretary—Elmer Morrill.
Treasurer—F. P. Connell.
Librarians—Justin Morrill, N. M. McCracken.
Chorister—F. E. Goodjon.
Organist—Mrs. E. R. Redhead.
Asst. " —Miss Alma Decker.

T. I. Park.

The board of trustees of Thousand Island Park have issued a circular announcing that the balance of the new stock needed to increase the capital of the association from $15,000 to $50,000 has been taken. In addition, the circular says:

We are glad to say to you that our current business for the year as per statement of the assistant treasurer of this date, makes a favorable showing for the association, notwithstanding the general financial depression of the country and the unprecedented coldness of the season. The net cash receipts from all our sources of business will be over $13,000.00. The expenses for labor, interest, taxes, insurance, repairs, incidentals, etc., will be about $11,000, leaving a balance of actual cash profits of $2,000. The new stock subscribed since last January of $35,000, will, when paid in, so much reduce the outstanding debts of the association, and so will diminish the interest account of next year by that amount. This would add to our net cash profit of $4,000, or 8 per cent. dividend upon the capital of $50,000.

The trustees congratulate themselves and all the stockholders of the association, old and new, on the favorable and hopeful outlook for the future.

Felts and all kinds of Wools and Silks for embroidery. C. E. SACKETT.

A. E. NETTLETON.

The "Bee Hive" opening occurs Thursday, Friday and Saturday Oct. 8, 9, and 10.

A large number of people visited Long Branch last Sunday, on the occasion of the Band boys' excursion.

The Rev. Mr. Darling of Oswego, and Rev. W. F. Markham of this village exchanged pulpits last Sunday.

A case of small pox in Oswego was reported to the Board of Health, but an investigation disproved the report.

Tom James was arrested last night by Officer Poole for being drunk and disorderly. He will be examined this afternoon.

Tickets are now on sale at Watson's drug store for the California minstrels Friday evening. Price of admission 25, 35, and 50 cents.

John Buell, who has been in the employ of E. E. Schenck for some time, left Sunday for Chicago, where he has secured a position.

Word was received yesterday that the health of J. G. Reynolds of Granby, was rapidly failing. This morning he is reported a little better.

The case of Andrew Badcock of this village which was on trial before U. S. Com. Getty Saturday was adjourned until to-day.

John Hadcock has secured the agency of the Fidelity Casualty company and the Home Provident Safety Fund association of New York.

An exchange says, girls in search of material for crazy quilts should apply to railroad companies. They throw away thousands of old ties every year.

By reference to the Trustees proceedings, published elsewhere, it will be seen the Board have resolved that trains must not be run through the village over eight miles an hour. The penalty is $25 for each offense.

Married—At the residence of the bride's parents, on Oneida street, by the Rev. Mr. Breaker of the Baptist church, last Thursday afternoon, Mr. Wm. H. Pollard of Holyoke, Mass., and Miss Elma M. Haven of this village.

Alex. Demareaux was arrested last Friday for being drunk and disorderly. Upon his arraignment he pleaded guilty and was sentenced to pay a fine of $10, and 30 days in jail. Sunday morning when Jailor Morris visited the jail the prisoner slipped through the door and made his escape.

C. W. Reals of Syracuse, business manager of the Demijohn Bitters Co., was in town yesterday in the interest of his company. The Demijohn Bitters are being extensively advertised and are giving universal satisfaction wherever used. W. J. Watson handles large quanties of them.

A letter can be remailed as often as necessary within the United States to get it to the owner without extra postage. The only limit is in the number of changes that can be made in the address on the envelope. With newspapers it is different, as additional postage has to be paid for remailing.

An Oneida correspondent says that Edwin Thomas, claiming Oswego Falls as his home, attempted to force his way into the dining room at the Globe hotel Friday noon and was thrown out by the clerk. He was arrested by Officer Wilcox and sentenced to four months in the Onondaga penitentiary.

Thomas Marvin of Warner's, N. Y., and Miss Genevieve Loomis of this village, were married last Thursday afternoon, at the residence of the lady's parents. A number of out of town friends were in attendance at the wedding. Many very valuable as well as useful presents were received. They left for Richfield Springs, where they will spend a few weeks.

Newspaper bustles are now made of back numbers. It is pretty tough to think that a man's journalistic efforts shall be thus sat upon. It crushes all the glory out of the profession, and were it not that the editor can feel that he has not only brightened a woman's mind, but improved her shape, he might as well throw up the sponge in disgust.

The management of the Lewis House, which for the past two months has been in the hands of Leonard & Burt, has again changed, Mr. Burt retiring. The new landlords are the well-known firm of Leonard & Wilson. Both of these men are very popular with the public, having been associated in the livery business and in the proprietorship of the buss line. A new livery office has been fitted up on the ground floor of the house in the former billiard room, and the entire house has been recently papered, painted and otherwise greatly improved. The success of the new landlords is an assured fact.

A Rare Flower.

Last Wednesday evening a night blooming cereus at the residence of Wm. Parkhouse attracted considerable attention. It was a magnificent flower, being thirty-two inches in circumference. Another bud was almost ready to open, and it was expected that in a day or two that would bloom. The next morning about 7 o'clock it commenced to slowly unfold, and at 9 o'clock had fully opened. The fact of a night blooming cereus opening in the daylight became noised about and large numbers of friends called at the house to see the rare and beautiful sight. At noon, when a TIMES reporter called, the luxurious flower was at perfection, filling the air of the room with an almost overpowering perfume. At about 3 o'clock it gradually begun to close and at 6 had drooped and withered. We have heard of but one other flower of this species that opened in daylight; several years ago at the residence of Mrs. Libbie Owen of this village.

J. K. Emmet the Comedian.

Next Tuesday evening the popular comedian, Mr. J. K. Emmet will appear at the Academy of Music in Oswego.

Upon the occasion of Emmet's appearance in Oswego two years ago, a large number of our citizens chartered a train and went down to the entertainment, and were highly pleased. Doubtless many would like to attend this time and Manager Pierce writes us that he will secure seats for those who communicate with him. Mr. Emmet carries his own large orchestra and a car load of scenery. The play will be put on the Academy of Music stage in a fine manner. The sale of seats opens at Hees' bookstore in Oswego, Saturday, Oct. 3d, at 9 a. m.

California Minstrels.

On Friday evening of this week the California Minstrels, well and favorably known throughout the country, will appear at Stephens Opera house. The Brooklyn eagle has the following worthy mention: "The California Minstrels opened last night at the Pavilion to the largest house of the season, and made a pronounced success. The singing was exceptionally fine, and the witticisms of the end men was clever and very enjoyable. The finale to the first part, a burlesque on 'Her Majesty's Italian Opera Company, was very funny and was thoroughly enjoyed by the audience. On the whole the performance was the best seen in Brooklyn for a long time."

The Water Works.

Work upon the water works is being pushed forward as rapidly as possible. The mains are nearly all laid and the hydrants, which arrived last week, are being placed in position. The water was drawn from the race Saturday night and a gang of men worked night and day laying the main under it. It was finished yesterday morning and the water let in. The pipe will be laid under the canal as soon as navigation closes.

Wanted in Fulton.

G. M. Bailey, Silver Creek, N. Y., wants an active boy or girl in Fulton to take orders for the best-paying goods sold by agents. Agents also wanted in Oswego Falls, Phœnix and Hannibal. Boys and girls at school easily earn $1. per day, taking orders. Send two cent stamp for letter containing particulars.

HIS LOSS WAS HER GAIN.

"Well, madam," said a fashionable physian to a wealthy lady patient, "if you don't like my prescriptions, perhaps you had better try Parker's Tonic, or some other quack stuff." "You don't mean it Doctor," she answered, "but your advice may be good for all that. Sometimes what you call 'quack stuff' is the best and most scientific medicine, after all." She got a bottle of Parker's Tonic and it cured her of neuralgia arising from disordered stomach and nerves. She told her friends, and now they all keep a doctor at home in the form of Parker's Tonic. 21w5

Soon the people of Baldwinsville will have but little trouble in finding their way about town. They are to have a village directory. We believe it is the desire of a number of the people of Fulton to find their way about town on street cars.

These are beautiful autumnal days we are just now enjoying. The trees are being slowly disrobed of their green and golden foliage while nature is extremely profuse in her varied designs of beauty.

"I love to wander through the woodlands hoary
In the soft light of an autumnal day,
When summer gathers up her robes of glory,
And like a dream of beauty glides away."

Miss Hattie DeGraw who is employed in Bacon's dry goods store accompanied a friend to the Midland depot this morning. Soon after returning to the store her attention was attracted by the smell of burning cloth. While informing the other clerks of her suspicions one of them discovered that her (Miss DeGraw's) dress was on fire and promptly extinguished it. No doubt while at the depot a spark from the engine dropped in the folds of the garment.

It is of vital importance that all possible precaution be taken for the safety of the public who are compelled to travel over the different railway crossings in our village and especially those of Oneida and Cayuga streets. Many are strongly urging the adoption of the gate, such as are used in the village of Oneida and other places where like danger is apparent. It is oft times difficult to discover the approach of a train at the above named crossings and sooner or later some serious accident may occur. We quote the old maxium that "an ounce of precaution is worth a pound of cure."

The October Monthlies.

The Atlantic Monthly for October is full of interest. Among the contributors are Henry James, H. E. Scudder, Olive Thorne Miller, C. Dudley Warner, Oliver Wendell Holmes. Dr. Holmes continues The New Portfolio. The rare excellence of a former series of papers in the Atlantic called "The Portfolio" with the "Autocrat of the Breakfast Table" had given this author a wide reputation, and the articles occurring each month, under the title of "The New Portfolio" are if possible, even more popular than the earlier ones. "Recent American fiction" reviews and severely criticises as well. Howell's recent novel "The Rise of Silas Lapham," Charles Egbert Craddock and Sarah O. Jewell's late novels also receive a share of attention. The article will be read with great zest. The contributors club is full and complete.

HARPER'S MONTHLY

For October opens with a second paper upon "Labrador" fully illustrated. The other illustrated articles are Great American Industry, A Model State Capitol, She Stoops to Conquor, Mexican Portraits, A Puritan Sketch, and Back Yard Studies. The usual number of writers appear, with some fine poems, Howells, "Indian Summer" is continued: this bids fair to be his best novel. The rank of Howell as one of the finest writers on American fiction is generally concede l, while the character, of his genius is so unique and so fascinating that his stories possess a charm of few other writers. The Editor's Easy Chair, Drawer and Record are full of interest and instruction. Key has the October and will furnish back numbers.

New Styles in Men's Fine Shoes at GOODJON'S.

Last Monday afternoon Officer Poole was notified that a woman living upon the flats was in a helpless state of intoxication. He went down, arrested her, threw around her the strong arm of the law, and brought her to the police court where she was arraigned for being drunk and disorderly. During the examination she became more or less tired of the peaceful proceedings and with a preliminary war whoop, remorselessly attacked her husband who was present, grabbed him by the hair and proceeded to mop up the floor with him. As she laid hands upon her liege lord, her dog, with a beautiful exhibition of fidelity for his mistress, seized the officer by the leg of his trousers, and with a persistency worthy of a better cause, shut his eyes and hung on. His Honor, who at the commencment of the fracas had taken refuge under the table, finally came to the rescue, and seizing the prisoner he unceremoniously fired her into the hall. The only cool, self-possessed person present was the jailor, who bravely climbed to the top of the high safe and viewed the battle from afar. By this time the officer had persuaded the dog to relinquish his hold and gently taking the arm of his fair charge gallantly escorted her to the jail parlors, where her belligerent spirit gradually cooled down.

Semi-Annual Meeting.

The semi-annual meeting of the Women's Foreign Missionary Society of the Syracuse Presbytery was held yesterday in this village. A large number of ladies from Syracuse, Oswego, Phœnix, Hannibal and other neighboring places were present. Following is a program of the exercises:

MORNING SESSION.

9;30 Devotional Exercises, conducted by MRS. ALLEN BUTLER.
10:00 Address of Welcome, MRS. H. A. ALLEN. Response for Presbytery Society, MRS. THORNBURN.
10:40 Reports of Secretary and Treasurer.
10:50 Verbal Reports from local societies and bands.
11:20 Missionary letters, etc.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

2:00 Devotional exercises, conducted by MRS. CHAS. JANES.
2:30 Minutes on Morning Session and report of committee on credentials.
2:10 Report of committee on new constitution.
2:55 Plans for Home Mission Work, etc.
3:20 Facts of special interest from the mission field, opened by Mrs. E. G. Thurber, and followed by Mrs. Montgomery, formerly of Marsovan, Turkey.

The address of welcome by Mrs. Allen of this village was a very able, scholarly effort and was listened to with close attention and interest by the large audience till its close.

The address of Mrs. Montgomery, who has been a missionary in Turkey for over 20 years, was very interesting.

Dinner and supper were served in the church parlors to the visitors.

Republican County Convention.

At the Republican county convention held in Oswego, yesterday, Hon. N. B. Smith of Pulaski, was made chairman and N. G. Salisbury and Arvin Rice were appointed secretaries. On the third informal ballot J. H. Oliphant received 102 votes for county clerk. It was moved and carried that the ballot be made formal and Mr. Oliphant declared the nominee. He thanked the convention for the nomination. Geo. P. Mattison of the First ward, Oswego, was nominated for coroner and Henry W. Walker of Albion, for justice of sessions.

OBITUARY.

Mrs. R. G. Bassett, a former resident of Volney, died in Rochester last Friday aged 61 years. The funeral was held Sunday from the residence of her son-in-law, Newell R. Cole. Rev. Henry Kendall of New York is visiting friends in Volney and preached in his old home church and at the grave of Mrs. Bassett by request of her son made some remarks. He spoke of the brevity of life, having known Mrs. Bassett from a child, and now as he stood among the graves of the departed and looked upon the monuments and also upon the faces of those around him, he thought he knew more of the dead than of the living that had grown up in his absence. Rev. O. C. Kirkham, her late pastor at Newark N. Y., assisted by the Rev. J. C. Breaker, of the Baptist church in this village, conducted the funeral services. The following gentlemen acted as bearers: R. Bradshaw, J. P. Streeter, L. B. Babcock, D. E. Wright.

Nellie Howe, daughter of John Howe, of this village, died last Friday at her home on Oneida street, of consumption, aged 19 years. She has been in very poor health for about two years and all through her long illness has borne her sufferings with patience and resignation. She was a pleasant, genial girl and her loss will be deeply felt by a large circle of her young friends. Funeral services were held Monday from the house, Rev. Mr. Markham officiating.

Mrs, Elizebth Quirk died at the residence of her daughter, Mrs Daniel Sullivan in Oswego Falls last Friday, aged 78 years. Funeral services were held Sunday afternoon from the Catholic church.

Died in Hannibal Center, Sept. 24, 1885, Mr. Charles Dewey, aged 64 years. Funeral services were held at the Baptist church Saturday afternoon, Rev. R. A. Burdic of Plainville officiating.

Bennett & Stewart,

South Scriba.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry T. Hubbard of Fulton spent Sunday with friends here.

An effort is being made to start a G. A. R. Post at this place. Things look favorable for it at present.

Mrs. Isaac Hale and Mrs. Linus Parker (Mr. Hale's mother) have the diphtheria. Fears are entertained for their recovery. Dr. Sinclair attends them.

SOUTH SCRIBA, Sept., 29.—The Oswego Falls and Scriba gun clubs had a shooting match at Lake View, Scriba, Saturday which resulted in the Oswego Falls club paying for the balls and supper.

The article that appeared in the Oswego Palladium a week ago under the head of "Home Mission" has created no little indignation. We never knew that "Sodom" was so "morally corrupt" and would advise Mr. Albert G. Parker if he has any more missionary work to do at that place to send some other man, for some of the women there wear No. 10 shoes.

Imogene, a five year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Hale, died Monday Sept. 21st of diphtheria. Deceased was an uncomon bright child and was loved by all who knew her. The funeral was held from Mt. Pleasant church Wednesday the Rev. E. C. Miller officiating.

The potato rot makes the farmers look downhearted. James Sheldon has six acres he is not going to dig. He had twelve acres and dug five hundred bushels last week that he sorted very close and now they are all rotting in the bins. The potato crop would have been an immense one had they not rotted.

Report says Dr. Phelps is not getting well as fast as was hoped. He is still with his sister at Waterloo. The doctor is missed here very much, he had a large practice and people don't know what to do without him.

South Hannibal.

SOUTH HANNIBAL, Sept. 29—Quite a number from this place attended the Syracuse fair last Thursday.

Mrs. Emma VanPatten of Lower Oswego Falls is visiting Mrs. Wm. Osborn.

Mrs. Eugene Moore and May King of Fulton, spent Saturday with friends in this place.

Miss Gracie Burdic is very sick, with but little hope of her recovery.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Havens of Vermillion, has been spending a few days with Mr. G. V. Wolven.

Mr. and Mrs. Phillip Grice spent Sunday at Mr. S. E. Rowlee's.

There will be a peach and ice cream festival next Friday night at the residence of Mr. Charles Upcraft, for the benefit of the church. M.

[illegible]ULTURAL DEPARTMENT.

Cut the Corn Right.

[illegible] first light touch of frost begins to remind us that the season for the corn harvest is close at hand. Millions of acres of rustling leaves are slowly browning under the Autumn sun, awaiting the hand of the harvester. Hill and valley and broad prairie are covered with the vast tasseled forests of this truly American crop. In aggregate value and importance it ranks next to grass. We have not yet grown to realize its true value. We are too apt to estimate it by the number of bushels of corn that are produced. Comparatively few farmers place any considerable value on the fodder, or stalks. It hardly enters into their estimates. And it is quite certain that it will be of little value to those who do not properly appreciate its worth. Those who understand its importance as a forage product, will see that it is harvested in good condition, and properly cared for. We can hardly expect the great corn growers of the West to cut and save all of their vast production under present circumstances, but we can safely look forward to the time when these great fields will be many times subdivided, which will enable the increased number of growers to save every acre of the fodder, that will then be prized as such an adjunct to the hay-field should be prized.

But we do wonder at the apathy of some of the Eastern farmers who raise but a few acres of corn and who do not seem to be at all anxious for the fodder from that. A large number of them imitate the plan of the Western farmer by driving into the standing corn, husking out the ears, and leaving the fodder in the field. They may turn the cattle in to feed it down, but it is a very small proportion of its value that is realized in this way. The fodder is so badly damaged by the time the cattle are turned in that only a small portion of it is eaten. The cattle tread it over and down in trying to pick out the few nubbins that have been left by the huskers.

Much of that that is cut, is not worth half price on account of the time or manner of cutting and storing. Corn should be cut just before or immediately after the first frost. After the leaves have been killed by frosts, the best portion of the fodder has been badly injured. The leaves will become dry and brittle so that they soon whiff away in the wind, leaving nothing but the bare stalks, which of course make very poor fodder alone. It is this kind of management that makes the product rank low as a fodder crop, with some. Corn should be cut as soon as the kernels are fairly glazed over, whether it be completely hardened or not. It will fill out and harden surprisingly. In times of early frost I have cut corn that was hardly out of the milk, and only a small portion of it would be shrunken to any extent after drying. Cut thus early even the stalks make sweet, tender fodder, and will be eaten half way up to the butts by cattle, with as good a relish as the best of hay. There is a right and wrong way to put up corn when cutting it. One can easily see this in passing through a country in Autumn after the corn cutting is over. One field of shocks stands up trim and straight so that there can be but little injury from Fall rains that are almost sure to occur while the shocks stand unhusked. In the next, the shocks lean this way and that, some broken half way over, while large numbers lie flat on the ground, rotting and growing in the mud. Not only is the fodder in the stalks almost ruined by lying on the ground in this way, but the corn is very much injured as well. Seed corn taken from such fields cannot be relied upon, and the whole will be graded lower in the market, if sold, and is of less value to feed at home.

I have tried many ways for shocking corn and have found only one sure way to make them stand up good. I take the 4 hills of a square and tie their tops together diagonally, bending them over half way to the ground, winding the tops round and round down towards the butts. Then I cut and fill in the 4 corners thus formed, and perhaps clear around out beyond them, after which the top of the shock is bound with straw bands. The shock is braced from all sides and will seldom go over. When husking, a knife is carried to cut off the standing hills, which is easily done after the fodder has shrunken away from them.—[Our Country Home.

FACTS FOR FARMERS.

Meadows should never be grazed short, but above all other times, not in the fall.

Don't sow timothy with wheat as it will retard its growth; wait two weeks later.

A light dusting of salt sown on buckwheat is said to largely increase the yield of grain, making it fill even in dry weather.

Feed the morning meal to your fowls warm. Scald the meal, boil and mash the potatoes or turnips, and mix these for the early day's feed.

An increase of 20 per cent. in the milk is sure to follow in cutting the feed, over feeding it uncut. This has been tried often enough to be depended upon.

A shovelful of manure over the roots of hop vines will not only increase the yield, but act as a protection against drouth in summer and cold in winter.

Seed wheat that is infected with smut should be purified before sowing. This may be done by washing it in brine and afterward strewing air-slacked lime over it, stirring it up and drying.

A teaspoonful of glycerine and a few drops of nitric acid to a pint of drinking water, will generally cure a fowl that shows symptoms of bronchitis, when accompanied by a gurgling sound in the throat, as if choking.

The extra labor required to work through mud, clods and water-soaked land year after year, on undrained [illegible], is in a short time equivalent to the [illegible] needed to put down a perfect system of drains. This is a point to figure [illegible]

[illegible] Remedy is purely vegetable, [illegible] for all diseases of [illegible]

[illegible] and who [illegible] tackled one when he was a brave Captain in the regular army. The story has never been told. McClellan was the second in command of the first exploring expedition that ascended the Red River of the South to its source. Capt. R. B. Marcy was in command, and a brother of mine was a teamster on the expedition. On the 28th of June, 1852, the troops had encamped after a march of eight miles over about the roughest country a wagon ever crossed, at the foot of the majestic cliffs that form the borders of the Staked Plains of New Mexico. The escarpments rise to a height of from 700 to 1000 feet, and the streams and springs which form the Red River rise in the gullies and recesses of these towering rocks. Capt. Marcy, with McClellan as his companion, started to examine the country on horseback, after the camp was made, and when a mile or two from the camp, saw on the opposite side of a little meadow half a mile away a herd of antelopes. The grass and the lay of the land favored an approach, and leaving the horses with McClellan, Marcy crept to within 600 or 700 yards of the animals, and began to use a bleat imitating the call of a fawn. In a minute or two the herd started toward him on a trot. He was about to shoot one of them when a rustle in the grass to his left attracted his attention. He looked around, and to his astonishment saw an enormous panther bounding toward him. He at once fired at the panther and tumbled it over. He then started back for his horse, and meeting McClellan, the two men returned to skin the panther. When they reached the place where it had fallen they were surprised to see it jump up and make off at a lively pace, although limping. Without a moment's hesitation McClellan headed it off and cornered it, with some rocks on one side and Marcy on the other. Almost any animal will fight when cornered, but a wounded panther is about the worst beast that a man can attack. It crouched with its tail quivering, and then jumped for him. McClellan, without apparent effort, stepped to one side, swung his rifle above his head and brought it down at the base of the panther's head, breaking the neck of the beast at one blow. It measured eight feet from nose to tail."—[N. Y. Sun.

The Independent Farmer.

Except in cases where a farm has some special advantages for a particular kind husbandry, it is generally agreed that variety of crops or mixed husbandry is best; another axiom, that there there should be a proportion between the animals kept and the crops. For instance: It is more profitable to sell the corn, oats, barley etc., raised on a farm in the shape of butter, cheese, wool, beef, eggs poultry, etc., than in the shape of grain. In like manner, it is better to sell the animals raised on grass and hay than to sell the hay. It is, likewise, better for the farmer's family to live upon their own milk, butter, cheese, poultry, pigs, pot toes, fruit, and vegetables of all kinds, that it would be to sell other crops in order to purchase these. There may be, as above intimated, exceptions to these rules; but we suppose all will admit their general accuracy. One great advantage of feeding as much live stock as can be safely carried through the year is, that the manure will, if properly cared for, prove the savings bank of the farmer. To his end every kind of refuse, solid or liquid, should be carefully added to the manure-heap, which should be covered with a shed from the wasting effects of wind, sun, and rain.

A South Carolina Sentinel.

As we sat on the veranda a dog came out of his lair back of the house and ascended the steps and took a long look at me before lying down at the Major's feet. He had the eyes of a tiger, and such a cruel expression as I had never observed in a dog before. As to size, he was the equal of any lion you ever saw in a menagerie.

"What breed is he?" I asked.

"A cross between the Russian and American bloodhound. He cost me $300 in gold.

"What is he good for?"

"Come out here and I'll show you."

He led the way to the smoke-house, just then empty of meat, and I saw two negroes safely locked within.

"He brought them in last night," said the Major. "He found them prowling around the plantation and walked them up here and my overseer locked them up. They had to come. If they had made a fight for it he would have killed them in no time."

"Are these his first arrests?"

"Oh, no. There is hardly a night that he doesn't bring in one, and I've known of his capturing twenty in a week. I keep 'em locked up for a day and then turn 'em loose. There he goes after another."

The dog uttered a low growl and rushed off in the direction of the bayou. Next moment a negro, who was probably spying round to see the prisoners, broke cover and started across a cotton field. He hadn't made ten jumps before the dog made a long spring, alighted on his shoulder's and had him down in two seconds. He then backed off to let the fellow get up, and fastening his teeth in the negro's coat, led him to be placed with the others. The man was in a perfect tremble, and so weak that he could hardly stand. It was an act of mercy to turn the key on him, and this had only been done when he fainted dead away.—[Detroit Free Press.

Daniel Webster.

Bill Nye says: Many lawyers of our day would do well to read and study the illustrious example of Daniel Webster. He did not sit in court all day with his feet on the table and howl, "We object," and then down his client for $50, just because he had made a noise. I employed a lawyer once to bring suit for me to recover quite a sum of money due me. After years of assessments and toilsome litigation, we got a judgment. He said to me that he was anxious to succeed with the case mainly because he knew I wanted to vindicate myself. I said yes, that was the idea exactly. I wanted to be vindicated.

KIDNEY-WORT

BILIOUSNESS.

Billous symptoms invariably arise from indigestion, such as furred tongue, vomiting of bile, giddiness, sick headache, irregular bowels. The liver secretes the bile and acts like a filter or sieve, to cleanse impurities of the blood. By irregularity in its action or suspensions of its functions, the bile is liable to overflow into the blood, causing jaundice, sallow complexion, yellow eyes, bilious diarrhœa, a languid, weary feeling and many other distressing symptoms. Biliousness may be properly termed an affection of the liver, and can be thoroughly cured by the grand regulator of the liver and biliary organs, BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS. Act upon the stomach, bowels and liver, making healthy bile and pure blood, and opens the culverts and sluiceways for the outlet of disease. Sold everywhere and guaranteed to cure.

An Absent-Minded Barber.

"Yes," said the proprietor of an uptown barber-shop, "Jim was a good workman, but I had to get rid of him."

"What was the trouble?"

"He was too absent-minded and forgetful. One old fellow, with a head like a billiard-ball, he never failed to ask if he didn't want a shampoo. Another bald-headed old chap got mad because Jim insisted upon sellin' him a bottle of 'Elixir' that was warranted to keep the hair from falling out; and a young man, who was slightly under the influence of beer, fell asleep in the chair an' Jim shaved off his moustache. I had to call in a policeman then. He cut one man's ear nearly off while watching a dog fight in the street, and sometimes he would rub hair-oil over a customer's face instead of his head, an' fill his ears full of lather an' forget to wipe it out. Jim didn't mean nothin' wrong, but, as I said, he was absent-minded. You remember when old Deacon Jones died?"

"Yes."

"Well, the family sent for a barber to shave him, an' I told Jim to go up. It was that job that lost him his situation. He did the work all right, nobody ever found fault with Jim's work; but when he had put on the finishing touches an' pulled the towel off the poor old deacon, he turned 'round and shouted, "Next!" so that people heard him a block away. So I told Jim that I guessed I'd have to let him go"—[N. Y. Sun.

In many localities Hood's Sarsaprilla is in such general demand that it is the recognized family medicine. People write that "the whole neighborhood is taking it," etc. Particularly is this true of Lowell, Mass., where it is made, and where more of Hood's Sarsaparilla is sold than of any other sarsaparilla or blood purifier. It is the great remedy for debility, scrofula, dyspepsia, biliousness, or any disease caused by impure state or low condition of the blood. Give it a trial.

A Phenominal Brother.

I suppose it is something of a phenomenon, but I know a man who takes his sister to all the first nights at the theater, and who actually gave her a monopoly of the opera season. I was praising him and saying all sorts of things complimentary over his dutiful conduct. "He said:

"No. There's nothing wonderful or extraordinary about it. She is the only woman in whom I have the most thorough confidence. She is always the same, always pleasant and affectionate, and to tell the candid truth, I am afraid that she will go away and marry some of those imitation men around here and be unhappy all her life. She has nobody else to look to, and I'll take care she does not have to look to anybody else. I suppose some day a genuine man will come along. If he's a genuine man I wont object. Until he does come old boy, she's good enough for me, and if I ever find as good a girl I'll marry her."

WELLS, RICHARDSON & CO'S IMPROVED BUTTER COLOR

A NEW DISCOVERY.

☞For several years we have furnished the Dairymen of America with an excellent artificial color for butter; so meritorious that it met with great success everywhere receiving the highest and only prizes at both International Dairy Fairs.

☞But by patient and scientific chemical research we have improved in several points, and now offer this new color as the best in the world.

It Will Not Color the Buttermilk. It Will Not Turn Rancid. It is the Strongest, Brightest and Cheapest Color Made,

☞And, while prepared in oil, is so compounded that it is impossible for it to become rancid.

☞BEWARE of all imitations, and of all other oil colors, for they are liable to become rancid and spoil the butter.

☞If you cannot get the "improved" write us to know where and how to get it without extra expense. (16)

[illegible] Words.

Ah, me! these terrible tongues of ours.
Are we half aware of their mighty powers?
[illegible]
[illegible] the hint may fall?
[illegible]
[illegible] "You must have heard"—
[illegible]
And somebody's gleam of sunshine goes smash.
What things have been blasted and broken,
What pleasures sadly have been stirred,
By a word in lightness spoken,
By only an idle word.

A sneer—a shrug—a whisper low—
They are poisoned shafts from an ambushed bow,
Shot by the coward, the fool, the knave.
They pierce the mail of the great and brave;
[illegible] the buckler of wisdom or pride
To turn the pitiless point aside;
The lip may curl with a careless smile,
But the heart dips blood—dips blood the while.
Ah, me! what hearts have been broken,
What rivers of blood have been stirred,
By a word in malice spoken,
By only a bitter word.

A kindly word and a tender tone—
To only God is our virtue known!
They can lift from the dust the abject head,
They can turn a foe to a friend instead;
The heart close-barred with passion and pride
Will fling at their knock its portal wide,
And the hate that blights and the scorn that sears
Will melt in the fountain of childlike tears.
What ice-bound griefs have been broken,
What rivers of love have been stirred,
By a word in kindness spoken,
By only a gentle word.

THE YOUNG TEACHER.

It was the evening of the commencement exercises at Mrs. Weston's large boarding-school.

All was noise and excitement. The pupils were flying about in a flutter of anxiety, and in various stages of incomplete toilet.

"What have you done with my flowers, Nell? There, how provoking! You have tipped over my powder. Your elbows are always in the wrong place," quoth Miss Lydia Holcamp, one of the older girls, her temper getting the better of her. "Dear me! There, I'm ready at last. I wonder where that Miss Barker is. I want her to give me another drilling in that recitation. I dressed early on purpose, and now I suppose she will be away prinking her dolified self!"

"Dear me, Lydia, you have had more instructions on your recitation than any of the rest have had on theirs. I should think it would be better to study by yourself and let Miss Barker have a little rest. The poor thing is overworked!"

"Oh, pshaw!" exclaimed Miss Holcamp with a sneer; "she likes to show off, that is all. If she didn't like it she wouldn't be a teacher of elocution."

Thus speaking, Lydia Holcamp departed to seek instructions in elocution—an art upon which the young lady prided herself.

Lydia was especially anxious to distinguish herself to-night, for the reason that among those present she expected there would be a certain Mr. Harry Quintard, a member of a wealthy family whom she had visited during her vacation.

Her own father was a rich man, and the families had always been on terms of friendship.

Harry and his sister she knew would come, and failure was not to be thought of.

But Miss Barker's services were not to be secured; she was engaged with some of the younger pupils.

"You cannot see Miss Barker," remarked the preceptress. "You will have no difficulty with your piece, Miss Holcamp, unless you fail to remember certain passages. If I recollect correctly Miss Barker advised you to make sure of those points. Have you done so?"

"Oh, I remember it perfectly!" answered Miss Holcamp with confidence. "But I wished Miss Barker to show me how to fall into that dramatic attitude which I like so much."

"Think of what you are saying, Miss Holcamp, and that will aid you to the expression. Miss Barker cannot give all her time to one."

Lydia went pouting away.

The evening advanced, the guests assembled, and at last Lydia's turn to recite arrived.

She was a girl of most remarkable assurance, and she went fearlessly on until suddenly her memory failed her.

It was what the teacher had feared.

Miss Holcamp had some ability, they said, but no application. She was no student.

She glanced helplessly toward Miss Barker, who prompted her. Again she went on. Again she stopped for want of words.

At last, after several promptings, she came to the end of her selection.

Miss Barker had retreated behind the draperies, sore and disappointed that one of her most promising pupils had thus failed.

"It was all your fault," burst forth [illegible], "you hateful, disagreeable thing! I believe you were jealous and meant I should fail when you went and hid yourself away with those children to-night. You knew I needed another lesson."

The fair little teacher turned pale and [illegible]. She was not accustomed to such language. Most of her pupils were kind and obedient.

[illegible] slim, and young, and pretty, [illegible] teacher, and a great student and [illegible]. All the teachers respected and [illegible] her.

"You have made me fail, and I hope I [illegible] see your face again!" concluded Lydia as she flounced away.

Outside of the draperies stood a [illegible] young man. He heard the [illegible] the young teacher [illegible].

"[illegible] tall fair girl in gray?" he [illegible] during the evening.

"[illegible] teacher of elocution," [illegible]

"[illegible]," said he. "She ap[illegible] [illegible] Miss Barker's [illegible] who had overheard Miss Holcamp) made his way to the preceptress when the exercises were over, and asked her for an introduction to Miss Barker.

"Ah, you mustn't be making love to my pet teacher, Mr. Quintard," said the lady, with an arch glance and an admonitory tap of her fan.

Nevertheless, Mr. Harry Quintard was presently seated by the side of "pretty Miss Barker," as nearly all called her in the school.

She looked a little pale and wearied, and Harry noticed that her hand trembled.

"No wonder," he thought.

"It must be very exhausting work, teaching all these great girls," he said. "I should dearly like to hear you recite something yourself."

The eyes which looked into "pretty Miss Barker's" were frank and admiring.

At this moment his sister came up to them. She looked cold, and drew her brother aside. She had left Lydia, who had recently joined her, and wanted her brother to come to them.

"Lydia," said she, "is only a teacher in the school, Hal. Come with us."

"You will have to excuse me for the present," said Hal, who saw that others were making their way to Miss Barker's seat, "unless you and Lydia will join us, for I like Miss Barker very much. She is a perfect lady."

And Hal kept his word. He kept by the little teacher's side for the rest of the evening, much to Lydia's chagrin.

"Tell me, where will you spend your vacation?" he had asked at parting.

She colored as she replied:

"I am going to a very lonely place in the country, and shall spend the time in working very hard."

"But why not rest?" he asked; "you need rest, surely. Tell me, then," he added, "where you will go, that I may hope to see you again?"

She shook her head.

"It is not best," she said.

"What!" he exclaimed; "have I then treated you so badly that you will never see me again?"

Miss Barker's eyes fell, and again the warm color came over cheek and forehead. "There is a lady who was once very kind to me," she said, "who lives very humbly among the mountains of Cumberland, and I am going to spend my summer with her. In the autumn I hope to begin a new phase of my art. You see I am poor, Mr. Quintard, and depend upon my exertions for a living."

She looked straight into her companions' eyes as she spoke, and Harry Quintard read there both determination and pride. The expression included something else, too. It said: "You know now my circumstances, and also that I wish you to know them."

Harry's eyes, however, never faltered beneath hers. They grew earnest and ardent.

"Will you give me the name of the place?" he asked, gravely, and yet in a pleading voice.

She wrote the address upon a small card and gave it to him.

* * * * * * * *

It was a month later that Harry Quintard entered the parlor of one of the most fashionable hotels in Keswick.

It was a popular resort among the lake tourists, and to-night there was a grand reception going on.

Music and recitations were to be followed by dancing in the ball-room.

Some one was singing as he went in, and presently a murmur ran through the throng as a lady, young, fair as the morn and graceful as a willow, was led forward and received a greeting of warm applause.

What was there about this charming vision that sent Harry's blood tingling through his veins with a wild pleasurable thrill?

Sleeping or walking, he had scarcely once lost this fair face from his mental sight since last they had met.

Yet—what could this mean? This brilliant entree among people of wealth and position? He had thought again of their meeting. He had fancied all kinds of rural scenes—places isolated beautiful, yet wild withal, with none but himself to admire the charming face and form that had so bewitched him; but to meet her thus, surrounded by an eulogic crowd—this indeed he had never thought of.

Later he made his way to her side. She had not forgotten him, that was plain. Nay, more, Harry saw that the surprise was also a pleasure.

The rosebud face with its spirituelle light, was lifted to his, above her raiment of pale blue, and Harry knew that the excitement of her success made her radiant, yet under all that the young man felt there lurked a deeper pleasure at their meeting.

"I gave some recitations in the town near where I was stopping," said Linda Barker, in explanation: "I saw the minister there, and he arranged to give me the church." The form of the young artist grew dignified and grave as she thus recorded her business proceedings. "The people who heard me were so kind as to invite me to recite for them, and so it happens I am here. I shall be kept very busy, I trust, this summer."

Mr. Quintard looked down in open admiration of this daring girl, with her baby face.

"Then I'm to be cheated out of those coveted woodland rambles. I have been counting upon them ever since we parted."

Linda smiled.

"If you knew my history, Mr. Quintard, you would say that I was not, indeed, born for my present surroundings."

"They become you so well that I should never think that," he replied.

They are now away from the crowd.

"Linda," he said, "before I leave you [illegible] I want you to promise me something. I want you to promise you will [illegible]"

"Affianced to another!" Harry was so bewildered that he could only repeat her words. "What do you mean?"

Before she could reply a voice sounded at their side. They had thought themselves alone.

"Yes, Harry Quintard—dare you deny it?"

It was Lydia Holcamp who stood there before them and thus accused him.

Had Harry Quintard not once heard Lydia's abuse of her teacher he would indeed have been dumfounded. As it was, he read the game in a trice.

"Yes, madam, I do deny it," he ejaculated, looking Lydia straight in the face.

He had heard his sister say that Miss Holcamp was sojourning in the mountains, but he had not troubled himself to inquire where.

Lydia, however, was not to be thwarted in her purpose.

"Do you deny this, too," and she coolly read a portion of a letter containing vows of affection, and having for signature his own name.

"It is a base forgery, and you know it, woman!" cried Harry, almost beside himself at her persistency. "And let me tell you at once, before you go any further, that I can very easily prove it to Miss Barker, if in no other way, through my own writing."

He had taken the letter from her hand.

"There is a very palpable difference between this writing and my own—see!"

He showed Linda one that he took from his pocket as he spoke.

Linda turned toward him a pale but trusting face.

He was trembling from head to feet with indignation. She laid her hand on his arm and whispered:

"Come, I believe you," and while the girl's mocking laugh followed them they left the room.

Once away from her, Harry clasped Linda to his breast.

"Tell me," he cried, "do you really trust me? Do you know that girl fabricated that story because she hates you?"

"And loves you," murmured Linda with downcast lids.

"And in your eyes does that excuse her? Tell me, do you love me, Linda—darling, answer me?"

"I cannot answer you until you hear my story," faltered Linda drawing away from him and sinking into a seat.

She had grown pale, and her eyes were suffused with tears.

"Hear the blunt truth. I am the daughter of a coal miner."

Harry heard with profound astonishment, it is true, but he did not start from her—a smile, indeed, dawned upon his face.

"You remind me of something which perhaps I ought to have told you," he said. "My grandfather was a poor carpenter, my father began his career in my grandfather's shop. From that he became a builder, and is now, to be sure, a rich contractor. So you see that I am not much in advance of you in that respect."

Both laughed, but Linda said:

"Ah, but with you all has been different. You have been well educated, and your wealth would enable you to make a rich match. I have to earn money while striving to educate myself. I worked in a factory for two years, when father died. He was killed in a mine, and as my mother was also dead, I was left alone. I had attended the common school and was there encouraged to recite. I saved my money and went to Manchester, and worked for one year there. While in that city I attended every free entertainment, and studied much at night. At last I applied for a position to teach, and secured it. Then you met me."

"My noble girl," cried Harry, "I would rather have you for my wife to-day than any petted idle darling of luxury that I ever heard of."

Harry Quintard meant what he said, and Linda Barker knew it.

He stooped his face till his lips met hers in a long kiss.

Thus the daughter of a miner and the grandson of a carpenter betrothed themselves in true modern fashion.

And among the circles of fashion and art to-day there walks no more perfect lady than Mrs. Harry Quintard.

A Suggested Seashore Bustle.

I have made an invention that is just going to be a boon to my sex at the sea shore. I call my device the camp chair bustle. It consists of the ordinary bustle of wires and tapes, to be worn in the usual manner under the rear draperies of a woman's skirt. It will serve all the purposes of distension and shapeliness requisite to the fashionable bustle. Within this structure I place a specially contrived camp chair, light, but sufficiently strong, and so arranged that it will automatically shut up flat when the wearer stands, open to receive her when she sits. I have experimented with a model and suffered some hard kerchugs before the apparatus was perfect, but the thing is now worthy the confidence of the most sensitive girl, for it will positively not betray her confidence. When she lounges on the sand of the beach and desires to be seated for a while, all she has to do is to gracefully drop in the invisible chair. The astonished observer may conclude that she has four legs of her own, but it isn't any of his business anyhow.—[Cincinnati Enquirer.

HIS LOSS WAS HER GAIN.

"Well, madam," said a fashionable physian to a wealthy lady patient, "if you don't like my prescriptions, perhaps you had better try Parker's Tonic, or some other quack stuff." "You don't mean it, Doctor," she answered, "but your advice may be good for all that. Sometimes what you call [illegible] is the best and most scientific medicine after all." She got a bottle of Parker's Tonic and it cured her of [illegible] arising from disordered stomach and nerves. She told her friends, and [illegible]

Mad Dogs and Mad Stones.

"I have handled thousands of dogs and been bitten hundreds of times," said William H. Bowers, assistant superintendent of the city pound and shelter, yesterday, "and I have never seen but two animals that were afflicted with genuine hydrophobia. Dogs are subject to fits, and these are mistaken by the ignorant for rabies."

So far this season, despite the excessive heat, no mad-dog cases have been reported by the police. Several dogs that had fits have been killed, but none of the slaughtered brutes had rabies.

"There is no cure for hydrophobia, either in dog or man," a leading physician, who has made hydrophobia an especial study, said yesterday. "The phenomena of rabies are peculiar and directly the opposite of the popular idea. A hydrophobic dog froths at the mouth. The disease is a species of pneumonic insanity and is caused by heat and too violent exercise. The dog loses his mind and has an uncontrollable desire to run in full speed in circles. The glands of the throat become inflamed and swollen so that deglutition is impossible. That animal is consumed with thirst, but his swollen throat makes it impossible for him to satisfy his craving. As the disease progresses his eyes become glassy, his tongue distends and turns dark blue in color, his lips crack, and he finally dies in violent convulsions. The so-called mad-stone cures that are so often reported are fallacious. There is no efficacy in stones of any sort when applied to the bite of a rabid dog."

Although 50,000 houseless and starving dogs are annually taken to the London house for lost dogs there has never been a genuine case of rabies there since its foundation, twelve years ago. In a pamphlet published by the managers of the home occurs the following paragraph:

"No one need fear a dog that barks savagely, bites at everything within his reach, and froths at the mouth. He is not mad."

"There is a foolish superstition about the bite of a mad dog," said Mr. Bowers. "Persons who have been bitten by dogs that afterward take fits or 'go mad' believe that the appearance of the disease in the animal means danger to them. We have dogs brought here every day to be killed that have bitten people, and the invariable reason for wanting them put out of the way is that the person bitten may be rendered secure from hydrophobia. I have been bitten often by so-called mad dogs. If the wound is a slight one I let nature take its course. If the bite is serious I cauterize the edges of the wound with caustic and forget all about the matter as the wound begins to heal."—[Philadelphia Times.

THE PROPER THING.

Present fashion dictates wool for street suits.

A puff at the top of the sleeve is again seen upon stylish dresses.

Plastron waistcoats of beads are shown among fancy fall novelties.

Pepper pod red is the latest shade of that extremely popular color.

For very dressy costumes repped silk is combined with velvet or plush.

Black and white toilets were never more fashionable than at present.

Drapery is made very long in the front and back, and short on the sides.

Plain velvet or plush skirts are revived to be worn with cloth over-dresses.

The newest gowns are without flounces and have very few pleats in the lower skirt.

The pleated Norfolk jacket with belt and hood is worn with tailor gowns as an outside wrap.

The basques of cloth or other wool dresses are made very short, and may be single or double breasted.

Striped skirts are much used with cloth over-dresses, and these may be across or lengthwise, in pleats or plain.

Woolen stuffs are more in favor than silk or velvet ones for bonnets and hats, as well as for the frocks with which they are worn.

New Tam-O'-Shanter hats are brought out for lawn tennis, made of dark velvet, embroidered with a wreath of tiny autumn leaves.

Some of the new autumn costumes are trimmed with bands of Astrakhan, others with borderings of quilted satin or surah, in rich shades.

The fashion of open or half-open bodices has created a demand for chemisettes, guimpes, and old-fashioned stomachers of every sort and made of every kind of fabric.

Put Up Your Horses.

How often can one see in any town, on Saturday especially, teams standing from early in the day until nearly night, in the burning sun, without food or water, the entire day. This is simply cruelty to animals, and there is no good excuse for it. Teams can be put up a in livery stable for a small sum where they can stand out of sun and storm, be watered and fed, if nothing more than hay. If a man puts his team in stable he gets repaid in ease of mind during the day, for he knows that his horses are safe and comfortable; that there is no danger of their becoming frightened and breaking their bridles and running away; that whips, blankets, etc., will not be stolen. What is true in summer is true in winter, and perhaps more so, for then their work is not so driving on the farm and the class of farmers that are guilty of such treatment of their teams will oftener be found loafing on the streets, patronizing saloons and cigar stands.—[Rural World.

Fir Pillows.

The new craze is the fir pillow, consisting of an unbleached cotton case filled with the twigs of the fir tree dried in the sunlight. The pillow case is of linen, canvass, satin or plush, according to the taste and pocket of the maker, and upon the surface is embroidered a likeness of the fir itself, or some emblematic motto, such as "Give me thy balm, O fir tree!" The pillows are said to have a soothing effect on the nervous sleeper, giving sweet and dreamless slumbers as if by magic.

A BABY SAVED!

Since birth my baby had running sores all over his head, and the doctors said that he must die, for they could not heal them. I used everything I ever heard of, but it was no good. He got so bad that he would not nurse. My husband's sister told me to try Sulphur Bitters as she had great faith in them. I used a bottle and the sores commenced to heal. After using two bottles more, the sores all healed and I considered my baby saved.—Mother, Concord, N. H.

I have been deaf in one ear ten years and partially deaf in the other for two months; have been treated by ear specialty doctors and received no benefit. Having used Ely's Cream Balm for about a month I find myself greatly improved, and can hear well and consider it a most valuable remedy. I had also nasal catarrh, with dropping of mucous into my throat and pain over my eyes, which troubles also have entirely disappeared. D. B. Yates, Upper Lisle, Broome Co., N. Y.

The village of Belton, Ga., claims there is not a man in the whole place who uses profane language.

THE VOICE OF THE PEOPLE.

The people, at a whole, seldom make mistakes, and the unanimous voice of praise which comes from those who have used Hood's Sarsaparilla, fully justifies the claims of proprietors of this great medicine. Indeed, these very claims are based entirely on what the people say Hood's Sarsaparilla has done for them. Read the abundant evidence of its curative powers, and give it a fair honest trial.

Snow banks fully 100 feet high, that have lain there for many years, are to be found in the Upper Sierrans.

"I was all run down, and Hood's Sarsaparilla proved just the medicine I needed," write hundreds of people. Take it now.

ROYAL

Rheumatism

It is an established fact that Hood's Sarsaparilla has proven an invaluable remedy in many severe cases of rheumatism, effecting remarkable cures by its powerful action in correcting the acidity of the blood, which is the cause of the disease, and purifying and enriching the vital fluid.

It is certainly fair to assume that what Hood's Sarsaparilla has done for others it will do for you. Therefore, if you suffer the pains and aches of rheumatism, give this potent remedy a fair trial.

A Positive Cure.

"I was troubled very much with rheumatism in my hips, ankles, and wrists. I could hardly walk, and was confined to my bed a good deal of the time. Being recommended to try Hood's Sarsaparilla, I took four bottles and am perfectly well. I cheerfully recommend Hood's Sarsaparilla as one of the best blood purifiers in the world." W. F. Wood, Bloomington, Ill.

For Twenty Years

I have been afflicted with rheumatism. Before 1883 I found no relief, but grew worse. I then began taking Hood's Sarsaparilla, and it did me more good than all the other medicine I ever had." H. T. Balcom, Shirley, Mass.

"I suffered from what the doctors called muscular rheumatism. I took Hood's Sarsaparilla and am entirely cured." J. V. A. Proudfoot, letter carrier, Chicago, Ill.

SENATOR COGGESHALL.

Hon. Henry J. Coggeshall has been renominated for State Senator by the Republicans in the Oneida district. Mr. Coggeshall is an eloquent and enthusiastic political speaker and we believe a very clever man generally. But there is just one thing about Mr. Coggeshall which we are disposed to question and that is the truthfulness of the charge which was preferred against him by Dr. Dunn. It will be remembered that Dr. Dunn published a statement in which he says that when he had a bill before the Legislature, Senator Coggeshall demanded a thousand dollars for a report in favor of it, and that he refused to pay it.

On the other hand Senator Coggeshall blankly denies the story, and there both let the matter drop. The press of both parties at the time seriously urged the necessity of a sworn denial of the charge by Mr. Coggeshall and of proper dealings with the accuser. But the Senator it seems, did not deem Dr. Dunn worthy of further notice and satisfied himself with a verbal denial. The accusation has never been subject to an investigation. If the charges are true, Mr. Coggeshall is not a fit man to act as a Legislator. How much better it would have been for him had he went to work and proved himself innocent and left no cause for suspicion among his constituency. We are not disposed to believe Senator Coggeshall guilty of the charge but we do think that has treated the matter in a very unwise way.

HILL AND TWEED.

Republican newspapers are making all they can out of the fact that David B. Hill was once a partner in an Elmira newspaper enterprise in 1870-71, with the late William M. Tweed, familiarly known as "Boss" Tweed. As is shown by the sworn statement of Horton Tidd of Elmira, who at that time was secretary and treasurer of the company, and which was published last Friday, the connection of Mr. Tweed with the paper was a purely business transaction. He was merely a stockholder to the amount of $10,000; the capital stock being $40-000. He had not even a controlling interest in the enterprise. This transaction, too, was before Mr. Tweed's corruption in New York politics was exposed. It is as absurd to accuse Governor Hill of any dishonest motives in his dealings with Tweed as it would be to condemn any man who at any time previous to this might have happened to transact any legitimate business with this same Tweed. It looks very much as though campaign material was scarce.

THE mugwumps will not all vote the Republican ticket this fall.

WILLIAM HEATH & Co. Wall street, New York, brokers, have failed for a heavy sum.

HENRY WARD BEECHER will support the Republican State ticket this fall. The reverend gentleman makes some dangerous jumps in his old age.

THE postmaster general has decided that special deliveries of letters shall not be delivered on Sunday. This is good news to telegraph and telephone companies.

THE Governor of Georgia has signed the State local option bill, thus securing practical prohibition to many of the cities and towns of that State.

THE Democrats of the second district have endorsed A. N. Ludington, the prohibition candidate, for member of assembly. Mr. Ainsworth, the Republican candidate, has no reason to feel uneasy over his chances for going to the assembly.

THERE will be a special examination at the civil service commission rooms in Washington, Thursday next, for the agricultural department of persons acquainted with silk culture. This will be the first examination of the kind ever held.

A LAW has just gone into effect in New Hampshire which imposes fine of $20 upon the dealer who sells cigarettes to boys under sixteen years of age. It is a good law, but a difficult one to enforce.

IN the first of the final four games of ball on the Chicago grounds between the Chicago and New Yorks, Tuesday, to decide which club shall carry off the National League prize pennant, the Chicagos were victorious, the score standing 7 and 4. The Chicagos were again victorious on Wednesday the score standing 1 and 2. On Thursday the score was again in favor of the Chicagos being 8 and 8.

WITH but one exception—that of Mr. Kernan—the Democrats of New York State have not sent a senator to Washington since 1845, some forty years since. And it looks, too, as though President Cleveland would not have a Democratic representative from his own state during his term. Warner Miller's term expires in March 1887. The present State senate consists of 19 Republicans and 13 Democrats.

THE New York Sun publishes a long interview with Congressman Spriggs of Oneida and among other things, Mr. Spriggs said that he believed that many Independents, formerly Republicans, whose party allegiance is loose, will [illegible]

[illegible] of [illegible] Wood will begin on October 19.

SEVERAL cases of small-pox are reported in New York.

THE Democratic managers might hire Dr. Burchard to take the stump for Davenport. We believe he is out of a job at present.

THE New York Times stated the other day that the Democratic State Convention took down a portrait of Gen. Grant that was in the hall when it convened and put it out of sight. William Purcell, editor of the Rochester Union-Advertiser, says the Times is mistaken, as the portrait was stolen by a Republican, who is as rotten morally as the Times is politically.

THE New York Evening Post offers it semi-weekly edition to new readers for the last three months of this year for 25 cents. Its make up includes, besides the news of the half week, the leading editorials of the daily edition, foreign and domestic correspondence, personal, political and religious notes, book reviews, musical and dramatic criticism; farm household, and fashion hints, selections from the best current foreign literature, etc. Owing to its thoroughly independent attitude upon all political questions, the views of The Evening Post are more widely copied than those of almost any other newspaper in the country. This was the case in the last presidential campaign, when, for reasons which it gave in advance of the nomination, it found itself unable to support the Republican candidate. This has been the case also since the election, for the paper has again demonstrated its independence by promptly denouncing all departures of the new administration from the reform pledges upon which it was intrusted with power.

Canadian government engineers have completed plans for the enlargement of the Welland canal to a 14-feet draft, to enable a large class of vessels to pass through. The work will cost over $1,000,000.

A young man in Binghamton sued his father for loaned money, which the father claims was his own property. The latter's counsel, in summing up the the case of his client, remarked: "That twice has the prodigal returned to his father's house; twice has he been received with open arms; twice for him has the fatted calf been killed, and now he comes back and wants the old cow."

The whole number of patients treated at the homeopathic asylum for the insane at Middletown during the year which has just closed was 486, of whom 204 were admitted during the year. Of the 131 discharged 66 were discharged recovered. Eight of the 27 deaths occurred within three weeks after admission. The institution begins the year with 355 persons under treatment.

Will the President Wed?

"On his recent trip to the North Woods," slyly remarked a well-known New Yorker to-day, "the President met an acquaintance, a young widow, whom the gossips have not yet named, but who is undoubtedly nearer his heart than any of the young misses who have been mentioned as his fiancees." The meeting was arranged by Dr. Ward, who holds himself responsible for the whole business. This widow is about thirty, is given to embonpoint and will tip the scales at about 165 pounds. She has no children, and enjoys a comfortable income from a snug little property inherited from her mother. She was in Washington last May, and saw the President twice without attracting any attention. There is no doubt that the President and the widow are much interested in each other, but the President is a little shy about telling sister Rose, don't you see! The widow belongs to an excellent New York family, but Miss Rose may or may not approve of having the acquaintance continue. The President told an intimate friend, confidentially, the other evening, that he never felt the need of a wife so much as since coming to Washington. The President and Miss Rose are totally unlike in their thoughts and actions, and the latter is wholly absorbed in her literary labor.

The ladies of Washington would rejoice to see the President wedded to a good wife, but perhaps two or three belles, who have set their cap for the President, would be sorely disappointed. "What a grand wedding we will have," exclaimed one of the attaches of the White House, "if this rumor proves true."—[Washington Letter to The San Francisco Post.

Nearly all the street car employes in St. Louis have joined the Knights of labor and a strike will be inaugurated unless certain demands are granted.

Gen. Benjamin F. Butler has a presentiment that he will die in four years. He says that none of his family were ever known to live beyond the age of sixty-eight years. The General is sixty-four years old now, and he is in excellent health.

Of seven young men who graduated from an Eastern college a few years ago, four are teaching school, one is editing a newspaper, one has been elected to Congress, and one is a curve pitcher for a professional base ball club.

The Elmira Advertiser wants Ira Davenport as the Republican candidate for Governor. Good. We hope he will get it. He isn't so hard to beat as some others, perhaps.—[New York Sun, July 4.

It makes the New York Democrats shiver to have the New York Sun say that it thinks the Democratic ticket in that State will be elected. It "thought" Mr. Blaine would be elected up to the very last week before election. The Sun has no sympthies with the Democratic party. It merely masquerades and sneers at it and its candidates.—[Detroit Free Press.

GUILTY.

The Jury in the Druse Case Brings in a Verdict of Murder in the First Degree.

HERKIMER, Oct. 1. — There was a large audience in the court room at 10 yesterday, when H. D. Luce began his final argument for the defense. He gave a full and eloquent statement of the case, which lasted till noon, when court adjourned to 1:30. In the afternoon Judge Prescott continued the summing up for the defense, who detailed the testimony at length, in the course of which he inquired why Gates and Elwood had not been put in the witness box. He was followed by District Attorney Steele, who, in behalf of the people, made a clear and vigorous argument. Then Judge Williams charged the jury in an able and impartial manner, and the jury went out at 7:20.

Just as the clock was striking twelve last night the court house bell rang, announcing that the jury in the Druse case had agreed. Notwithstanding the lateness of the hour the court room was speedily filled with men, women and children, and when Mrs. Druse and Mary took their seats, 400 pairs of eyes were gazing intently upon them. Mrs. Druse looked pale and haggard. But aside from this she showed no emotion when the verdict of guilty of murder in the first degree was announced. Mary wept bitterly.

The jury did not have much trouble in agreeing.

Mrs. Druse was yesterday sentenced by Judge Williams to be executed Wednesday November 25. No woman has been executed in Central New York for over 40 years.

The Great Race.

ALBANY, Oct. 2.—A meeting of the celebrated oarsmen, Hanlan, Lee, Courtney and Conley and their backers was held Tuesday afternoon and it was agreed that the much-talked-of race shall be rowed at Pleasure Island. All parties express entire satisfaction with the course and expect to make excellent time in the forthcoming battle. The race will be rowed on Tuesday, October 13, at 3:30 p. m., and the course will be identical with that over which the recent race at Pleasure Island was rowed, three miles with a turn. Hanlan and Lee have taken up their quarters at the Adams House, Lansingburgh, and are getting in training for the prospective race over the Pleasure Island course with Courtney and his game partner, Conley. The race is to be for $1,000 a side, stake money, the winners to take in addition, two-thirds of the gate receipts, the losers one-third. The articles of agreement call for smooth water, or else the race is not to be rowed. The reason of this demand on the part of Courtney is said to be his inability to row except in smooth water. Hanlan and Lee have their shell housed at the quarters of a private boat club, at Waterford, and will train on the upper Cohoes course, which extends above the Laureate course.

GENERAL NEWS.

It is estimated that the corn crop of the United States this year will reach 1,979,636,000 bushels.

Returns of emigration from Germany for eight months show a decrease of 30,-000 as compared with 1884.

Germany has acknowledged Spain's claim to the occupation of Yap. In return, Spain has granted Germany free navigation of the waters in and around the Caroline Islands, with free commerce with the inhabitants and the right of having a coaling station on one of the islands. The mediation of the pope is now unnecessary, as the affair has been settled to the satisfaction of both powers.

Several of the most distinguished members of the Canadian bar will leave for England this week to lay before the privy council some of the most important law cases ever submitted for the decision of that tribunal. Among the cases are those of the federal and provisional governments against the Exchange bank, in which $360,000 is involved; the question of the constitutionality of the Canadian temperance act; and the Riel appeal case.

The near approach of small-pox to the border is causing much alarm in Buffalo. Cases are reported at London, Ont. and at St. Catharines. Physicians in that city seem to think it a foregone conclusion that the disease will reach there. The United States [illegible]

PALERMO, Oct. [illegible]—Saturday night Chas. Wright of Clifford was awakened by a noise in the direction of his barn. He took a lantern and upon his arrival found that some one had taken his carriage, blankets, whip and Robes out of the barn and had the horse nearly harnessed when their plans were rudely frustrated by his appearance with the lantern. There is no clew as to the identity of the bold midnight marauders.

The premises of Mr. Owen were also visited the same night, but owing to the presence of a wide-awake dog and the highth of the roost, all the turkeys were present next morning at roll-call.

Our district school at Palermo Center commenced yesterday morning with S. L. Remington of East Palermo as teacher. He comes well spoken of and will undoubtedly give good satisfaction.

North Volney.

NORTH VOLNEY, Oct. 6.—A seven year old niece of Mr. Williams' who has been spending the summer at his house, met with a painful accident recently. The child has been in the habit of feeding the horses apples and on the occasion referred to one of them bit her on the arm, tearing off the flesh for several inches. Fears were entertained that the arm would have to be amputated, but at last reports she is gaining slowly.

Swindles.

The Norwich Union reports the following fraudulent schemes which are being worked upon unsuspecting farmers in some sections. One goes under the name of a "Loan Company." This is the way it is operated:

"Circulars are sent out, and advertisements are inserted in respectable papers, offering loans at low rates of interest and on very easy terms. Numerous farmers apply for loans. The terms are, ten dollars as an application and registration fee, which is to be deducted from the first half year's interest. If a victim sends his ten dollars be is defrauded to that extent. He never gets his loan and never gets his money back again, because he never has a chance to pay interest to deduct it from."

The latest swindling dodge is said to be worked as follows: A man claiming to represent a Chicago provision house circulates a paper among the farmers, asking their opinion as to the probable crops of this season, carefully noting down the answer. At the conclusion he asks the farmer to sign it, just to give the report the appearance of being correct, and in nine cases out of ten a good healthy note turns up in the hands of an innocent purchaser, which will have to be paid. Farmers who take newspapers and thoroughly read them seldom ever get caught by these traveling land sharks.

Cheese Market.

(FROM THE UTICA HERALD.)

AT UTICA Oct. 5.

There was no special flurry on our market to-day. Everybody was disposed to take things coolly, salesmen not anticipating any decline and buyers not looking for much of a boom. Indeed, for a long time it seemed as if the market was to be a repetition of last week, so far as prices were concerned, but toward the last it became evident that prices were to be somewhat better, and 8¾c. was established as the ruling without difficulty. To-day's sales will take stock off from the 19th to the 16th of September; probably an average would be about the 12th. Weather is cool, about 45° morning and evening, and plenty of rain has fallen of late, so that with the absence of frost the pasturage is excellent. Cheese is expected to arrive in good condition, and to command a little better price than it did last week. Transactions of the day are as follows: 11 lots, 1,000 boxes, at 8⅝c.; 43 lots, 5,428 boxes, at 8¾c; 8 lots, 848 boxes at 8⅞c.; 31 lots, 2,952 boxes, at 9c.; 5 lots, 477 boxes, at 9⅛c.; 10 lots, 861 boxes, at 9¼c.; 2 lots, 203 boxes, at 9⅜c. Sales 11,769 boxes; commissions, 1,126 boxes; total, 12,895 boxes. Ruling price 8¾c. One year ago transactions were 9,290 boxes, ruling 11¼c. Two years ago they were 8,166, and three years ago 7,010 boxes. Our market is firm and active, with a ¼c. advance in price. Advices from abroad show a very tame market, with the demand merely nominal.

LITTLE FALLS, Oct. 5.

CHEESE.—The market is decidedly firmer than it was a week ago; our ruling price is one-fourth cent better, being at 9c., but sales are quite light. Fine full cream goods were much sought for by every buyer, for which they bid as high as 9¼c., and beyond this none would go. Holders of such stock are more independant than formerly, and many of them can not see that they should sell at rates current to-day. In fact a more confident feeling exists, which is shared to a considerable extent by both buyers and sellers. Cheese not strictly fine is somewhat neglected. To-day's sales will take cheese from the factories to the end of about the first week in September. Good judges are of the opinion that the best cheese of the season should bring better rates, and if prices do not materially improve trade will be slow. Sales to-day are:

Lots.	Boxes.	Prices
6	282	8¼cts
18	997	8¾cts
39	2,846	9 cts
3	150	9¼cts
9	537	com.
75	4,812
Farm Dairy	685
Total	5,497

FARM DAIRIES.—There was a brisk demand from the home trade for the morning's offerings and prices ranged at 8¼@10c.; only one lot brought 10c., the bulk selling at 9¼c.

BUTTER.—One hundred packages farm dairy butter sold at 15@18c., most going at 17c. Twenty-two packages of creamery sold at 18@18½c.

AT FULTON.

After all these weeks of discouraging low prices in cheese, patrons and salesmen have at last a just cause for a feeling of thankfulness over the advances of the past two weeks. The season will be of unusual duration from the fact that the abundant rains leave the pastures in excellent condition. Should the market continue to improve, this will open a chance for evening up to some extent. About 1,883 boxes were offered on the market, which was mostly disposed of at 8¾c., Utica ruling. The price one year ago was 11 cents, two years ago, 11½c., three years ago 11¾c. Let us hope for a steady advance.

Lieutenant Derby, superintending engineer of Flood Rock, stated Monday regarding that the explosion will not take place to-day, owing to inability to remove the machinery and materials to [illegible]

The potato disease is appearing in localities where the crop is extensively grown. The leaves turn yellow and perish, while the half-grown tubers are black in streaks and patches inside. This is the potato rot at times so disastrous, which first appeared in '47 in Ireland, and caused a famine by which nearly a million persons perished of starvation and disease and an equal number left the country, reducing the population about one-fourth between two censuses. It is a fungus known as peronospora infestana, which grows within the plant, filling the cells with white threads called mycellium. These threads bear small balls or capsules containing black spores exceedingly small, appearing as fine dust. It is these black spores which discolor the potatces when the capsules burst and liberate them.

These spores are the seed from which new plants spring. They remain in the soil in the diseased potatoes left in the ground, and in the diseased ground, thus infecting the land and leaving a stock to propagate a pest for the future. As the decaying matter dies, the spores (which are much like the fine dust of the ripe puff-balls, or the dry smut of corn float off into the air and are carried by the winds and spread over fresh ground, and so the infection spreads. To avoid this the diseased potatoes should be carefully gathered up and boiled (by which the fungus is killed) and fed to swine or fowls. The vines should be carefully burned and never thrown into manure or compost heaps for obvious reasons. For should the deceased potatoes be fed uncooked, as the spores would pass out in the excrement and so spread the infection

To prevent injury to sound potatoes all the damaged ones should be kept apart; the sound ones may be kept in the usual manner, but should be well dusted; (with fresh, air-slaked lime, which by its acridity will destroy any adhering spores. The drier the potatoes are kept the better, as dryness tends to keep the spores dormant. In selecting potatoes for seed only sound ones should be chosen; the cuttings should be rolled in air slaked lime, or sprinkled with the pickling solution used for seed wheat to prevent smut (a similar fungus). This solution is made of four ounces sulphate of copper in one gallon of water, and the dusting with lime may be usefully given in addition. This disease is strictly contagious, and can only be avoided by destroying the spores or by leaving a potato stubble in other crops for two or three years.

Deceptive Frauds.

As soon as it became apparent that Moses King, the young publisher, of Harvard square, at Cambridge, Mass., had met an unprecedented success with his book called "Students' Songs"—the sale already reaching nearly fifty thousand and copies—several publishers brought out collections of so called student or college songs. Some of them are legitimate competitors: but some appear so similar in shape, in title, in design or general make up, as to mislead a casual buyer who may be intending to get a copy of the original "Students' Songs," which was edited by Wm. H. Hills, of the Harvard class of 1880, and published by Moses King of the Harvard class of 1881, the names of both appearing on the title page of the genuine collection only. The success of this collection is due chiefly to the freshness of its sixty copyrighted songs: comprising those jolly and melodious tunes and peculiar phrases which, within the past ten years, have arisen and become generally popular among the students of all American colleges. The low price, too, —fifty cents—and the attractive appearance, also, have had their influence in making "Students' Songs" the most successful book of its class ever published in this country.

The Syracuse Standard has the following [illegible] of Mrs. Sheridan's paintings which The Times referred to while on exhibition at Mr. Styles' studio some weeks since. "Hendricks has on exhibition, at his art rooms in East Fayette street, two pieces of painted plush, which were executed by order, showing in that branch of art the finest effects and the daintest touch. On the larger of the folds, intended for a mantel lambrequin, the artist has produced a marvelously perfect picture of a heavily laden grape vine. The fruit looks as luscious and tempting, as it seems to hang on its stems, as the choicest bunches of a vineyard, the substance, color and bloom being brought out by exquisite tracery and delicate finish. The foliage of the vine, too, is so faithful in delineation that it would be wonderful on canvas. The paste-pot painting, which is the common fault of the best work on fabrics with a heavy nap, has been entirely overcome by this artist, who has succeeded in making the desired use of the rich surface without in the least marring her art for its sake. A string of clematis is also a beautiful suggestion of nature on another piece of plush. The artist, who in this work has given evidence of such genuine originality and skill, is Mrs. Kittie Lee Sheridan of Fulton, a pupil of Mr. Styles. Mrs. Sheridan has certainly done what few of her cotemporaries have been able to do in these specimens. They were a commission from a lady in New York."

There rests on an easel in Mr. D. Styles' studio, another of those interesting little marines. It represents a wrecked vessel with broken masts drifted upon a rocky shore. Away in the distance can be seen several other vessels with full sail. Overshadowing the sea are masses of dark rolling clouds through which can be seen an occassional glimpse of clear sky. The artistic expression of the painting is grand.

The painting representing a marsh in the twilight which has just been completed, is a beautiful piece of work and fully sustains the high reputation Mr. Styles enjoys as an artist.

The game of base ball Friday afternoon last at the Oswego Falls fair ground, between a picked nine of this village and a club from Little Utica resulted in a score of 18 to19 in favor of the latter club. Quite a number witnessed the game.

It is now thought that the water works will be completed by the first of November. The iron plates for the tank are constantly arriving and work will be rapidly pushed forward. The smoke stack was put up last week. The engine and other machinery will be put in place as soon as possible.

Daniel Dubois, one of the oldest residents of the town of Scriba died Sunday morning aged 91 years. He was a veteran of the war of 1812 and has always been a thoroughly respected citizen. His funeral was held from the residence of his son, Harvey Dubois, yesterday at 11 o'clock.

John Barker, proprietor of the Vienna bakery on First Street, has just put in a new improved cracker machine of the latest design and hereafter will be prepared to furnish crackers of all descriptions at short notice. Mr. Barker also manufactures all kinds of bread, cake and other bakestuffs. A fine line of choice, fresh confectionery is always kept on hand. Call on him when wanting anything in his line, and you will be well pleased.

A Phœnix correspondent writes: The fair which closed Thursday night was the most successful of the thirteen which have been held. The entries were nearly 100 per cent. more than in any other year, and the receipts are estimated to be about $3,000. From the number of tickets sold and from the estimate of good judges, it is thought there were 6,000 people on the ground on Wednesday. The society prohibited the sale of intoxicating drinks on the ground, and thereby insured the good order which prevailed. Some needed improvements are projected, among them building stalls for cattle, providing more hitching room for horses, and enlarging the ground by fencing in Pendergast's grove.

Howorth's Double Show.

On Wednesday and Thursday evenings of next week Howorth's Hibernica comedy and speciality company will appear at Stephen's Opera House. The play is very funny. The prices of admission are 35 and 50 cts. Read what the press says about them: "Every seat and every availiable inch of standing room in the Casino theatre was occupied last night, and fully 100 people were turned away. Howorth's Hibernica comedy and speciality company was the attraction, and the combination was received with a great favor. The farce "The Two Dans; or The Comedy of Blunders," was cleverly presented and provoked much laughter. The various specialities were gracefully introduced; the songs and dances were noticeably excellent. "The Two Dans" will continue to be the attraction to-day and to-morrow afternoon and evening.—[Herald, Rochester, (N. Y.) Jan. 13, 1885.

Howorth's six comedians are immense. every one is a show in himself and the comedy, "The 2 Dans" is two funny for anything.—[Troy, (N. Y.) Press, Jan. 2, 1885.

The Trials and Tribulations of the Head of the House as He Opens the Fall Campaign.

Last Monday evening as Mr. Ferguson finished his supper and pushed his chair back preparatory to looking over the evening paper, his wife turned to him and remarked:

"Come, John, let's put up the stove to-night. I've got it all blacked; it won't take but a short time and its so much pleasanter to have a fire in the sitting room these cool evenings than it is to hover over the kitchen stove."

John heaved a large, nickle-plated sigh, for he had been there before, but dutifully arose and divesting himself of his coat, took the old frock his wife handed him, and repaired to the wood shed, where the stove had reposed since last spring. The stove was a comparatively small one, and after knocking the paint off the door casings and skinning several of his knuckles, he at last got the refractory article in place in their cosy sitting room. His wife had already obtained the oil-cloth, zinc, hammer and a coil of wire, and in a few moments returned with the step-ladder. Placing the ladder near the wall he mounted it and carefully put a length of pipe in the chimney. This length retained its place just long enough for him to get to the floor when it fell, bringing with it a picture, and several articles of bric-a-brac off the shelf. It also brought a large amount of soot and ashes which descended over Mr. Ferguson in a cloud, filling his eyes, ears and back of his neck. Muttering something about the "dod-gasted pipe," he remounted the step-ladder, replaced the length and holding it with one hand, he wound it in a bewildering maze of wire, until it looked more like a rat-trap than an innocent, guileless stove-pipe. Then placing several lengths together, he told his wife, who stood looking with regretful eyes upon the broken fragments upon the floor, to hold the lower end, he endeavored to join the upright piece with the length already up. With the well-known perversity of stove pipe, these pieces firmly refused to go together. His better half stood holding her end and becoming some what tired after several ineffectual attempts to weld the upper part, her arms began to sway around a little. This exasperated the already red-faced, soot-begrimed and prespiring man on the ladder and he gently said:

"Can't you hold that confounded pipe still for a few minutes? How do you expect I can get this together when you're moving around like that? Have you got an idea this is a ball-room, and that you're whirling through the mazy waltz?"

This expostulation had the desired effect, and soon Mr. Ferguson had triumphed over the wicked pipe and jammed them together. He had just regained the floor, when his wife, thinking everything was secure above, dropped the end she had been patiently holding, with the intention of letting it rest on the stove. This of course separated the joint above and down came the pipe striking John upon the head and bounded from there to the floor where it fell with a crash upon the carpet. This was the last straw upon the already overloaded man, and kicking the pipe across the room, he started for the door and, after telling his spouse that if she was half as hot as he was she wouldn't want a stove all winter, and if she got too dodgasted cold to build a fire on the cellar bottom, he put on his coat and hat and went down town, where he bathed the interior of his neck and cooled his ruffled spirits with a liberal supply of beer. The stove is not up yet.

Oswego City Charter.

Several important amendments to the Oswego city charter will be proposed at the meeting of the next legislature. The city treasurer defaulted last spring and ran away, leaving a deficit of about $30,000. The charter had been doctored up to suit the growth of the city, and much dissatisfaction existed as to the mode of keeping the accounts. A meeting of citizens was called and a committee of representative business men was appointed to give the charter a thoro' overhauling. The indebtedness of the city was found to be about $1,120,000 and the total assessed valuation $8,800,000. The different departments of the city are governed by commissions. The mayor's powers will be enlarged, and he will be ex-officio a member of all the commissions. The recorder's court is to be abolished and the recorder reduced to a police justice. The offices of city collector and city treasurer are to be abolished and a city chamberlain appointed by the mayor, who shall collect and disburse all moneys. The number of aldermen is to be reduced to eight. The population of the city is only a little more than 20,000, and the excessive taxation has been the means of suppressing and driving out manufacturing and other interests. The amendments are expected to work a great reduction in the city expenses.

AGRICULTURAL DEPARTMENT.

The Poultry Yard.

When fowls are confined the vicious habit of feather plucking begins. There is a lack of occupation, and it is natural for them to be occupied and active when in health.

To make poultry-keeping a business, remember these conditions: Space for range, attention to health, proper food, and soil and market must be estimated and provided for.

Do not sell off the hens that begin to molt early, as they will finish the shedding of the feathers and begin to lay before the winter sets in. The late-molting hens, however, should always be sold.

Fowls that are made over-fat and kept stimulated are more liable to disease than when in ordinary flesh. It is better to keep them hungry during the summer than to make them slovenly with fat.

Pure water must at all times be within the reach of every fowl and chick; but such is their perversity, if possible to find something stronger than pure water, they will eagerly drink it, to the immediate danger of their lives. Shallow tin platters make good drinking cups, which may be kept from overturning by a stone in the middle.

The hen houses should be fumigated and cleaned at once if it has not already been done. The old laying and sitting nests are alive with small vermin. Clear out the filthy straw and burn it up. Wash the nests with kerosene oil in a thorough manner. Hens two or three years old will not lay so large a number of eggs as will pullets in the first twelve months after they commence to lay. In quantity, therefore, yearlings will excel, but not in quality for hatching purposes. Have plenty of fresh water at hand, which they may drink at will. Fowls as well as chicks may become quarrelsome, if fed on raw meat. Again, cooking makes meat more nutritious. When raw it is rather harsh and crude compared with the more natural diet of worms and grubs, which are for the most part easily digested. The fumes of sulphur will destroy any vermin that may be lurking in the feathers of the under part of the fowl. To do this properly, pay a visit to the hen in the night and slightly disturb her, when by natural instinct she will bristle up her feathers all over her body. This, then, is the best chance for using the sulphur.—[Poultry World.

Frost and Fertility.

Persons who have not studied the subject carefully do not understand the part which frosts plays in disintegrating and mellowing the soil and in setting free the elements of plant food. Nevertheless, it is the chief means by which the fertility of soils in northern climate is held from soon becoming barren. The lack of frost is the chief reason why a soil continually cropped so soon becomes infertile in a southern climate. It is the hard freezing and subsequent thawing of the soil, especially in fall-plowed lands, that render it in the spring so soft and friable. Hence the reason, well known to thinking farmers, why a hard winter, or a succession of them, gives other seasons of great fertility. Yet how many farmers are there who fail to take advantage of this natural law, to get the greatest advantage from it by fall plowing, leaving the surface rough to the action of frost. How many farmers reap the full benefit of this unlocking of the elements of fertility? Not those certainly who plow loams and clay when so wet that they will not disintegrate when cleaving from the plowshare.

Every clod or lump in a field detracts from its fertility in proportion to its size. An analysis of a lump and of surrounding mellow soil may show identically the same. In the case of lumps, however, they are no better than stones. Roots cannot penetrate them; the fertility continued is locked up. The tendency of all cultivation, or rather of soil long cultivated, is to become compact such soils to such a degree as to render them almost impermeable to the water or rains. Hence many soils become pasty and run together. Hence again, the value of underdraining as a corrective. Why? The frost enters such soil more deeply, and it remains open and porous down to the line of the tile.

When not filled with water the pores of the soil are filled with air, and this air is always giving up moisture to dry soil. Thus two important ends are reached; such soils are moister during droughts and they are drier in wet spells. Thus just the proper conditions are secured for the growth of crops, through the vapor of water in the soil, for root-fibers do not take up actual water but water in the state of vapor—the state in which it is found in moist soils.—[Chicago Tribune.

HOUSEHOLD HELPS.

Moths will not eat through paper.

Laundry starch makes the best paste for scrap books, because age does not turn it yellow.

Milk, if put in an earthen jar, or even in a tin can, will keep sweet for a long time if well wrapped in a wet cloth.

If the wall above the stove has been smoked by the stove, cover the black patches with gum shellac, and they will not strike through either paint or kalsomine.

Salt will curdle milk, therefore in preparing milk toast, sauces, scrambled egg or anything of which milk is the foundation, do not add the salt till the pan has left the fire.

In cleaning paint, spots which will not yield to rubbing, or to soap even—the spots which look like small gashes cut through the paint—may be removed by rubbing lightly with a damp cloth dipped in soda.

A good polish for tortoise shell is made of rouge powder, which rubbed on with a soft rag and rubbed thoroughly, will serve to give an excellent polish. The shell should be rubbed with the hand afterward.

Dangers From Which Engineers Save the Public and Themselves.

The Railway Review.

One who is accustomed to railway traveling can scarcely realize how much he is dependent for safety upon the engineer. Added to the responsibility of their station, engineers are also in constant danger of accidents caused by the tricks of jealous rivals.

This rivalry, it is said, sometimes prompts to the doing of utterly mean tricks. A Nickle Plate engineer after his very first trip was laid off because he had "cut out" all the bearings of his engine. He was re-instated, however, after he proved that some rival had filled his oiling can with emery. Another new engineer was suspended for burning out the flues of his boiler. Through grief at the loss of his position he died, and then a conscience-stricken rival confessed that he had put oil in the tank so that it foamed and showed water at the top guage, when in reality there was scarcely a quart in the boiler.

These intense jealousies, together with the terrible anxiety incident to their work, has a terribly straining effect on the nerves, and statistics tell us that, though Locomotive Engineers may look strong and vigorous, they are not all a hearty class. Ex-Chief Engineer A. S. Hampton, Indianapolis, Ind., (Div. 143) was one of those apparently hearty men, but he says: "The anxiety, strain and jolting came near finishing me." His sufferings localized in catarrh of the bladder, but he used Warner's safe cure faithfully for twenty weeks and now exclaims, "I am a well man." T. S. Ingraham, of Cleveland Ohio, assistant Chief engineer, and other prominent members are also emphatic in its praise.

The Locomotive Engineers' Brotherhood has 17,000 members and 240 divisions. Its headquarters is in Cleveland, Ohio, where Chief Engineer Arthur for twenty years has exercised almost dictatorial sway. It was organized in August, 1863, by the employees of the Michigan Central. It has given nearly two million dollars to the widows and orphans of deceased members.

FACTS FOR FARMERS.

September is conceded to be the best month for making butter.

Wet hay put in a stack and mow to equalize with the dry may be called the wisdom of fools. It is a bad sort of ensilage while yet wet, and dry is worth just so much manure.

It is said that, while pea meal is a great butter-producing food, it is very dangerous to feed it in large quantities. It is much worse even than finely ground corn meal for forming into balls in the stomach, repelling the gastric juice, and thus creating inflamation of the stomach.

It will yet come to be regarded as the test of usefulness in a cow the milk she will give on grass alone, quantity and quality considered. This established, every person can decide how far the animal may be pushed with grain food without injury to her continued usefulness.

A new live stock industry is suggested by a noted "fish culturist,', in the idea that if farmers would only raise frogs they might clear their farms of insects and at the same time furnish frogs' legs as a gastronomic diet. Frogs might be worthy the attention of "marsh farmers."

"A horse that has been grazed from a colt until maturity, say until 5 years of age, will never carry his head high and carry it gracefully. The top muscles of his neck have been elongated." What a pity the idea of horse grace can not be made to conform to capabilities of the overcheck.

Soot is one of the most valuable of fertilizers, and should be carefully saved. That from coal is superior to that from wood. It is rich in nitrogen, and benefits all crops to which it may be applied, as well as being an excellent remedy against the attacks of many kinds of insects.

Hog vs. Man.

To know the American you must see all sides of him. On a train between Jersey City and Paterson, a day or two ago, a poorly dressed woman, carrying a baby in her arms, walked through two coaches and was unable to find a seat. The railroad Hog was there. In a dozen cases he had a whole seat to himself and he meant to keep it. The woman finally found refuge in the smoking car, and by and by the Hog went forward to enjoy a Havana and found her crying.

"What's the matter?"

"Baby is very ill, sir."

"And where are you going?"

"To my sister's. My husband is dead, and I have no money now."

"Leave you any money?"

"Not a dollar, sir."

"Umph! Sorry for you. Let me hand you this.

The Hog has been robbed of his bristles. Woman's tears have melted his selfishness. He returned to his car, gathered the other Hogs about him, and said:

"Come down! Poor widow—sick baby—no home. Come down!"

The Hogs went down for their wallets, and in ten minutes the sum of $40 was put into the widow's hand, and the boss Hog observed:

"There—there—it's all right—not a word! Now come back here!"

And as she followed him into the coach a dozen hogs rose up and insisted that she take their seats, and all gathered round her to voice the sentiment:

"Poor woman! Poor baby! Isn't there something we can do for you?"

The railroad Hog can't be crowded, but he can be moved.—[New York Sun.

EASY TO SEE THROUGH.

How can a watch—no matter how costly—be expected to go when the mainspring won't operate? How can anyone be well when his stomach is out of order? Of course you say, "He cannot." Yet thousands of people drag along miserably in that condition; not sick abed, but not able to work with comfort and energy. How foolish, when a bottle or two of Parker's Tonic would set them all right. Try it, and get back your health and spirits. 21w3

Buckshot Figures.

At one of the towns in Mississippi where we stayed over Sunday a couple of strangers got into a dispute about the age of the earth. They were sons of planters, and neither of them over 22 years of age. The dispute started in a good-natured way, but ended in one of them springing up, pulling out a bowie-knife, and threatening to carve the other up if his word was disputed again. The other was defenseless, and wisely held his peace. The man with the knife sat down, and conversation turned to other channels. By and by the defenseless man got up and lounged away, and next we saw of him, half an hour later, he was resting the muzzle of a double-barrelled shot-gun against one of the porch pillars of the hotel, and had us all covered. The hammers were up, his fingers on the triggers, and his eyes blazed like a tiger as he said to the man with the knife:

"Jim, it's my turn now!"

"Yes"

"I've got you covered!"

"I see."

"I said the earth was a million years old, you stuck to 6,000 years. Jim, come up to my figures or I'll blow the top of your head over that fence."

"Say!" replied the other as he crossed his legs in the coolest manner, "I'll tell you what I'm willing to do. As both of us might be wrong, I'll leave it to the crowd."

"Well, that's fair. What's your figures, gents?"

We consulted together, menaced all the time by two charges of buck-shot, and the Colonel was authorized to call out:

"We reckon on about 700,000 years, stranger, but shouldn't be surprised if it went up to a million."

"Nor I, either!" said the man as he lowered the gun and leaned on the barrell. "I don't say as I fit in the war, or that I was born up Fighting Creek, but when it comes down to the age of the earth, I'm to home and the latch-string is out! Come and see me!"—[Detroit Free Press.

Eleanor Kirk comes out in an eloquent article defending babies and young children from promiscuous kissing by all sorts of people. She is right. It's easy enough to check this promiscuous kissing of girl babies if you go at it the right way.—[Brooklyn Eagle.

FIGURES WON'T LIE.

The figures showing the enormous yearly sales of Kidney-Wort, demonstrate its value as a medicine beyond dispute. It is a purely vegetable compound of certain roots, leaves and berries known to have special value in Kidney troubles. Combined with these are remedies acting directly on the Liver and Bowels. It is because of this combined action that Kidney-Wort has proved such an unequalled remedy in all diseases of these organs.

IMPROVED BUTTER COLOR

A NEW DISCOVERY.

For several years we have furnished the Dairymen of America with an excellent artificial color for butter; so meritorious that it met with great success everywhere receiving the highest and only prizes at both International Dairy Fairs.

But by patient and scientific chemical research we have improved in several points, and now offer this new color as the best in the world.

It Will Not Color the Buttermilk. It Will Not Turn Rancid. It is the Strongest, Brightest and Cheapest Color Made,

And, while prepared in oil, is so compounded that it is impossible for it to become rancid.

BEWARE of all imitations, and of all other oil colors, for they are liable to become rancid and spoil the butter.

If you cannot get the "improved" write us to know where and how to get it without extra expense. (46)

You Kissed Me.

You kissed me! My head
Dropped low on your breast
With a feeling of shelter
And infinite rest,
While the holy emotions
My tongue dared not speak
Flashed up in a flame
From my heart to my cheek.
Your arms held me fast;
Oh! your arms were so bold;
Heart beat against heart
In their passionate fold.
Your glances seemed drawing
My soul through my eyes
As the sun draws the mist
From the sea to the skies.
Your lips clung to mine
Till I prayed in my bliss
They might never unclasp
From the rapturous kiss.

You kissed me! My heart,
And my breath, and my will
In delirious joy
For a moment stood still.
Life had for me then
No temptations, no charms,
No visions of happiness
Outside of your arms.
And were I this instant
An angel possessed
Of the peace and the joy
That are given the blest,
I would fling my white robes
Unrepiningly down,
I would tear from my forehead
Its beautiful crown
To nestle once more
In that haven of rest—
Your lips upon mine,
My head on your breast.

You kissed me! My soul
In a bliss so divine,
Reeled and swooned like a drunken man
Foolish with wine.
And I thought 't were delicious
To die there, if death
Would but come, while my lips
Were yet moist with your breath,
If I might grow cold
While your arms clasped me round
In their passionate fold.
And these are the questions
I asked day and night:
Must lips taste no more
Such exquisite delight?
Would you care if your breast
Were my shelter as then,
And if you were here
Would you kiss me again?

ONLY A PASSING CLOUD.

"Oh, if I had only known—only dreamed of this before I made Aline my wife! The horror of it will kill me, or—worse," with a shudder.

Edward Grayling was standing then in the awful presence of death. His father lay dead before him.

Before he died Arthur Grayling had told his son something that blanched his handsome face with horror and left him, strong man as he was, trembling where he stood.

Only one month before Everard had made Aline Devereaux his wife; to-day the thought made him tremble, and heavy beads of perspiration oozed out on his forehead.

"I wil never tell her," he cried; "my dainty love, I will bear it alone—if I can."

So he brought his wife, the fair woman he worshipped, to the home of his fathers, now his home, and surrounded her with wealth and luxury such as she had never dreamed of.

She was very fair, this chosen wife of his, with radiant eyes of deepest brown, and curling chestnut hair, a fair, clear, rose-tinted complexion, and features almost classical.

And with all her tender, passionate young heart she loved her handsome husband.

Perhaps it was this very love that opened her eyes so soon to the change in Everard.

He had lost all his gay debonair manner. It had given place to a strange, nervous restlessness, and his handsome face had grown almost haggard, while he acted like a man always brooding over some secret trouble.

One evening she wandered down by a little sequestered glade and sat down to read.

Suddenly the book fell from her hand. A voice she knew—her husband's voice—fell on her ears, and the low, liquid voice of a woman.

"You will meet me here, then, to-morrow evening, and place a thousand pounds in my hand," she heard the woman say, "as the price of my silence?"

Then her husband's voice, strangely hoarse and strained, fell clear and distinct:

"The price of her silence! Yes. For the sake of the woman who bears my name. Oh, Heaven, the fatal truth would kill her."

"What?" The fear that there might be a danger of her losing wealth and position?"

"There is no danger of that. My father proved to me the illegality of the marriage. Woman, you had a husband living at the time of that marriage."

"Not that there is the slightest chance of it; but, supposing he, my husband, had been dead and I could prove it, through my second marriage, I, not your bright-eyed Aline, would be mistress of all this wealth!"

"I suppose so."

"Not likely I could do so; therefore I will take the price of my silence and go.'

Pallid as death Aline stood. She would have gone forward, but her strength failed, even her tongue seemed paralyzed, and as her husband and the woman parted, without the slightest cry she sank white and senseless on the ground.

How long she had lain unconscious Aline could never tell, but when she opened her eyes her husband was bending over her.

She shrank back with a low cry, for she realized he must have found her and brought her in, for she was lying on the sofa in her own room.

As the low cry left her lips, Everard's face paled, but as she shrank back and closed her eyes, it grew perfectly livid.

He looked at her a moment; then, his voice hoarse and broken, he spoke:

"Only look at me a moment, Aline. Let me see, did I read your eyes aright?"

The long, dark eyelashes were raised. The agony and horror combined in that glance almost made his heart stand still.

[illegible] you know—Aline, my wife—you know my terrible secret?"

"Yes," she answered calmly, but with the calmness of despair; "I know all, and I pray God that after to-day I may never look on your face again!"

A groan came from his lips.

"Aline! Aline, you do not mean that? Listen to me. Let me tell you——"

"No, no! Do not touch me! Ah, merciful Heaven, why did not death come first?"

Her husband stood looking at her a moment.

"It is more bitter, then, than death?" he asked.

She only looked at him in silence, but he met her glance calmly now.

"Aline, do you mean—did you mean your words when you said you prayed never to look on my face again? Must it part us?"

A shudder swept over her.

"Heavens, how can you ask me? Leave me if you have mercy."

Next morning a note was placed in Aline's hand. It ran:

"You will keep the secret, if only for your own sake as well as mine. Aline, if your love is the love a woman gives, then, God willing, I will live without it. You may be right—God only knows. I sail to-morrow in the City of Calais for America. I will fulfill your wishes. You will never look upon my face again.

Your husband.
EVERARD GRAYLING.

Never look on his face again! Ah! never.

One week later she held a paper in her hand, looking for news of the City of Calais.

God help her she got it!

"Lost at sea by fire. All on board perished."

A terrible cry rang from her lips.

"My love, my love! Oh, this is more than I can bear?" she cried in the first anguish of her despair.

And after that her own feet strayed strangely near to the borders of the shadowy land. Perhaps it was the little waxen face that nestled to her breast that brought her back to earth; but after weeks of weary, hopeless watching by those who loved her, she came back to life—came back to realize that she had something still to live for in the baby boy, who had come while she tossed in delirium, calling on the husband she had sent from her.

She was getting better, growing stronger day by day, till at last they knew she would live.

One day, sitting up in bed, she heard a sound as of the panels moving.

She glanced toward the place, and a cry left her lips. A man, dressed in a smoking gown, was standing in the room, looking at her with strangely gleaming eyes.

What startled her most was a certain undefinable likeness he bore to her husband.

He raised his hand with tragic gesture, while his eyes rested on her terrified face.

"They call me mad, fair lady," he said; "but I will come again and prove to you that I am 'monarch of all I survey.' Madame, I am Alexander Selkirk. Au revoir."

A wild cry rang from Aline's lips, and in reply to it, an old woman, who had been in the service of the Graylings for years, entered the room.

She stared a moment at the intruder.

"How did he get in here?" she cried. "How did he escape? Pure carelessness on his keeper's part. Do not be afraid. He is not often dangerous."

A few minutes later a man took the lunatic away. Aline recognized him as a man she had often seen talking with her husband.

Aline leaped from the bed and grasped the old woman's arm,

"Who is he? He bears a resemblance to my husband. Who is he? What is he?"

The old woman looked at her.

"Do you mean," she said, with the privilege of an old servant, "you don't know or suspect who he is? Madame, he is Master Everard's brother, and a madman as well.

"Oh, heavenly Father!" Aline cried.

The old woman went close to her.

"You will pardon me, madame, but I was Master Everard's nurse, and loved him as my own. I came here when Master Frank—the one that was here just now—was three years old, and Master Everard just born, and was it not this knowledge that parted you and Everard? I understood you overheard him talking to the woman who claimed to be Master Frank's wife, for he was not always insane. I understood you learned the secret then, and Master Everard did not——"

She stopped, for Aline's agonized eyes were on her face, her weak hands outstretched.

"No, no! I thought it was he—Everard, my husband—who had married her. Oh, why did he not tell me? Why not trust me, my love, my love!"

The City of Calais had sailed and had been burned, but all on board had not perished, for one man at least, who was saved, stood on the deck of a homeward-bound vessel.

"I will be as dead, however," he said. The man was Everard Grayling.

But fate had brought him home for a purpose. A purpose soon fulfilled, for that day week he stood at the bedside of a dying woman.

She had sent for him. She had been rescued as well, but her days were numbered.

On her death-bed she told him a strange story—a story, however, that some time before would have made his heart leap with joy.

"Master Everard, you will not be annoyed if I tell you. From what she overheard she thought it was you who had gone through the illegal marriage with that woman."

Five minutes later Aline knew that her husband lived; ten minutes later he stood before her.

Everything was forgotten when she sprang toward him, at least by her, but he put her gravely yet gently aside.

"Aline," he said, "tell me what made you shrink from me then and pray that you may never look on my face again. Was it because insanity ran in my blood?"

"Why did you not tell me that Everard? and together we would have borne the knowledge better; but—oh, my love, I thought ——"

"No differance what you thought, all is clear to you now; and, Aline, Frank is only my half-brother; it was in his mother's family the fatal madness ran."

He told her all he knew.

"Thank God!" was all she said, but he saw her tender eyes turn with mother-love to their baby-boy, and he echoed the words, as he folded her close in his arms and kissed her sweet red lips. "To part in this life never again, beloved," he said, "till death claims one of us as his own."

"I was your father's wife once—at least he believed me such, but I never was in reality, for I was not free when I wedded him. When he learned this I fled from his home, but I left my boy behind me—little Frank. He was very kind to my boy—his own son he was—but Frank lost his reason. My poor boy! It was hereditary. My father and brother died in a madhouse."

A great light came into Everard's eyes.

"You—you are Frank's mother. It was through you he inherited insanity."

The woman looked at him.

"Do you mean your father let even you believe that Frank was your mother's child?"

"I know nothing of his existence till my father lay dying. He had almost passed speach when I reached him. A few disjointed words. They were: 'You have a brother—he—he is insane. It—hereditary. He is not the—first. You—you—be kind to him. Your—brother—my—my——'"

"That is as near as I can come to what he said."

The woman heard him not. Her soul had passed to its God.

The first thought that came to Everard Grayling was that he would go back to Aline—to the wife he loved so passionately. Then the memory of her scornful words, her gesture of abhorrence.

"When even that could make her scorn me she had little love for me," he said.

But like Enoch Arden, "a longing to look once more upon her face" came upon him, and like Enoch Arden, "he looked unseen upon her."

She sat in a low chair, worn and weary; her babe lay in a silk-covered bassinet beside her. His heart gave a great throb.

For a moment a great temptation came upon him to go to her and tell her the barrier between them was gone, but memory repeated her bitter words:

"I pray I may never look on your face again!"

She would not even listen while he told her he had not known the fatal truth, till she was already his wife.

He turned away, and came face to face with his old nurse.

She uttered a cry and turned to fly, bu laid his hand on her.

"I am no spirit, nurse," he said, "but Everard Grayling in flesh and blood."

Amid smiles and tears she told him all—the birth of his boy, and how near Aline had wandered to the shadowy land. Then she told him of Frank's escape, and of Aline's terror and amazement.

Master Everard, your wife knew nothing of the insanity of your brother. What came between you, you yourself must tell," she said.

"Alas, that cannot be!" he cried.

A Strange Presentment.

Mr. Merriboy stepped into Cheesecake's grocery the other morning in a great flow of spirits. He thought he saw Cheesecake stooping down behind the counter, so he took up a confish, reached over and hit the stooping figure a most resounding blow across the back, shouting, "Rise up, Sir Cheesecake," and with a shriek of fright a nice, good, motherly old lady, who was back there tying her shoe, rose up. The horrified Merriboy dropped the codfish on the floor, when a hungry sneak of a dog started off with it and, rushing across the store after it, the joker knocked over a barrel of eggs and the dog got away with his fish. "By Jove," groaned the unhappy man, "I felt, as I turned in here, that I'd do something foolish before I got out." And staggering to the window he sat down on a square yard of fly paper and buried his face in his hands.—[Burdette.

THE PROPER THING.

Turbans are convenient hats for windy days.

Pendant or drop buttons fasten many bodices.

Children will wear a great deal of navy blue combined with scarlet.

Bands of fur will be the fashionable trimming later in the season.

Bonnets are trimmed with full bunchy bows shaped like a half rosette.

Tight fitting Norfolk jackets of homespun are worn with any costume.

The English walking jacket and newmarket coat are again in favor this fall.

Beads of all kinds are more used on bonnets and hats than at any previous season.

Corkscrew cloths are much used for ladies' tailor-made dresses and for outside coats.

Gay wool scarfs will be much used for bunched up bows on felt bonnets and round hats.

Waterproofs cloths will be much used to make plain, serviceable winter costumes.

Throat bows will be more fashionable than strings for bonnets during the coming season.

White French muslin aprons are worn by children to brighten up their dark dresses.

Rough cloths in white, red, navy blue or brown, are the novelty for small children's walking coats.

A novelty is a neat and warm little bonnet of quilted black velvet for winter sleighing and traveling.

The embroidered cloth crowns are so elegant that they are being used on the most dressy bonnets.

The English walking hat in suit colors is to be fashionable this fall. All trimming is massed high in front.

The peasant dress with full round skirt and short plain waist remains the simple fashion for little girls.

Some of the new basques are made without pleats below the waist line, fitting smoothly over the tournure.

The bonnet is the proper outdoor head gear for a married woman. Only young ladies and brides should wear hats.

New cloak, jacket, newmarket and ulster clasps, come in novel figure, flower, leaf and fancy forms, in metals and carved woods.

Some of the richest millinery stuffs are used by dressmakers to form the narrow waistcoats, the cuffs and high collars of various kinds of material.

The latest craze is to add to the other trimmings of a hat two very erect, tall plume-feathers, that stand up in the immediate front like pricked-up ears, or two gray goose quills set on end.

Dark cashmere dresses will be used for girls from two to seven years of age. For dressy wear these are made with half low neck and short sleeves, to be worn over a white muslin guimpe, which is in its turn placed over a warm flannel waist.

TWO NOTED MINSTRELS,

Who Have Won Fortunes and What They Say About Stage Life.

From Stage Whispers.

"Billy" Emerson has recently made a phenomenal success in Australia, and is rich.

Emerson was born at Belfast in 1846. He began his career with Joe Sweeney's minstrels in Washington in 1857. Later on he jumped into prominence in connection with Newcomb's minstrels with whom he visited Germany. He visited Australia in 1874, and on his return to America joined Haverly's minstrels in San Francisco at $500 a week and expenses. With this troupe he played before her majesty, the queen, the Prince of Wales, and royalty generally. After this trip he leased the Standard theatre, San Francisco, where for three years he did the largest business ever known to minstrelsy. In April last he went to Australia again, where he has "beaten the record."

"Billy" is a very handsome fellow, an excellent singer, dances gracefully, and is a true humorist.

"Yes, sir, I have traveled all over the world, have met all sorts of people, come in contact with all sorts of customs and had all sorts of experiences. One must have a constitution like a locomotive to stand it"

"Yes, I know I seem to bear it like a major and I do, but I tell you candidly that with the perpetual change of diet, water and climate, if I had not maintained my vigor with regular use of Warner's safe cure I should have gone under long ago."

George H. Primrose, whose name is known in every amusement circle in America, is even more emphatic, if possible, than "Billy" Emerson, in commendation of the same article to sporting and traveling men generally, among whom it is a great favorite.

Emerson has grown rich on the boards and so has Primrose, because they have not squandered the public's "favors."

How Lincoln Stopped Criticisms.

General Porter contributes an interesting paper on "Lincoln and Grant" to the Century for October, from which we quote the following characteristic anecdote: "Grant's successes brought with them the usual number of jealousies and rivalries. Political generals had their advocates in Washington to plead their cause, while Grant stood without friends at court. His detractors gathered at times a great deal of strength in their efforts to supplant him with a general of their own choosing, and Lincoln was beset by many a delegation who insisted that nothing would harmonize matters in the West but Grant's removal. This nagging continued even after his great triumph at Vicksburg.

"Lincoln always enjoyed telling the General, after the two had become personally intimate, how the cross-roads wiseacres had criticised his campaigns. One day, after dwelling for some time on this subject, he said to Grant: 'After Vicksburg I thought it was about time to shut down on this sort of thing. So one day, when a delegation had been to see me and had spent half an hour trying to show me the fatal mistake you had made in paroling Pemberton's army and insisting that the rebels would violate their paroles and in less than a month confront you again in the ranks and have to be whipped all over again, I thought I should get rid of them best by telling them a story about Sykes's dog. 'Have you ever heard about Sikes's yellow dog?' said I to the spokesman of the delegation. He said he hadn't. 'Well I must tell you about him,' said I. 'Sykes had a yellow dog he set great store by, but there were a lot of small boys around the village, and that's always a bad thing for dogs, you know.

These boys didn't share Sykes's views, and they were not disposed to let the dog have a fair show. Even Sykes had to admit that the dog was getting unpopular; in fact it was soon seen that a prejudice was growing up against that dog that threatened to wreck all his future prospects in life. The boys, after meditating how they they could get the best of him, finally mixed up a cartridge with a long fuse, put the cartridge in a piece of meat, dropped the meat in front of Sykes's door, and then perched themselves on a fence a good distance off with the end of the fuse in their hands. Then they whistled for the dog. when he came out he scented the bait, and bolted the meat, cartridge and all. The boys touched off the fuse with a cigar, and in about a second a report came from that dog that sounded like a small clap of thunder. Sykes came bouncing out of the house and yelled:

' 'What's up! Anything busted?'

" 'There was no reply except a snicker from the small boys roosting on the fence, but as Sykes looked up he saw the whole air filled with pieces of yellow dog. He picked up the biggest piece he could find, a portion of the back with a part of the tail still hanging to it, and after turning it around and looking it all over he said, 'Well, I guess he'll never be much account again—as a dog.' And I guess Pemberton's forces will never be much account again—as an army.'

"The delegation began looking around for their hats before I had quite got to the end of he story, and I was never bothered any more after that about superseding the commander of the Army of the Tennessee."

HIS LOSS WAS HER GAIN.

"Well, madam," said a fashionable physian to a wealthy lady patient, "if you don't like my prescriptions, perhaps you had better try Parker's Tonic, or some other quack stuff." "You don't mean it Doctor," she answered, "but your advice may be good for all that. Sometimes what you call "quack stuff" is the best and most scientific medicine, after all." She got a bottle of Parker's Tonic and it cured her of neuralgia arising from disordered stomach and nerves. She told her friends, and now they all keep a doctor at home in the form of Parker's Tonic. 31w6

A Great Victory
A Terrible Case of Scrofula Cured by
Hood's Sarsaparilla

"In the winter of [illegible] I was attacked with Scrofula in one of the most aggravating forms. At one time I had no less than thirteen large abscesses over and around my back and throat, continually emitting an offensive mass of bloody matter, disgusting to behold, and almost intolerable to endure. It is impossible to fully describe my sufferings, as the case was complicated with Chronic Catarrh. After three years of misery, having been treated by three physicians, I was worse than ever. Finally, on the recommendation of W. J. Huntley, druggist, of Lockport, I was induced to try Hood's Sarsaparilla. And now, after having taken [illegible] bottles, within the last [illegible] I am ready to [illegible] this statement [illegible] any one who doubts it." CHARLES A. ROBERTS, East Wilson, N. Y.

This statement is confirmed by W. J. Huntley, druggist, of Lockport, N. Y., who calls the cure a great victory for Hood's Sarsaparilla. Send for book giving statements of many cures.

[illegible]

The Rochester Democrat and Chronicle, one of the warmest Republican papers of the state and which vigorously opposed President Cleveland's election, last week produced a column editorial giving the President credit for his reform work. It starts off as follows: "The time has come, we think, when Republican journals should estimate President Cleveland candidly and fairly, when they should assume the judicial attitude, giving him credit for that which he had done well, and censure, if need be, for that which he has done ill. He is no longer the candidate of a political party, seeking the suffrages of the people, upon a singularly meager public service, and upon a singularly unfortunate private record. He is the President of the nation, the President of all the people, of Republicans, as well as of Democrats. As such, he is entitled to and should receive the considerate judgment of his countrymen." Further, he says: "In his behalf, it is to be noted that he entered upon the presidency with less knowledge of public men and governmental policies than any of his predecessors, with the exceptions of Harrison and Taylor. He was obliged to trust the good faith of others, at the beginning of his administration and was liable to deceptions which could not obtain as the administration progressed." He admits that the President "was warranted in recognizing Democrats South as well as North in the distribution of Federal offices"; that in his civil service reform course "he is to be credited with good intentions and with certain good works as well; so far as the mere letter of the Pendleton act is concerned, it is to be admitted that he has fairly enforced it. Some excellent appointments have also been made in accordance with the spirit of the reform."

This is the first Republican journal that has had the courage to acknowledge the good works and intentions of the man who has represented, not any one party, but the whole people, as our chief magistrate, for the past seven months. The Democrat is deserving of the highest commendation for speaking out its honest convictions and has set a worthy example for its Republican contemporaries.

THE DEAD CARDINAL.

The news of the death of Cardinal McCloskey which occurred in New York last Friday, cast a gloom of sorrow over all Catholics in America and brought forth the highest words of praise as to his personal purity and goodness from leading men of other denominations. During the past year the Cardinal's health has been rapidly failing and for several days last week he lay at the point of death. Cardinal John McClosky, the first and only American made "a prince of the church," was born in Brooklyn, in 1811. After being graduated from St. Mary's college, near Emmetsburg, Md., and the completion of his theological course, he went to Rome. He was ordained to the priesthood at the age of 24, and began his work among the poor and lowly. At 31 he became a college president and at the age of 34 he was consecrated bishop; at 54 he became an archbishop and at the age of 65 he was made a cardinal, although it was generally supposed the honor would be conferred upon Archbishop Gibbons of Baltimore. Cardinal McCloskey never [illegible] young he broke one of his ribs by accident and never recovered from the effects. The funeral will take place tomorow. Archbishop Gibbons will deliver the panegyric. It is believed that Archbishop Williams, of Boston, will succeed to the cardinalate.

The joint debate at Toledo Ohio, Thursday night between Gov. Hoadly and Judge Foraker, Democratic and Republican candidates, respectfully, for governor, was largely attended and very interesting. The prominent issues of both parties were thoroughly analyzed by each candidate. The position of the parties on the liquor question was defined. The time was divided so that Gov. Hoadly opened with one hour, Judge Foraker then occupied one hour and a half, and Hoadly closed with half an hour. The speakers were loudly cheered.

Fulton, Oct. 5, 1885.

Board met at call of the President.

Present—President [illegible], and Trustees Bradford, Chase, Gage, [illegible] and Hulett.

The following petition was presented:

Fulton, N. Y., Oct. 3, 1885.

To the Honorable the Board of the Village of Fulton, N. Y.

The petition of the undersigned respectfully represents that they are property owners and taxpayers of said village and interested in the milling and mercantile districts of the village. That we notice by recent action of your Honorable body, you changed the location of three nozzle Fire Hydrants originally located upon the Water Works system at or near the Hydraulic Canal on First street, to a point south of the Riverside Mills; that we consider that in view of the large amount of property at risk, and the hazardous nature thereof, in the milling district and property contiguous, it would be inexpedient to dispense with the Hydrant at the place as originally located; that we also deem it essential that a similar Hydrant should be placed in First street, north of the Oswego Canal, at or near the north-east corner of the coal shed, which Hydrant would be available for both the milling and mercantile districts.

We therefore respectfully ask that you rescind such recent action changing the location of such Hydrant as aforesaid, and pass a resolution requiring the Water Works Co. to extend their main to said point at or near said coal shed and place at said point a three nozzle extra Hydrant, as provided by the contract between said Water Works Co. and the village.

TRUSTEES' PROCEEDINGS.

Fulton, Oct. 7, 1885.

Board met pursuant to adjournment.

Present, full Board except Trustee Kendrick.

Minutes of meetings held September 23 and 24 and Oct. 5, last were read and approved.

Trustee Kendrick came in.

A petition from R. K. Harris' Sons and others for the extension of the water main and the location of a Fire Hydrant on First street at the Tannery Race, was presented.

Mr. C. W. Streeter Treas. of the Fire Dept., came before the Board and asked for an order on the Fire Fund for $250.

On motion of Mr. Johnson the same was granted.

Mr. Gage offered the following:

Resolved, That the action of this Board at the Special Meeting Sept. 24th, 1885, requesting the Fulton Water Works Co. to change location of Hydrant on First street, north of the canal, be rescinded and that the said Company be and they are hereby required to extend their Water Main from the Hydrant near Gilbert Bros.' Mill Southerly 280 feet, to a point near Pooler & Wilson's coal shed and place at the south end of such extension, a three nozzle Hydrant, also to extend their Water Main on Oneida street, 720 feet easterly from the east side of Seventh street, and place at the east end of such extension a two nozzle Hydrant (such extensions aggregating 1000 feet). Such extension of the Main on First street to be subject to the right to connect thereto the stand pipes in mills and manufactories, the same as the Mains laid out upon the map mentioned in the contract between said company and the village.

Said resolution was adopted as follows: Ayes Messrs Chase, Gage, Hulett, Johnson and Kendrick, Nays, none. Not voting—Mr. Bradford.

Mr. Gage offered the following:

Resolved, That the Fulton Water Works Co. be and they are hereby required to extend their Main on First street, from the present terminus at the Paper Mill, northerly 600 feet, and to place a two nozzle Hydrant at the end of such extension—such extended Main to be subject to the right to connect thereto the stand pipes in mills and manufactories the same as the Mains laid out upon the map mentioned in the contract between said company and the village.

And the following vote was taken thereon:—Ayes—Messrs. Chase, Gage and Kendrick. Noes—Mr. Johnson.

Not voting—Messrs. Bradford and Hulett. The President declared the resolution not adopted for the reason that four trustees did not vote for it.

Mr. A. Bristol presented to the Board a petition from Mary Beardsley and others, for permission to lay a R. R. track across First street, from Block 118 to Block 117.

On motion of Mr. Gage, the prayer of the petitioners was granted, subject to the restriction that no part of such R. R. track shall be placed north of the south line of Broadway, and that the location of such crossing and the manner of constructing the same, shall be under the direction of the Street committee of this Board.

Mr. Hulett offered the following which was adopted:

Resolved, That the N. Y. O. & W. Railway Co. be and they are hereby required to move that part of the branch track from their road within the limits of Broadway in this village, so that the same shall be wholly south of the south line of said Broadway, within 60 days after the service of a copy of this resolution.

The Clerk reported that the note given by the President on November 24, 1884, for $422.79 for Hose, came due Sept. 26th last. On motion of [illegible] an order on the treasurer therefor was granted.

The clerk also reported that the order granted to W. S. Nelson & Co. for $19.50 has been returned for the reason that the same was not for the full amount claimed.

The following bills were reported favorably by the Finance committee and on motion of Mr. Johnson the clerk instructed to draw orders on the treasurer therefor.

Mr. Bradford offered the following, which was adopted:

Be it ordained, That the several owners of the following described premises be and they hereby are required to make new sidewalks in front of and adjacent to the premises hereinafter specifically described; said parcels being owned or occupied by the several persons hereinafter named, to wit:

North side of Cayuga street, John O'Grady, Lot 6, Block 5 1; west side of Sixth street, W. M. Craine, Lot 6, Block 504; Chas. Potter, Lot 12, Block 504.

And be it further ordained, That the several sidewalks hereinbefore specified be made of sound two-inch hemlock plank, laid lengthwise, or one and a half inch plank laid crosswise on 3 by 4 stringers well secured with earth to make a firm foundation and securely nailed. That the same be laid five feet in width and that the outer lines be evenly laid.

The walk of said O'Grady to be in line with the walk of F. D. Wilson on the west, and the cross-walk on Seventh street, on the east, and upon a grade at the west end level with said Wilson's walk, and at the east end to be 18 inches higher than the cross-walk now is.

The walks of said Potter and Craine to be in line with other walks already laid upon the west side of said Sixth street. Said Potter's walk to be upon the same grade as his present walk, and said Craine's walk to be on an even grade from said Potter's line to the cross-walk. All of said walks to be made and laid within 30 days from the service of this ordinance.

On motion of Mr. Bradford the Board adjourned to October 21st inst., at 7½ o'clock p. m.

Arvin Rice, Clerk.

A Captain's Fortunate Discovery.

Capt. Coleman, schr. Weymouth, plying between Atlantic City and N. Y., had been troubled with a cough so that he was unable to sleep, and was induced to try Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption. It not only gave him instant relief, but allayed the extreme soreness in his breast. His children were similarly affected and a single dose had the same happy effect. Dr. King's New Discovery is now the standard remedy in the Coleman household and on board the schooner. Free Trial Bottles of this Standard Remedy at R. E. Phillips' Drug Store.

AT UTICA, Oct. 12.

No one anticipated an advance of ½c. in cheese to-day, and everybody seems to be surprised. One buyer was overheard to offer a wager to another of $25 that these prices would not be repeated this season, and that this would be the highest market of the fall. The offer was not taken. It is understood that a large proportion of the best stock was taken to-day for the home trade. There is a strong demand for September cheese from this class of buyers, and they are bound to have it whatever it may cost. We regard this as a hopeful sign for the future. If home consumption can be built up by being fed on our best cheese, the time may come when the cheese market, like that for butter, will be independent of foreign trade. For when our people want a certain class of goods they will pay more for them than foreigners will. It is possible that still more Septembers will be wanted for the same trade next week and if so, these prices will be maintained, in spite of the discouragement of shippers. Not all of this stock, however, was taken for home trade. One of the heaviest buyers of the day took goods to send abroad, some of which will go direct, without passing thro' other hands. The truth is, when we get right down to bottom facts, that everybody wants September cheese, and the competition for it is too strong to enable buyers to keep it down.

Transactions of the day are as follows: Eight lots, 800 boxes, at 9¾c.; 4 lots, 500 boxes, at 9⅞c.; 63 lots, 7,109 boxes, at 10c.; 3 lots, 300 boxes, at 10⅛c.; 18 lots, 1,741 boxes, at 10¼c.; 4 lots, 512 boxes, at 10⅜c.; 16 lots, 2,076 boxes, at 10½c.; and 1 lot, 100 boxes, at 10¾c. Sales 13,170 boxes; commissions, 1,012; total, 14,182 boxes. Ruling price 10c. This compares with 8,402 boxes, one year ago at 11½c. ruling; and with 8,543 two years ago at 11c. ruling.

Little Falls, Oct. 12.

Cheese.—Trade has been very active to-day and sales amount to about double those of a week ago. Prices are advanced fully one cent a pound, and are very firm at that, the ruling price being 10c.; it was a question, however, somewhat in dispute whether the ruling price was 9¾c. or 10c.; but latest reports fixed the figure at 10c. without question. Fine September cheese was snapped up quick, and factorymen did not have to chase around for buyers. It has been quite generally the opinion that to-day was a good time to sell, and yet there is a confident feeling that the price for fine stock will not recede. September 15 is about the average date that factories have now sold to. Transactions of to day are:

Lots.	Boxes.	Prices
1	40	9 cts
5	341	9⅜cts
49	[illegible]	9½cts
65	[illegible]	10 cts
4	547	10¼cts
1	100	10⅜cts
1	786	com.
126	9,418
Farm Dairy	1,016
Total	10,434

Farm Dairies.—There were 1,016 boxes farm cheese sold at 9@10½c.; two lots brought 10¼c., several 10¼c. and the bulk went at 10c.

Butter.—Thirty five packages of creamery butter sold at 20@21c., the bulk at 21c. Ninty-five farm dairy sold at 17@19c., the bulk at 18½c.

AT FULTON.

The cheese market has boomed again and the price is up to former years within one cent which is much better than has been expected. Twenty-four factories represented with 1,843 boxes of cheese which was readily sold at 10 to 10⅜ cents. Five prominent buyers on the market. The price one year ago was 11¼ cents; two years ago 10⅞.

A Curious Pension Case.

George Washington Weaver of Sandy Creek was arrested Friday by Deputy United States Marshall Wood of Oswego on complaint of Special Pension Examiner Samuel Woods of Syracuse, charged with impersonating a pensioner and receiving a pension not intended for him. The case is a curious one, as there are two men of exactly the same name in Sandy Creek, and both enlisted in company G, 24th New York volunteers. But No. 1, the arrested man, was in the cavalry, and No. 2 in the infantry. After a year and four months of service No. 2 was discharged on account of disability. No. 1 received a shell wound in the leg at Petersburg and after being in the hospital was discharged. In 1879 before the arrears act had expired, No. 2 applied for a pension and his application was received and numbered 282,943. In March, 1883, after the arrears act had expired, Weaver No. 1 applied for a pension and in due time his application was returned bearing No. 282,943, the same as that of Weaver No. 2, and June last, he received a certificate thro' which he obtained a pension of $1,099. The certificate according to Pension Examiner Woods' statement, contemplates a sergeant in company G, 24th New York volunteers (infantry,) while No. 1 who received the pension, was private in company G, 24th New York cavalry, and it was granted on account of heart disease and rheumatism contracted in the army. Special Examiner Woods, of Syracuse, has in his possession a letter belonging to Weaver No. 1, from C. B. Walker, then acting commissioner of pensions, dated June 12, 1884, in which he states the original pension claim No. 282,943, is confounded with the application of George W. Weaver No. 1, as it assigns company G, 24th New York cavalry as the company to which said original claim was assigned. The same number is on the claim of Weaver No. 1; the pension was undoubtedly meant for Weaver No. 2, but as the certificate does not describe either of them accurately enough, neither of the Weavers can legally claim it. Weaver No. 1 was visited by Pension Inspector Woods Friday, and when the facts in the case were made known to him he turned over all that was left of the pension, $730, and stated if the money was not his he did not want to keep it. The case has been adjourned to November. 10.—[Utica Herald.

WHEN I WAS SICK!

My room looked like a drug store, I had so many bottles in it. The more I dosed, the worse off I was. Finally, I paid my doctor and told him he needn't come any more. I was troubled with Chronic Rheumatism, and could'nt get out of bed alone. Six bottles of Sulphur Bitters cured me.—[Benj. Fitch, Adams House. Boston.

GENERAL NEWS.

There is prospect of serious trouble, if not bloodshed, in the Indian territory, over the enforcement of the order requiring the removal from the Cheyenne and Arapahoe reservations of all persons not entitled to reside there.

The Toronto Globe says that it is learned on pretty good authority that certain leading Orangemen in Toronto are sounding the rank and file of the order with a view of ascertaining whether Orangemen generally will not be content to put up with "imprisonment of Riel for life" instead of his execution.

Mr. and Mrs. Will R. Hayes, two of the richest people in Cleveland, O., have decided to separate. Four years ago she was an heiress, 17 years old, when she and Hayes, who was but 18, eloped. Two children have been born to them. The husband claimed that his wife loved society and admiration, and she charges him of having wearied of her.

A London dispatch says: Mr. Parnell, speaking in Kildea, Ireland, referred in terms of the highest praise to Archbishops Walsh and Croke. The former, he said, was one of the strongest supporters that Providence had given to Ireland, while Archbishop Croke's services were known to all. The stand they have taken proved the union of the priests and the people. In regard to boycotting, he said the practice was pursued independently of the Irish leaders and that they disfavored it

And the truth is that we propose to keep the lead in the Clothing and Dry Goods trade in this section.

We know that to satisfy the general public, strong inducements must be held out and we are prepared for it. We have placed our orders for most of our Staple Goods, before the recent advance in prices, so it enables us to offer our goods at prices lower than can now be bought at wholesale.

The Body of William Simpson Found in the Canal Last Saturday—Testimony at the Inquest.

Last Saturday morning about six o'clock, Ed. Harvey, who tends lock No. 9 in this village, found the body of a man between the side of the lock and the gate. A rope was fastened around the body and it was taken below the lock where it was left pending the action of the Coroner. Before his arrival the body was drawn out on the heel path, where it was viewed by a large number of people. The man was about 24 years of age, was fairly dressed, had on a blue flannel shirt over a cotton one. Upon the arrival of Coroner Marsh the following jury was impanelled: R. Bradshaw, foreman; H. McKiernan, G. D. Ball, R. P. Hall, Peter Stevenson, J. Ford Morris, and P. S. Fuller. In the presence of the jury the Coroner searched the body and found 85 cents in money, four handkerchiefs, and a few miscellaneous articles of no value. Nothing was found to identify the corpse. The inquest was postponed until 7 o'clock, and the body taken to Cole's undertaking rooms. During the day the remains were viewed by a number of people and were finally identified as William Simpson, a canal driver in the employ of Edward Osborne. Following is the testimony taken at the inquest in the evening:

Thos. Mosso, bartender for H. Kendall, being sworn, says: "I last saw deceased about 12 o clock Saturday night, October 3. He came in the saloon about half past eleven, ordered an oyster stew and ate it. I advised him to go home. I opened the door and he went out and started up Oneida street. At the head of the stairs stood H. Kendall, Thos. Poole, Will Curtiss, and I think a man by the name of Henry Keefe, who works in the paper mill. I did not think the man was drunk, but he had been drinking. He did not stagger. He drank nothing in that place."

E. T. Osborne of Fulton, captain of the canal boat Morgan VanBuren being sworn, says: "I tied up in Fulton Saturday, Oct. 3. I have seen the body of deceased to-day. I should say it was the body of William Simpson, a driver in my employ. I last saw him alive on Saturday evening. I left him by the Postoffice about half past seven. He got $3.00 from me. I think his Postoffice address is Buffalo. He came on the boat to work for me at that city on Sept. 5th."

Geo. L. Brown, of Fulton, a former steersman on the boat Morgan VanBuren, being sworn, says: "I have viewed the remains of deceased to-day and I identify them as those of William Simpson. I last saw him alive on Saturday forenoon Oct. 3, before he left the boat. I have seen him intoxicated once."

Edward Harvey, a lock tender of lock No. 9 in the Oswego canal, being sworn, says: "About six o'clock this morning I had to lock a coal boat through. I could not open the lower heel path gate clear open and I got a pike pole and took out a lot of eel grass and flood wood and tried it again, but still could not open it. I then felt around with the pole and finally hooked into something which upon being drawn to the surface proved to be the body of a man. I passed a rope around it and towed it below the lock, fastened it and notified the coroner."

Dr. D. Pardee, being sworn says: "I have examined the body of William Simpson to-day. I found no marks of violence upon it. I am very well satisfied that he came to his death by drowning. Think he had been in the water five or six days. There was mud in the hand as if it had been clutched. The skin of the hand would peel off if brought in contact with any hard substance."

This finished the testimony and the jury retired and in a few moments returned with a verdict that "deceased came to his death between the hours of 12 and 1 a. m., of Oct. 4, by accidental drowning in the Oswego canal at Fulton N. Y." The body was buried Sunday in the Potter's field. The man's mother is supposed to live in Albion, Orleans county, or vicinity.

Howorth's Hibernica Company.

"Standing room only" would be an appropriate legend to hang on the walls of Tremont Temple last evening. Not a solitary seat could be found by late comers, and even chairs had to be placed in the aisles. The announcement that Howorth's Double show would open, drew the crowd. From the time the curtain rolled up till the last strains were heard from the orchestra, the interest never waned for a moment, and the amusing situations were plentiful. Jerry and Mrs. Cohan, Bryan O'Lynn, Wm. Ashton, Tim Cohan, Harry Hall and Frank Duffy fairly brought down the house. Miss Annie Irish and little Maggy Murphy were also good. The scenery was very fine, and the dialogue bristling with fun. The run of the play for the week is now an assured success. —[Boston Journal, Oct. 1st, 1884.

This show will appear at Stephens Opera House to-night and again to morrow evening. Do not fail to see them. Admission 35 and 50 cts.

Water Works.

The Fulton Water Works company beg to submit to the public their table of rates, together with such regulations as has been adopted by the company. The office of the company is located on Oneida street, first door west of Dr. Bacon's office, where copies of the same and any information desired can be obtained. In order that patrons requiring the services of a plumber may be insured reliable work at a reasonable price, arrangements have been made to do plumbing in its various branches. Applications for same should be made at the Company's office. Parties who may prefer, are at liberty to employ any reputable plumber not in the employ of the company.

The Bee Hive's Opening.

Last Thursday, Friday and Saturday occurred the fall opening at the Bee Hive. The display made was one of unusual merit. Upon the left hand on entering was an elaborate display of ladies and gents handkerchiefs of every conceivable variety, collars and cuffs, corsets, kid and woolen gloves, belts and bags of all kinds, buttons in infinite variety, colored yack laces, ladies white underwear, collarettes and hosiery. Further down were shown raw silk curtains and draperies, white laces, napkins and towels, table linens and spreads, woolen blankets, etc. etc. The rear of the spacious store was completely covered with an endless variety of Smyrna and velvet Brussels rugs. The stock of carpets in Brussels and ingrain, is large and varied. A wonderful assortment of Paisley and woolen shawls were tastefully draped from the ceiling on the north side of the store, while upon forms on the floor were shown seal skin plush sacks, circulars, short jackets in nigger head beaver, and newmarkets. A special feature was the new combination newmarket and short jacket. In the center of the store on the south side near the ceiling were forms elegantly draped in silks and satins. These were dressed without cutting the cloth. On either side of these forms were an endless variety of silks and brocade velvets, black dress goods in whip cords, Jersey cords, satin berbers, armures, etc. Near the door a splendid line of Persian shawls, lace bed spreads, moss embroidered tricots, nigger head cloths for polnaise, etc. were shown. The windows were elegantly trimmed, a black, fur-trimmed, silk-lined circular was shown, and a fine display of silks, cashmeres, woolen goods, black surahs, etc., etc. The Bee Hive's display of brocade velvets, rich laces, silks, ribbons, gloves, satins, etc., as well as an elaborate line of dress and cloak trimmings, and a thousand and one articles for use or luxury, is this fall more complete than ever before. The store was thronged each day with sight seers, who were well repaid for their visit to the huge establishment of Bennett & Stewart.

Suicide in Hannibal.

Herbert J. Byrne, of Hannibal, committed suicide last Wednesday by hanging. His health has been rather poor for some time, and it is supposed that owing to this fact he became despondent. Mr. Byrne has for a number of years kept a tobacco and confectionery store and was honored and respected by all who knew him. He was 44 years of age. He left a wife and one son. He was a member of Co. K., 153 N. Y. Vols., and during his four year's services suffered much from exposure and privations. Through the efforts of friends he obtained a pension about two years ago. He was buried last Friday under the auspices of Hannibal Post, No 448, G. A. R., of which he was a member.

Mrs. Althouse Awarded Damages.

The slander case of Hannah Althouse vs Wallace W. Wells went to the jury yesterday afternoon. As court had adjourned when the jury found a verdict it was filed by consent of attorney's and read this morning. It was in favor of the plaintiff giving her $250 damages, which of course carries cost. S. N. Dada appeared for the plaintiff, Mead and Stranahan for the defendant. The defence moved for a new trial on the minutes and it will be argued.—[Oswego Times, Saturday.

Home Talent.

Our citizens, especially those who love music, are promised a treat in the shape of a grand benefit concert to be given in the Presbyterian church early the coming month. From the fact that the affair is under the management of a number of our most enterprising young people comprising some of the best talent in town, we have reason to believe that they will be liberally supported. The concert will be given for the benefit of Mr. Fred Kenyon, the blind musician.

Saturday's Fire.

Last Saturday morning about ten o'clock, fire was discovered in a house upon the flats owned by Mrs. Fish and occupied by Fred Miller. An alarm was sounded and the department was promptly on hand. The furniture and household goods were all saved. The house is a total loss.

A new time table is being arranged for the Syracuse, Phoenix & Oswego road.

The teacher's institute for this county will be held in Fulton some time next month.

The wedding of Mr. F. P. Suydam and Miss Grace Bliss, at Baldwinsville, last Thursday afternoon was a brilliant affair.

Go and enjoy a good hearty laugh at the opera house to-night. If you like the show tell your friends to go to-morrow evening.

H. & A. Rosenbloom tell our readers in the advertising columns this week, of the many wonderful bargains in the different departments of their stores.

One of the public drinking fountains is to be placed on the west side of First street, a little north of the Boston Bazaar. The other will be located on the corner of Broadway and First streets.

The new stores on Cayuga street being built by T. D. Lewis, are fast nearing completion. The fronts are to be of cherry with plate glass windows. When finished these stores will greatly add to the beauty of Cayuga street.

The coopers of Oswego have asked for an advance of two cents per barrel. Some of the employers complied with the demand while others did not; in the latter instance the men refused to return to work. The total number of coopers in the city is about sixty.

Several trees in different parts of the village have suffered more or less by the high wind of yesterday. A large shade tree on First street was blown entirely over. The roof of Summerville's livery was torn up by the wind, but was repaired before much damage was done.

A report is to the effect that a citizen living a few miles from Oswego is charged with gathering the dead bodies of diseased animals from the surrounding country and boiling their flesh, on which he has been fattening hogs and selling the fattened animals for food. The story seems hardly creditable. The board of health will investigate the matter.

The Methodist church is being thoroughly overhauled and repaired. New carpets will be put down in the basement and there is some talk of taking out the seats in the Sunday school rooms and replacing them with chairs. With the newly papered and painted rooms, the church will be in fine condition for the Northern New York Conference, which will be held here next spring.

A First-class Restaurant.

Henry Kendall, the proprietor of the restaurant on the corner of First and Oneida streets, has entirely remodeled the interior of his place, making it second to none in this section of the state. The dining-room has been divided by a partition, making a new dining-room with a separate entrance for ladies. The new dining-room will be elegantly fitted up with new chairs and tables, each of the latter being furnished with electric bells. With this new arrangement, coupled with Henry's well-known carefullness in catering to the wants of the public, the popularity of his already famous place will be largely increased. Oysters, the best in the market, are served in every style, and both the hungry and thirsty can be satisfied, in quality as well as price at Kendall's.

You will find the best bargains in men's wrappers and drawers at D. C. More & Co's.

The Onondaga gun club has accepted the challenge of the Oswego Falls club and the match will take place next Tuesday.

Quite a large blast was exploded in the tail race at the factories last Friday.

The wind yesterday loosened a part of the tin on the roof of mill No. 3.

Emeny's building is progressing finely. The cut stone alternating with the brick in the front makes a very handsome contrast.

Work was begun this morning at the corner of First street and Broadway, upon the water works.

The Granby Sunday School Union was held at the Congregational church last Sunday.

A change was made in the factory time on Monday. Employes do not commence until 7 a. m. and work Saturdays till 4:35 p. m.

The Syracuse Standard of last Monday in speaking of the affair, says: Douglass Thurston, of this city, was arrested in Elmira several days ago and taken to Fulton on a charge of larceny. A number of weeks ago Thurston went to Fulton and solicited subscribers to the Mercantile Collecting agency, whose headquarters are in this city, S. Madison Henry, of the Onondaga County Savings bank building, being the manager. It is alleged that Thurston got ten or twelve subscribers in Fulton, from whom he collected money, and is is one of those who has caused his arrest. Manager Henry, was seen at his home in Montgomery street last evening. He said that Thurston had been in his employ about four months, came well recommended, and was, all-in-all, a bright young man. Five or six weeks ago he returned from an out-of-town trip, said he was discouraged, and asked for a few days' vacation which was given. Nothing was heard from him for several weeks, when Mr. Henry received a letter, dated Philadelphia, notifying him that the writer, Thurston, has secured a position with another collecting agency, and was doing well and would not return. After Thurston's arrest Mr. Henry says he began to make inquiries and learned the condition of affairs stated. He declares that Thurston was his agent, and if anyone has suffered it is he, not the subscribers. He expresses himself as willing to live up to the printed agreement of the certificate of membership given out by Thurston and take chances of getting the money from Thurston. On the bottom of the certificates, Mr. Henry says, is printed an admonition to subscribers not to pay money to canvassers or collectors, but at the office. "I am going to fight this matter out in the court, too," said Mr. Henry, "and Harrison Hoyt will go to Fulton to-morrow to look after my legal rights." Thurston is about 20 years old, He has a mother living in Grape street, who has been ill for three months with typhoid fever and is now at the point of death.

Thurston was placed in jail Saturday morning and before night he had settled by paying the subscribers back their money. Mr. Thurston was in town on Monday and said to a representative of THE TIMES that he had letters of recommendation from several prominent business men, in which the writers expressed a willingness to patronize and encourage him should he visit Fulton again. He thinks that the papers have been rather hard on him, and that he was not entirely to blame for the way things had turned out. He returned to Syracuse Monday night.

School No. 2.

The following named pupils have not been absent since entering school this term, to the present date, (Oct. 9th):

Grace Lamson, Bertha Lawrence, Lydia Watson, Lillian Myers, Grace Osborne, Minnie Parsons, Laura Rice, Luna Rowlee, Edith Snell, Mattie Vant.

A. W. FARNHAM,
Principal.

Indicted by the Grand Jury.

Chas. Harris of this village, was before the grand jury yesterday. He was charged with petit larceny and burglary in the third degree. He pleaded guilty and was sentenced to two years in Auburn state prison.

Two indictments were found against Frank VanVaulkenburg of Fulton, charging him with petit larceny and burglary in the third degree and larceny in the second degree. He pleaded not guilty to both charges and the case was put over until the next sessions.

Change of Management.

Supt. Maertens, of the Oswego and Riverside Mills has gone to Providence, R. I., to assume charge of the company's mill in that city. The place made vacant in the Oswego Falls factory by his retiring will be filled by Mr. John Bacchus. Mr. Bacchus has had charge of several departments for some time and is eminently fitted to assume the responsibilities of his new position.

No Use for Another.

Fred Shepard has bought out a restaurant in Fulton and will carry on the business in that village.—[Adams Journal.

A TIMES reporter sent out this morning to verify the above item, found that last week two men were in town trying to buy out or start a saloon. It is probable that after learning the number already here, they concluded that Fulton did not need another and left town.

Sandy Creek, Oct. 12.—Daniel Dubois, an old and respected resident, died at the residence of his son, Harvey D. Dubois Sunday Oct. 4th, aged 91 years. Deceased was a soldier in the war of 1812, participated in the battle of Oswego and has ever since lived in this town. He was a farmer by occupation, and by economy and industry had accumulated considerable property. His wife died several years ago, since which time he has made his home with his son, Harvey. For the past year he has been blind, deaf and insane, and has required constant care, which he kindly received from his son and family. He was an honest upright man and was respected by all. The funeral was held from the son's residence, Tuesday Oct. 6th, the Rev. C. E. Miller of Mt. Pleasant church officiating.

A few days since a young and valuable team belonging to Phineas Bartlett, got out of the barn and run into a barb wire fence and were so badly cut and torn that but little hopes are entertained of their recovery. About two months ago a valuable horse belonging to John Ireland got badly wounded on this same fence, and it was thought for a long time could not recover, but is better now.

AGRICULTURAL DEPARTMENT.

FACTS FOR FARMERS.

Hornless breeds of cows are coming in favor.

For oats, we would recommend fall plowing, for the start one gets on spring work by the means.

To feed, field beets will yield more milk, but carrots will make the most butter in the winter time. This is because the beets are less rich as food; the milk thinner.

The number of eggs shipped from Europe to the United States each summer principally from Antwerp and Hamburg, is reported at 20,000,000. What is the matter with the American hen.

That close observer and cultivator J.J. Thomas, is of the opinion that all farm seeds should be covered to a depth equal to three times the diameter of the seed. Write this rule on the granary door.

No kind of stock should be allowed to eat young cherry shoots, however worthless they may be. The leaves and bark of the cherry contain a considerable amount of prussic acid, which is occasionally fatal to sheep and cows left to graze where they can get it.

In keeping a horse fat there is as much in the driving as in the feed. A horse well curried and rubbed with a woolen rag afterward is sure to make a sleek-coated horse, and when well groomed is we may say, half fed. A cross and nervous driver will fill the horse with fear and dread, and will rapidly run the animal down.

A contemporary says: "Oats make hens poor and often pack in their crops, and they die. They clog up the pipe leading from the crop to the gizzard, and when this is the case, the hen gets no nourishment. Another thing—the skins or hulls of the oats clog up the gizzard and prevent its action. When the crop is packed, it is perfectly safe to cut into it and remove the contents, and then sew it up."

Notes.

A well-known Danish expert in butter and cheese making says: "In my travels thoroughout America I have been surprised so few practical butter and cheese makers in your creameries and factories who take any interest in the literature of their trade or profession. Seldom, comparatively, have I found the work of authority ready at hand or the dairy journal on the desk. Why, in our country the creamerymen and the factorymen are eager for every thing in the line of news, reports of discussions, technical papers, books—anything bearing on the work of advanced butter and cheese-making. The managers of a creamery who did not take regulary and read carefully his dairy journal would be considered lacking in a very important particular."

Usually potaeoes are the best off if dug as soon as ripe; this is especially the case in "muggy" weather or hot weather between showers. They should be stored in a cool celler, without [illegible] and perhaps rot. To guard against rotting be careful about bruising, it being better to carry them down in baskets than to allow them to fall through a cellar window, as is often practiced later in the season. It is much cheaper to dig before grass and weeds grow between the rows. Potatoes are ready for digging as soon as the tops lie down. It is best to dig them early in the day and allow them to lie on the ground a few hours, when they should be taken to the barn and stored in a cool, dark, dry place. All diseased or injured potatoes should be removed from the lot.

Handling Apples.

It is now high time the winter apples were picked. As soon as ripe and the seeds are black, they are in the best condition for keeping, and no time should be lost in removing them from the trees and the danger of being blown off and injured by severe wind storms.

In picking and handling, their delicate structure should never be forgotten; no matter how small the bruise may be, every one detracts from their keeping qualities. No apple intended for anything but cider making or hog feeding should ever be clubbed or shaken from the trees, or when picked, thrown about or dropped into barrels, but in every operation every apple, intended for market or home use, should be handled as carefully as if an egg; and in sorting and barreling we don't believe it pays to put up for market anything but perfect apples; the bruised and imperfect ones had better go for drying, canning, etc. In the final settlement of all things, there is no doubt but the hogs will have a fearful account against many men for depriving them of their share of the apple crop. And so will the honest packers for the loss of price, by reason of having these worthless hog apples put into the market in competition with their good fruit.—[Rural New Yorker.

How to Get Strong Lungs.

One of Philadelphia's leading physicians, a specialist in diseases of the lungs, says that imperfect respiration is at the bottom of much trouble. In such a case he shows the patient how to swell out the whole chest full and round by a deep inspiration, elevating and throwing back the shoulders; and then, when he has gotten into his lungs the last atom of air possible, to hold it in tightly for a little time, and then to to let it off slowly, blowing out every atom of it he possibly can by forcible expiration, drawing the shoulders forward and pressing in the chest to the smallest possible compass, thus throwing out almost all of the residual air, and all this through the nose, with mouth tightly closed. "Let him take half a dozen or more such forced respirations a dozen times a day," says the doctor," and he will soon double his vital capacity and relieve himself of most of his chest trouble. Such forced respiration will compel every air cell possible to freely admit wholesome air into the little spaces and to expel it also, and some air cells that do not often perform their functions healthily will be compelled to [illegible]."

[illegible] back! That lame back is [illegible] kidney disease. Stop it at [illegible] Hunt's [Kidney and Liver]

[illegible]

There is the story of the [illegible] who died because he believed that he was being bled to death, while in reality his arms were only pricked, and a sound of trickling water made to imitate the noise of the blood flowing forth. In the same way it is recorded how Mr. Loutherbourg cured large numbers of patients by attacking the imagination. Among those who had visited him was a man who had been troubled with great pains and swellings, particularly about the loins, so that he could not walk across the room. On entering, Mr. Loutherbourg looked steadfastly at him and said: "I know your complaint; look at me." They continued looking at each other some minutes; then Mr. Loutherburg asked if he did not feel some warmth at his loins, whereupon the man replied that he did. "Then you will feel in a few minutes much greater warmth." After a short pause the man said, "I feel as if a porson were pouring boiling water upon me." Still looking in his face, Mr. Loutherbourg said: "How did you come here, Sir?" "In a coach." "Then go and discharge your coach and walk back to town." The coach was discharged and the patient walked to town, and next day he walked five hours about town without fatigue. Similarly, Sydney Smith relates how the banker-poet Rogers caught a bad cold simply from imagining a window to be open, but which all the time was shut. It was a dinner party, and the great sheet of plate glass had deceived Rogers, who was sitting in what he thought to be a dangerous draught. To quote a further case; Dr. Sigmond relates how a poor woman, having applied to a physician for a cure of an affection of the breast, he gave her a prescription, which he directed should be applied to the breast. She returned at the end of a few days to offer her grateful thanks for the cure, which he had effected; but on making inquiry as to the mode of action, he ascertained that his patient had very carefully tied the prescription round her neck. Faith cures of this kind are of constant occurrence, and we know how persons, when suffering from maladies connected with the brain or nervous system, have been restored to their abnormal state of health by simple faith. Thus startling effects have occasionally followed the swallowing of such make-belief remedies as pills composed of bread or sugar. This accounts, therefore, for the cures which were wrought in days gone by, even when medicine was in a backward state, and the most absurd prescriptions were often given to patients suffering from nervous diseases—[The Gentleman's Magazine.

Economy in a Family.

There is nothing, which goes so far towards placing young people beyond the reach of poverty as economy in the management of household affairs. It matters not whether a man furnishes little or much for his family, if there is a continual leakage in his kitchen or parlor, it runs away, he knows not how, and that demon Waste, cries "more!" like the horse-leech's daughter, until he that provides has no more to give. It is the husband's duty to bring into the house, and it is the duty of the wife to see that nothing goes wrongfully out of it. The husband's interest should be the wife's care, and her greatest ambition to further his welfare or happiness, together with that of her children! This should be her chief aim and the theatre of her exploit; the bosom of her family, where she may do as much toward making a fortune as he can in the counting-room, or the work-shop.

It is not the money earned that makes a man wealthy—it is what he saves from his earnings. Self-gratification in dress, or indulgence in appetite or more company than his purse can well entertain, are equally pernicious. The first adds vanity to extravagance, the second fastens a doctor's bill to a long butcher's account and the latter brings intemperance—the worst of all evils, in its train.

A Philadelphia newspaper argues that there is no sex in trade and that the attempt of Mrs. Julia Ward Howe to form a woman's congress for the exchange of the goods of women, and the bringing of the producer and consumer together, is futile. When women enter the world laborers, it says, it is folly to try to keep them together. Their work must stand upon its merits, and will find its market precisely as the products or the men have done. This newspaper adds: "The woman's department at the New Orleans exposition remained to the last a pitiable display of crazy quilts, embroidery, etc., while the really creditable industrial exhibits by women were placed, as they should have been, side by side with those of men under their proper departments."

Congressmen who Smoke.

Governor Curtin smokes six imported cigars a day, which cost him seventy-five cents.

Congressman Glascock, of California, is the cigarette fiend. He smokes three packages a day.

Senator Blackburn, of Kentucky, smokes the strongest kind of three-for-a-quarter cigars.

Congressman Haynes of New York, uses a meerschaum cigar-holder which he has owned for eighteen years.

Congressman Deuster, of Michigan, always changes his brands. He is fickle in his tastes. He smokes nothing but cigarettes.

Congressman Cassidy, of Nevada, always has a cigar in his mouth, and he smokes at least a dozen a day, which cost him at least 15 cents apiece.

Congressman Tom Bayne, Arnott and David Paige smoke the very finest brands of imported cigars, but they are abundantly able to stand the expense.

Leopold Morse, the millionaire Jew Congressman of Boston, smokes imported cigars and lots of them. His favorite attitude is with his hands in his pockets and one of these cigars in his mouth.

Tom Ochiltree never uses tobacco. William Walter Phelps and Judge Kelley do not smoke, and Perry Belmont neither smokes nor chews. Ben Lefever chews constantly. Reagan, of Texas, likes good fine-cut, and Speaker Carlisle is fond of chewing tobacco known as "peach blossom."—[New York Graphic.

Gen. Gordon.

Gen. John B. Gordon, ex-senator from Georgia, has been here this week tendering an invitation to the president to visit that state. Gen. Gordon was in command when the last charge was made by the confederate forces. He entered the army from civil life, being connected with a state military organization. From a lieutenancy he rose to a lieutenant-generalship. Just before leaving his home for the army he was married to one of the most prominent ladies in the state. She accompanied him throughout the war. The general was wounded seven or eight times. On one occasion a piece of a shell gashed his face. His eyes were closed in consequence of the swelling, and he could not see his wife. He recognized her footsteps, however, as she approached him immediately after he was wounded.

"Come and look at your Irish beauty,' he exclaimed to her. He carries the scar on his cheek that resulted from that wound.

The general was exceedingly popular in his state. After the close of the war he was elected to the United States senate. He resigned from that body about five years ago on account of his poverty, being unable to keep up the expenses which his position made it necessary for him to make. He was succeeded by Joe Brown, who still retains the seat. After resigning Gordon became interested in railroad matters. I am told that within the past two years he has made and lost by speculating in railroad stocks more than $1,000,000. At present he is said to be a comparatively poor man.—[Cor. Chicago News.

Sure Death to the Rats.

Rats are a great nuisance on most farms, however well the latter may be regulated, and unless the pests are continually warred against, they will cause much damage by their gnawing propensities and appetite, as well as by their filthy habits. We have a method of catching them which is new to us, and we believe quite original on the Rural Farm. It is wonderfully effective, and never fails to secure the rodent. We use the ordinary steel trap, setting it on a level spot at any convenient place near their runs or where they "most do congregate." When set so as to spring easily, we spread over it a piece of thinnish, white muslin, about two feet square, more or less, and over this scatter carelessly a few cookey, cake or cheese crumbs, but not too many. Having no fear of evil from a white cloth, in eating the crumbs they are sure to get into the trap, and the cloth does not in the least prevent the trap from holding them. Whenever the cloth becomes bloody or soiled, it should be changed for a fresh one, and for some reason they do not get "on to the racket," and the oldest and wisest are as easily caught as the young ones. We have caught several in succession in the same trap set in the same place, and within 15 minutes of each other. With us it is a great success; try it!—[Rural New Yorker.

In gathering wild flowers, autumn leaves, or picnicing in the woods, we are more or less exposed to danger from poisoning by ivy or other wild vines and shrubs. The poison is under certain circumstances readily absorbed by the blood, and painful swellings or eruptions are caused. Such affections Hoods Sarsaparilla readily cures, as it expels all impurities from the blood. Even in cases of poisoning by Paris green, Hood's Sarsaparilla has been remarkably successful. It should be kept constantly in the house for all blood disorders. Hood's Sarsaparilla is made by C. I. Hood & Co. Lowell, Mass., and is sold by all druggists. 100 Doses $1.
